It was cooler Saturday. What's more, it is expected to be even cooler today. The high should be only 104.

Smog Foes Face a Growing Enemy

Although the enemy grows stronger every year in awe-inspiring strides, the smog fighters of Los Angeles County have more than held their own-and still see eventual victory.

The enemy is any source of air pollution, but by far its major menace is the gasoline - fueled motor ve-

Eighty percent of the smog that still exists in the Los Angeles Basin is caused by gasoline-fueled vehicles, according to scientists studying the problem.

FOR 16 YEARS, the war on smog has been led by the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District, During those 16 years, the county has spent $35 million to combat an enemy who grows stronger every year because of continued industrial expansion and an almost unbelievable increase in motor vehicles.

The war has been on two major fronts: stationary sources of pollution, such as refineries and other industrial plants and incinerators, and motor vehicles.

CONTROL of the stationary sources has been the major success of the APCD, according to Smith Griswold, county air pollution control officer.

By enforcement of a rigid set of rules, recommended by the APCD and adopted by the Board of Supervisors; nearly 5,000 tons of pollutants which otherwise would be emitted every day into the atmosphere now are being trapped at their

"Without control of stationary sources, the quality of air in Los Angeles Basin would be intolerable on days of low inversion and weak winds," Griswold declared.

15 SHOPPING CENTERS IN TAX REHEARING

Court Orders 1959 Assessments Reconsidered

I. P.Y Los Angeles Bursay

An unprecedented Superior Court ruling has ordered Los Angeles County supervisors to rehear petitions from 15 shopping centers-three in the Long Beach area-to reduce 1959 assessments on their property by $4.5 million.

The local firms are Thriftimart Inc., for its shopping center at Beliflower Boulevard and South Street; John S and Helene H. Griffith, Lakewood Triangle, and John S. Griffith Properties, Santa Fe Springs Shopping Center.

In 1959, the then county assessor, John R. Quinn, levied assessments totaling $7.557,560 against the 15

The firms petitioned supervisors, sitting as a board of equalization, for reductions in the assessments. The firms said the assessments should have totaled only Supervisors rejected the petitions and the 15 firms paid, under protest, $413,429 in county taxes. They took the matter to court in August 1962, Superior Judge Joseph W. Vickers, after a year of litigation, ruled that there was "no substantial evidence" to support'the board of equalization's finding that Quinn market value of the shopping centers as that which prevailed throughout the county.

Judge Vickers said the board of equalization's denial of reductions in assessments was "arbitrary and capricious" and therefore void.

In ordering the rehearings, Judge Vickers said the assessor should answer all "revelant or material" questions, including (1) the method he used in arriving at the market value of the properties as of the first Monday in March 1959, (2) the market values of the properties, and (3) the ratio prevailing generally throughout the county, "in a specific and definite percentage figure," of assessed to fair market value.

Quinn, of course, is retired and will not appear to represent the assessor's office. By a quirk of fate, neither will his successor, Philip

In 1959, Watson was a tax consultant for the shopping-center group-although he did not file the petition for assessment review and did not appear before the board of equalization. In a letter to County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy, Watson said he will disqualify himself from the re-county's position" if he participated.

Watson said his office would rely upon the testimony of "competent civil service appraisal personnel of this office to present the record,"

He further commented that, inasmuch as the rehearings deal with assessments made two years before his election, he is "in no way involved." Watson was elected last November and took office last December.

Thriftimart Inc. was assessed at $185,290 for its property at Bellflower Boulevard and South Street and protested $130,210 of this.

John S. Griffith properties at Lakewood Triangle were assessed at $420,710, of which $210,730 was protested. At Santa Fe Springs Shopping Center, Griffith's holdings were assessed at $589,610, of which $410,200 was protested.

Mark G. Ancel, attorney for the shopping centers, asked that the rehearing be set as close as possible to Nov. 18. He said presentation of the plaintiffs' cases would take about seven days.

Among the other shopping centers involved are Whittier Downs Mall and Stonewood in Downey.

L.a.C. Says: Who Remembers?

Public opinion polls indicate that the older people are more conservative than the younger. This is no great change from past generations. The younger people live more for today while many of the older people live more in the past. The vigor and progressiveness of the young is essential to progress. But the experience of the older people, if objectively used, is a great safeguard against repeating old errors.

X

One of the experiences of about a third of our population was that of living through and remembering the 1929 crash and the Roosevelt New Deal administration from 1933 to start of World War H, A poll shows that 64 per cent of our present population does not remember these early New Deal days. Fiftysix per cent of them were not born at time of the 1929 crash. It should be of interest to newcomers to our population to consider some of these events and compare them with what is happening today.

There is great concern today over our unemployment of around 5 per cent of our work force. We are told we must carry on great public works projectsyouth camps and tax cuts with increased government spending to overcome this situation. But a glance at the unemployment figures from the start of the New Deal in 1933 to start of World War II in 1939—when we started making war material-is not much encouragement to those who would decrease the unemployment rate by government spending.

The New Deal immediately started vast public works programs. PWA, WPA, NRA and CCC, and dozens of other alphabetical agencies were put into effect. Large deficits-for those days-were incurred. Anyone who insisted that freedom of enterprise would more quickly bring about recovery was denounced as "an economic royalist." Well, here is the official record of unemployment from 1933 to 1940:

	Onemproy-		Onempioy-
Year	Mone Italo	Year	ment Rate
	24.9	1937	14.3
1934	21.7		19.0
1935	20.1		17.2
ĭ	t was only any ontroposi

It was only our entrance into the war that brought our unemployment to its lowest rate of 1.2 per cent. It held at that rate until the end of the war. Immediately after the war, even though we had shortages of about everything, it jumped to 3.9 per cent in 1946 at present insufficient natural ty of controlling smog from resource policies during his present 40-hour work week.

He noted the work week. tions it has remained at 5 per cent or more for the years since 1950.

Importance of these statistics is that they show all-out spending by government to promote full employment has never succeeded. There are good reasons to believe it delayed improvement. Business was harassed by bureaucrats, regulations and general loss of confidence in our economic system. The New Deal agencies discouraged business in its efforts. The idea was that raking leaves and other useless projects were the only way to assure jobs for the people.

We are now being told that we can reduce unemployment only by government projects— subsidizing farmers, public buildings for underdeveloped areas, and more controls over business, unions, and the general economy. We are told that tax cuts—with greater deficit spending-is the answer. Well, anyone who remembers those 1930 years has reason to question this philosophy. The figures given above are official unemployment statistics. They should convince anyone that large government spending just does not provide the answer. It could do so only by complete government control over wages, prices and profits-with government telling everyone where they must work for set pay and hours of work. Unless you want this, the above figures should be carefully considered.

The colorful Parade of Boats highlights the Fishermen's Fiesta today beginning at 11 a.m., in a weekend spectacle in San Pedro that saw the dedication of the yetunopened San Pedro-Terminal Island bridge Saturday morning,

From 11 a.m. through noon today, the Fort Mac-Arthur military band will play at dockside.

Dockside ceremonies at noon and the beginning of the colorful boat parade at 12:35 p.m. will highlight the afternoon.

FROM 1 P.M. through 4 p.m., national dance groups will entertain and street dancing will com-mence at 7:30 p.m., last-ing until midnight.

Five hundred spectators, many in shirt-sleeves and hiding beneath the makeshift shade of umbrellas, sweltered in 102-degree heat Saturday for dedication of the San Pedro-Terminal Island bridge, scheduled to open for traffic Nov. 15.

Conspicuously absent from the ceremony was Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who was elsewhere in California with President Kennedy's conservation

ALTHOUGH many of the state, national and local dignitaries indicated they had prepared lengthy speeches to mark the occasion, all cut their remarks short because of down on spectators sitting in specially constructed bleachers.

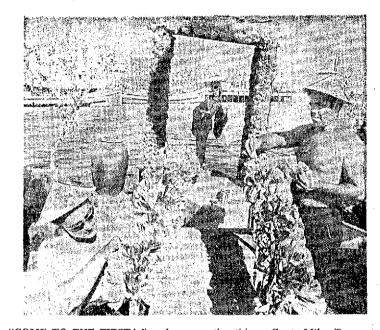

Under Secretary of the Navy Paul Fay, who had traveled from Washing-ton, D.C., for the event, displayed what appeared to be a multipage speech, but threw it aside with the comment, "Here goes five hours of blood, sweat and tears." He quipped, "I've heard of sunny California, but you people are overdoing it."

ALTHOUGH none of the spectators or dignitaries appeared overly uncomfortable, most of the men doffed their suit coats for the affair which was preceded earlier in the day by a parade through San Pedro.

Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, for whom the bridge was named, was introduced by California's Ex-Governor Goodwin Knight and received a standing ovation when he

A GIRL FOR CHARLIE?

He's Getting to That Age

(Editor's Note: As the young Prince of Wales joins thousands of other boys going back to school, Britons are suddenly bccoming aware that the heir to their throne is getting to "that age." Around the pubs they're beginning to wink and say, "Wonder if young Charlie has a girl ye?")

By ROBERT MUSEL LONDON (UPI)-Women have driven many a man to strong drink. Can the reverse be true of Princes Charles, heir to the British throne?

This summer the son of Queen Elizabeth had his first alcoholic drink in public-a cherry brandy at a Scottish pub.

Ever since then - although it may be merely coincidence—he has been showing interest in the pretty and well born young girls and teen-agers from whom he may someday choose his queen.

If he were, say, an American boy, the Prince probably would already be dating girls. But since he won't be 15 until Nov. 14 and the royal family has its own strict rules be only meets them at parties or with his 13-yearold sister, Princess Anne.

But the interest is definitely there and the cherry brandy incident has served to alert the British public what matchmakers everywhere had taken into accountthe Prince is growing up. Despite his comparative youth, the race to share his throne — distant though that day may be since his mother is a young 37---is already in its preliminary stages.

The Royal Houses of Europe would be foremost among those jockeying for position except that fate has dealt them the unkindest cut of all.

With a glut of unmarried daughters on their hands not one of the Princesses is in the right age group!

So unless Charles chooses from the daughters of German princelings he is apt to find his bride among the British aristocracy as grandfather King George VI did when be married Lady Elizabeth Rowes - Lyon, Queen Mother.

One of his favorites at

dietta Euston, 14-year-old daughter of the Earl of Euston, who was his "acknowledged" sweetheart a few years ago. As very young children sometimes do, he said he was going to marry "Etta" when he

They still meet at parties and will probably see more of each other when Charles graduates from Gordonstoun School in Scotland, He will take the examination this autumn which will help his parents decide his future training,

This will include either a period of service in the navy-which his father, the sailor Duke of Edinburgh would like-or with the crack Grenadier Guards in the army, Preceding this will be university training -- Dartmouth Naval College or even Oxford or Cambridge.

His cousin, Prince William of Gloucester, this term is starting a year at Stanford University in California, but Prince Charles is not apt to follow this royal precedent.

As heir to the throne he will have to pursue his studies in the nation he will someday rule. But, that will keep him closer to the blue-blooded British beauties whose parents cannuot help thinking of him as the most eligible young man in the world.

Through his sister and through mixed dancing classes Prince Charles has met quite a few girls.

Among them is Marilyn Wills, 14, daughter of Hon, Mrs. John Wills who is the Queen Mother's niece: Susan Babington-Smith, 13, daughter of a wealthy banker, as another friend and so is Caroline Hamilton, 13, granddaughter of the Dean of Windsor.

The Prince will meet more of the "right" type of girls next year when he joins the Junior Polo Club of the Garth Hunt Club. Its members range from 12 to 17 years old.

Charles may have liked the cherry brandy but if he has inherited any of the traits of his fun-loving ancestors, King Henry VIII and King Edward VII, he is bound to decide sonn (hat girls are more after her mother said she poured black pepper down her daughter's throat to punish her, police reported.

Dead on arrival at Grace Hospital was Kimberly Joyce Adkins, one of five children. The coroner will rule on the cause of death.

Held in connection with the death is the child's mother, Beverly, 28. Shortly before noon Kimberly took a bottle from a nine-month-old baby. To punish the older child, Mrs. Adkins told detectives, she screwed off the top of a plastic pepper shaker and said, "Hold back your head." Mrs. Adkins said she poured out the pepper and her daughter got white, her lips turned purple and she went limp. A neighbor summoned to the home called

WASHINGTON (AP) -What an incredible, what a splendid, what a contradictory country this is! How big, how crowded, how empty. how jumpy, how tranquil! These observations are made not as a poet waxing poetic, but as a stu-

that Los Angeles sprawls all over the lot. Geo-graphically, it's our largest city with 454.8 square miles. But unless you're aware of what has been going on in the southwest recently you could be fooled on the second and largest cities in area. They're Houston and Oklahoma City.

Although this is what the book shows, apparently even the statisticians can't keep up with the rapid changes. Oklahoma City reports it now has 631.48 square miles within its city limits.

New York, with by far the most population, is in fourth place, with 315.1 square miles. Incidentally, our older, established cities are no longer growing. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all lost population in the past 10 years. Hail to thee, blythe suburbs!

GETTING back to Oklahoma City, science has confirmed it's the nation's windlest city.

On the average, the winds swirl across those Oklahoma plains at 14 miles an hour. That's far ahead of much maligned Chicago with 10.1.

If it's a tan you crave, move to Phoenix: 86 per cent sunshine. If you're more the shady type, try Juneau, Alaska, where the sun shines only 30 per cent of the time. The winter wonderland capital is Buffalo, N. Y., with 106.8 inches of snow, or 106.7 more inches than falls on New Orleans.

Crazy for variety? Try Bismarck, N. D. Temperatures have been recorded there all the way from 109 degrees down to a minus 44. In San Juan, Puerto Rico, it has never been hotter than 96 or colder than 62.

In Colorado the mean altitude is 6,800 feet, and the lowest spot is still 3,350 feet high. The highest point in Delaware is 60 feet, at Ebright Road, wherever that may be,

IF CONVERSATION lags at a cocktail party, say brightly (and rightly): "Illinois leads the nation in the production of red clover seed."

Should this be met with startled stares, press your advantage with:

"Yes, it's true that Texas is tops in the production of sorghum grain, but don't forget that in sorghum forage you can't beat Kansas."

The United States has 51 persons for each square mile, compared with the 897 crammed into each square mile of the Netherlands. But Rhode Islanders, with 812 for each square mile, are almost as crowded as the Dutch.

Alaska is the least populated, with A of a person per square mile. At that, Alaska is twice as crowded as it was 10 years ago.

The District of Columbia, with scarcely any open spaces left, has 12,524 inhabitants per square mile. Many of these are lawyers.

SOUTH CAROLINA has 1,264 people for every lawyer. Here in Washington D. C., we have one lawyer for every 61 persons. This is a reminder that you can't run a government without sons were killed in traffic accidents in August than in any other recorded month, the National Safety Council reported Saturday.

The total was 4,270, or six percent higher than the 4,030 who died in August 1962, It was one percent above the count of 4,217 in December 1936, the former record high month

In the last 22 months there were 20 months that! showed increases from the corresponding months of the preceding year.

Through Aug. 31 the death foll amounted to 27,200 for 1963, five percent more than the previous eight-month high of 25,900 recorded last year

The council said this indicates a toll for all of 1936 or 43,000 as against 40,900 in 1962.

Along with the increase in deaths, the volume of travel rose in the eight months. Un der these two factors the death rate was 5.2 persons for every 100 million miles traveled. Last year at this time the rate was 5.1 persons, two percent lower.

British Labor Smells Sweet Victory Scent

(P)-Staggered by a slap from De Gaulie and a slip by John Profumo, the British Tory Party is believed on its way out of power, . Harold Wilson's Labor Party is mounting a final effort to drive Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservatives from Delegates are assembling here for Labor's 62nd annual conference, excited and confident that power is in their grasp after 12 years in the wilderness. The conference opens Monday.

The five-day parley is the main forum of contact between Britain's rank-and-file socialists and their leaders. They will range over policy, from the employment of foreign servant couples to nuclear strategy. Any decisions will guide—but not bind—a future Labor administration British governments are answerable only to the nation, through parliament.

LABORITES today make บ้า a great, modern political movement with a paid-up membership of more than 6 million. They are men and women, old and young, of all colors and creeds and kinds dedicated to the proposition of social equality in a cooperative, democratic, fairshares state. A tradition of non-conformism and radical ism unites them. Now when power stares them in the face and their country is in a jam Laborites are bubbling over with new ideas and plans and hopes to restore Britain's greatness.

Labor's radicalism never theless is tempered with realism in the divided world of Kennedy and Khrishchev and Mao Tze-tung, Like past labor governments, the leaders loyally respect the nation's alliances. It was a Labor foreign secretary, Ernest Bevin, who led a grateful Europe's response to the American Marshall Plan in the late 1940's. And it was Labor Prime Minister Clement (now Lord) Atlee who took Britain into the Atlantic Pact.

WHY ARE Labor's leaders sure, almost cockily sure, they're heading for victory?

Almost every byelection and opinion poll since 1961 has told a tale of spreading disenchantment with conservative rule. A pro-labor swing of only three per cent would be more than enough to sweep away the Tory margin of about 95 seats in the 630-member House of Commons. Some pollsters have estimated the pro-Labor swing has zoomed up to 16

The Conservative Government lately has been hit black and blue. Britain has been barred from joining Europe's Common Market by De Gaulle, The Commonwealth is divided. Successive espionage disclosures have shocked the nation. The sensational sex-security scandal surrounding ex-War Minister John Profumo, who shared the favors of Christine Keeler with a Russian diplomat, has tainted the whole regime. Foreign competitors are squeezing British traders out of some world markets.

LABOR'S internal quarrels are over the amount of sociialism in the party's official policies. If the senior medicine men water down their socialism they must expect to face howls from the left. Too strong a socialist mixture just won't be swallowed by the right. Thus the socialist flavor in Labor's program varies with the temperature of the times. And today Wilson and his lieutenants have concocted a brew acceptable to the right, left and center factions. at least while power is in prospect.

The laborites have always followed gradualist policies. In 1918 a program drafted mainly by Sidney Webb-"Labor and the New Social Order"-committed the party to socialism as a goal, but only by methods of parliamentary democracy. Successive manifestoes since then have stressed evolutionary growth, giving priority to reformist action rather than to any attack on the basic structure of British society. In 1945, when Atlee swept in, his administration carried out several important measutes of socialization, yet without overthrowing the system of private enterprise.

TT'S not easy to imagine what our people and building-laden area looked like when Long Beach was an infant of a town with a few hundred population and the surroundings were wide open spaces.

A word picture is available in a time-yellowed copy of a magazine, "The Cottage Hearth," published in Boston in 1889, which came to this desk through the Diamond jubilee activities.

Clara Spaulding Brown was the writer. She had visited Long Beach, arriving on July 17, 1889, and she described her visit to the town in detail for Boston readers.

HERE'S an excerpt:

"Leaving the train a few miles from San Pedro we seated ourselves in a funny little one-horse car, with tender attached for baggage, which was to convey us the three miles between the station and the beach on a wooden railway.

"Around us stretched alkali marsh lands, and a mile to the right lay the grand Beach area, will open Oct. 26. Pacific . . . Slowly the heavily laden car bumped and jolted over the rails crossing the San Gabriel River and several sloughs until a long grade was reached, up which we were requested to walk . . . Hoping that another season would witness an improvement in the manner of reaching Long Beach, but pitying the animal on which such a burden was placed, we complied with the suggestion."

 S^{0} she came in on the famed GOP (get out and push) wooden railway. She relates how a hotel was under construction at the edge of the beach, but was not ready yet, so she stayed in a tent by the beach.

Speaking of the site of present-day Long Beach, Mrs. Brown wrote of the "bareness of the mesa: Californians are so accustomed to the treeless, level aspect of a large portion of their country that they don't realize its lack of beauty. To an eastern eye, it is depress-

Is that still the case? A lot. has been done with water and planting, but there are still stretches of the Southland that hardly reflect tropical learned of the anti-liquor ordinance which prevailed in Long Beach in the early days and was the subject of much controversy. Of this she wrote in great praise.

"It is intended to create a watering-place devoid of the objectionable features which characterize so many resorts where the lines are less rigidly drawn. . .

"In time, no doubt, the embryo town will be like others, a place of modern improvements of fashion and worldly pleasure, but now its chief charm lies in the quiet communion with the sea and sky, the absence of sordid cares, which lift one's thoughts from the material to the infinite, and gird the soul anew for the inevitable conflict with a selfish, bustling world."

A most interesting report on the impressions of Long Beach, and what it did for the soul of a visitor, way hack in 1889.

And of course her prophecies came true-it did change from the charming little resort place, with primitive accomodations, she saw three quarters of a century ago.

AN important challenge for us today, it seems to me, is to see to it that the community does establish and retain features which give it distinction and an atmosphere, suitable to its location hy one of the world's most beautiful beaches. We need not abandon all that the 1889 writer found here.

MYSTERY CRUSH CLOGS MACHINERY

15,000-Plus Enrollment 'Buries' LBSC

By ROBERT WILCOX

1. P-T Education Editor Long Beach State College, with more than 15,000 in classes for the first time, is in the midst of the worst enrollment crush in the school's history. And nobody can tell exactly where it will end. Things looked crowded enough when the college predicted 1,000 more students for this year. Instead it got 2,200. Here's what has happened:

— Seventy-five classes were added and 60 teachers hired to meet a registration crisis.

- About $100,000 in unbudgeted funds is being spent for salaries.

-Ten thousand parking passes - 2,500 more than last year-have been issued for the clogged campus lots.

-Sizes of most classes have been hiked, some to the point of no return.

What caused the mad, unexpected rush? Nobody, to date, knows for

This much is known: About one-third of the increase came in education classes. Language and art also were hard-hit. The biggest "mystery" inwere in the creases sophomore and senior

College officials speculate that many students were trying to beat the Jan, 1 deadline when they would be subject to new tougher, teacher credential requirements. Language is a new big area of teacher need. The LBSC art department is gaining prominence, attracting more students.

"AFTER YEARS OF predicting enrollment almost to the student, sud-denly here it was," said David L. Bryant, executive dean, "It" blew the fuses of the registration machinery toward the end of the first week. The college simply ran out of classes -and teachers. For the first time, registration windows were closed in mid-afternoon to regroup forces.

During the shutdown, classes were added, sizes increased and teachers hired. "Let's get the stusaid Dr. Carl W. McIntosh, college president. "We'll worry about paying for it later."

Registration was reopened the next day and most potential students satisfied.

But increased parking woes remained, Last Monday when classes opened, the college's most farflung lots were crammed for the first time. Officials considered ordering emergency construction.

BUT ON TUESDAY spaces began to appear in the most distant parking areas. Barney Carmen, business manager, now calls the situation 'eased.'

However, students

wishing to be near classes many of them with campus parking permits-are using a privately owned vacant field along Seventh Street, creating a traffic hazard. There are 200 cars there during peak hours. What about next fall if the rush continues? Limiting of enrollments at some state colleges is being considered.

The LBSC administration already is preparing for the spring semester, tightening schedules. "More classes at night and in the afternoons," says Raymond Lindgren, dean of the college.

No classroom construction is scheduled at LBSC before next year.

"This is a real emergency," says Lindgren.

Police Capt. R. G. Kortz points out that freeways form barriers to easy access from one side to another.

Deputy Fire Chief T. J. Rizzo said the despair of firefighters is the peak rush hours during morning and afternoon. "Traffic is an acute problem to our fire equipment," he said flatly.

NOT TO GET THERE "firstest with the mostest," but just to get there is the problem of emergency vehicles.

Chief Monroe said the Fire Department now dispatches an engine from the south and an engine from the north when there is an auto fire on the Long Beach Freeway. One is bound to get there.

The Los Angeles Police Department blocks off on-andoff-ramps at opposite ends to get their emergency equipment onto the freeways.

Police Capt. Stevenson said traffic officers are under strict orders to brake down at intersections. And he adds a disquieting sidehar: "And some times we can't even use the siren and light because it would give us away to a criminal. Figure out for yourself how fast our cars go then."

Both he and Capt. Kortz agreed that the smaller police car allows more maneuverability than, say, the Fire Department's 60-foot aerial ladder truck.

As a result, Long Beach generally employs only eightor-nine-year veterans as drivers and pays them $113 a month more than the regular fireman. "Aside from regular efficiency reports, they are given tests on driving, aptitude and intelligence," Chief Monroe Area boundaries for police and fire coverage are outlined to take advantage of access roadways, general "workload" of emergency calls based on past records of the district and the chance to overlap, to cover a neighboring area where a traffic jam may hamper the car on duty there. Larger cities have introduced the helicopter but obviously its weight-carrying feasibility and maintenance costs discourage its wider use.

CHIEF RIZZO SAYS some cities outside the Southland have experimented with red-striped emergency lanes in the middle of roadways and radio equipment on emergency vehicles that changes red lights to green with its beams.

But the sore point is that helicopters, widened streets and special equipment timed for traffic signals spell fatter budgets and taxes. Here again, the small city with its modest treasury and modest fire and police services can only sit by in awe as it sees the problem ballooning with more and more cars joining the speedways of the freeways.

"It's a good thing cities don't keep statistics on how many lives could have been saved by speedy medical aid or crimes prevented by fast-closing police cars," one official concluded. "It gives you a more comfortable feeling, doesn't

Why Help Nikita With Our Wheat?

KHRUSHCHEV HAS PROMISED the Russian people the world's highest standard of living as proof to them and to the world that communism is a better system than capitalism.

Should the United States help prevent him from falling flat on his face?

He seems about ready to ask us to do so.

ESTIMATES OF THE Russian wheat crop loss this year have ranged from 10 per cent to as high as 50 per cent. That Khrushchev's shortages are acute is shown by the recent Russian deal with Canada for $500 million worth of wheat. Now the Russians are making overtures to Americans for the purchase of large quantities, perhaps as much as three million tons.

Russia's difficulties stem from the basic weakness of the Soviet system, which provides small incentive to the farmers and inadequate equipment and ferti-

If America sells Khrushchev wheat, it helps him cover up his weakness, helps communism maintain its grip on the Russian people and millions of non-Russians, and helps the Soviets convince uncommitted peoples that communism is desirable.

Further, if we should sell wheat to Russia, we would very likely do so at 60 cents below the domestic price-meaning that the U.S. taxpayer would be subsidizing grain exports to the enemy. Just incidentally, we'd be helping Khrushchev keep his agreement to send $33 million worth of wheat to his stooge in Cuba.

SOME CONGRESSMEN are already making speeches about all the practical reasons for selling American wheat to Khrushchev. Perhaps there would be some temporary economic advantages. But morally it is repugnant, and from a long-range practical point of view, it doesn't make good sense at all.

The Heat Wave

As weather extremes go, it wasn't much.

The highest temperature ever recorded was 136 F. at Azizia, Tripolitania, in North Africa in 1922.

Visitors from Phoenix, Ariz., would sneer at our heat wave. To them our weather is just routine.

However, no one ever really gets used to weather. The human body is not very adaptable. An Eskimo in a swimsuit would freeze to death about as quickly as a Californian

About the only thing anybody can do about weather is to create his own personal defenses. The Eskimo in his into interim cunningly made fur suit is snug and warm at 60 below. The people of Phoenix create an artificial spring with their air conditioning.

Sukarno Off on Another Crusade

I, P-T WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON-President Sukarno of Indonesia is off on another crusade. This time he is violently threatening the new independent state of Malaysia. Sukarno recently told a wildly cheering mob of 30,000 of his countrymen that he intended to destroy the new infant in the family of nations and immediately started planning to make good on market selected at random.

Its politics are in constant ferment and practically none of the vague premises made to his est price. people by Sukarno have been fulfilled. About the only one he has made good on was to get rid of the Dutch, a promise which has been kept by means which sometimes defy description.

The Dutch provided a convenient whipping boy for Sukarno. While the Dutch were admittedly not the best colonizers in the world (they may, indeed, have been the worst), they were not responsible for all of the ills of Indonesia, although Sukarno tried hard to persuade Indonesians that this was the case. When he ran out of Dutch in his own country, he took dead aim at West New Guinea. That country had been a part of the Dutch empire, but had no social, ethnic or geographical connection with the Indonesian islands. Nonetheless Sukarno managed to create such an uproar over West New Guinea and made himself so obnoxious that the matter was finally adjudicated in his favor partially through the good offices of the United States. Whether U.S. participation in this grah was its finest hour in foreign policy is questionable.

HAVING BY BLUFF, bluster, and revolutionary skill achieved power in his own land and extended hegemony over West New Guinea where he never belonged in the first place, Sukarno is now tearing off in another direction.

Tax Bill Wins First Round; Moves to Senate

By HARRY SHARPE,

The House passed President Kennedy's $11.1 billion anti-recession tax cut bill last week and sent it to an uncertain fate in the Senate. Americans in all walks of life would benefit starting Jan. 1 if it becomes

House Republicans tried unsuccessfully to make the two-stage cut - in 1964 and 1965 - conditional on curbs on federal spending. This, too, is the big issue in the Senate where a conservative Virginia Democrat. Chairman Harry F. Byrd of the Finance Committee, now holds the key to the bill's future.

BYRD IS dead against tax relief while the Treasury is deep in the red. So is a big group of Republicans. But Byrd, despite liberal pleas for fast action, raised prospects the measure may have to hang fire until next year.

The President, backed by a big segment of the business world, turned on strong pressure to win his House victory. He is sure to do likewise in the Senate, perhaps at the expense of action this year on his sweeping civil rights program. He feels deeply that consumer dollars made available through eased taxes would flow swiftly into commerce, bolster, rather than reduce, treasury revenue, and head off periodic business slumps.

One thing seems certain. If he insists on action now, his racial rights program will have to be deferred. Southern senators are ready to filibuster against the latter and tie up the Senate indefinitely.

The Senate, after 11 days of debate, ratified the President's limited nuclear testban treaty with Russia and Great Britain. The vote was 80 to 19. The pact pledges the Big Three and 100 non-nuclear signatory nations to refrain from testing atomic devices anywhere except underground,

FRENCH President Charles de Gaulle refused to sign the treaty and said he would continue with his own independent nuclear course. Fidel Castro's Communist - dominated Cuba also hoycotted it. De Gauile meantime urged other European nations and Britain to join France in building a nuclear striking force on condition they tighten their political cooperation. Britain and West Germany promptly turned him down and will continue adherence to Kennedy's plans for NATO nuclear striking

The President hailed the Senate vote, but cautioned that the historic action was only one small step toward war. He gave advance assurances that safeguards to protect U.S. security would be maintained and that there were no strings on his use of atomic weapons in time of war,

Senators opposing the treaty did so largely with declared reluctance but with emphasis on their distrust of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. They argued that it carried too great a military hazard to national security.

Sen, Barry Goldwater of Arizona, potential Republican presidential nominee. suffered defeat when he offered a reservation to condition the pact upon withdrawal of all Russian forces from Cuba. His stand sets up a hot political issue for Close on heels of ratification, the Senate stamped approval on a $47.4 billion defense bill to maintain the nation's military might. The measure represents nearly half of the federal budget.

ON THE civil rights front, two more dynamite bomb explosions in racially tense Birmingham, Ala., damaged eight Negro homes and four automobiles only hours before a two-man presidential team - former Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and ex - West Point football coach Earl (Red) Blaik arrived to begin meetings with white and Negro leaders aimed at restoring racial peace. Kennedy dispatched them in the wake of the unsolved bombing of a Negro church in which four Negro girls were killed

Police said the newest bombs were intended to kill, not scare. One was packed with deadly shrapending the East-West cold nel, rigged to deal mass death had Negroes swarmed to the scene after the first

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover charged that both sides in the Birmingham dispute have misused the name of the FBI to gain support for their views. He said the agency had been accused of both exceeding and shirking its duties and that both views were distorted.

Cleve McDowell, the University of Mississippi's only Negro student, was expelled on charges of carrying a loaded .22-caliber pistol. Mississippi thus became the only state without some type of school integration.

On the political front, President Kennedy toured Il state conservation areas, most of them in the Far West. He called among other things for "parity of opportunity" to help rural peoples enjoy the standards of city living.

The five-day tour picked up definite partisan tinges as it moved along. At Great Falls, Mont., Kennedy flayed the electric power policies of the Eisenhower administration and devoted himself largely to praise for Democrats and what he said they had done to advance conservation and reclamation.

At Salt Lake City, a hotbed of the right wing John Birch Society, he delivered a stern indictment of foreign policies advocated by such Republican conscrvatives as Goldwater

Sen, Norris Cotton, one of New Hampshire's most powerful Republicans, announced meantime that he would support Goldwater in his state's presidential primary next month. This was ed as a blow to New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller who plans to enter the primary

Joint Moon-Trip Proposal Brings Mixed Feelings

The European press expressed mixed editorial feellings this week over President Kennedy's proposal for a joint Soviet - American expedition to the moon,

The Spanish newspaper MADRID said only the Rusjoint moon landing, which "would holster Communist prestige." It said, "the proverbial naivette of North Americans comes up with another apportunity to commit an irreparable error."

In Portugal, the newspaper A VOZ said in commenting generally on Kennedy's U.N. speech that "the Kremlin must consider Kennedy the most important of useful innocents."

In Germany, the STUTT-GARTER NACHRICHTEN said the "sensational offer ... could end the two countries' rivalry on who is going there first."

The DAILY TELEGRAPH of London said it was the "most spectauclar" possihility of East-West coopera-tion in non-military fields. It added, "The obstacle is not unwillingness on either alde so much as the difficulty of dove-tailing two technical approaches which have already diverged in fundamental ways. Regarding the nuclear test-ban treaty, the Swedish newspaper SVENSKA DAG-BLADET said, "The fact that the opposition against the treaty was so extensive is a bad sign. The Arizona Senator (Barry) Goldwater's suggestion that the treaty should be adopted with the reservation that all Russian military personal had to leave Cuba was rejected by the Senate and this defeat is supposed to have reduced his chances to be President. But the danger remains in that a political party which can come to power wants to conduct a foreign policy against Kennedy's efforts to end the cold war."

The French newspaper FIGARO said of the ratification, "For the moment optimists have won over, but they cannot naturally give guarantees of any further relaxation of tension between the Soviets and the United States, Pessimists such as Goldwater could one day find themselves in the enviable position of having seen clearly while everybody else was laboring under Illusions.'

Hetrick, former office manager for Chapman College in Orange, said he a"accepted the post as a wonderful place to put Christianity into action."

He explained that he was extremely impressed by Goodwill's employment and rehabilitation program for the handicapped, but the most appealing thing was the spiritual side of Goodwill Industries.

"In 1949 I had a serious operation for cancer and was given only three months to live," he said, "I was spared, I believe God touched my life, so I have dedicated myself to his service."

Hetrick, a U.S. Army veteran and a native of Pennsylvania, is married and has one son. He succeeds Mrs. Fern Renfro who resigned.

350 Pupils Moving to New School

It will be moving day Monday for 350 pupils in Buena Park; now attending three schools, they'll occupy the new Arthur S. Corey School at 7351 Holder Street.

Latest in the Buena Park Elementary School District system, the plant is named for a former local superintendent of schools, who later became county superintendent of schools and now is executive secretary of the California Teachers' Association.

Children assigned to the new Corey School have been attending Gilbert, Whitaker and Grand Avenue schools. They will meet at those schools Monday morning to collect their gear and then be transported to the new plant. It has kindergarten through fifth grade. Its dedication will be arranged later.

State College Trustees Set Meeting

Trustees of the California State Colleges will meet at Orange State College in Fullerton Oct. 10 and 11 for two days of business deliberations incident to dedication of the new $9-million, six-story science building at noon Oct. 11

There will be an open house for the public on Oct. 13 from 3 to 5 p.m. This date was chosen so as not to interfere with use of the building by students, it was explained. The trustees usually divide their meetings between

San Francisco and Inglewood ,and this will be the first time they have convened in Orange County.

Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke, chief of the 17 state colleges, will deliver the dedication address. A capsule containing memorabilia of the times will be sealed in the cornerstone to climax the ceremony.

Alamitos School District Tops UF Quota

Boasting almost 100-percent participation, 310 certifi-cated employes of Alamitos School District in Garden Grove contributed a whopping $3,091 to United Fund, going over the top of a "suggested" quota.

George Gustatson, principal of Mamie Carver School, and UF soliciations chairman, said the average contribution was $9.97 per teacher. Alamitos thus became the first school district to meet its UF goal.

TO MAKE the night a nearperfect one for small miracles, Director Pat Brown, the multi-talented magician Magnolia, tosses her own thunderbolt by maneuvering her actors into stylish groupings and then hurling them forward with a flourish.

Florence Lowe and Caroline. Francke's play demands every bit of the Magnolia's ensemble playin gand razzle-dazzle finish. A '49th cousin' itself to that box-office earthmother of the American theater - the Jewish family comedy - the drama is held together by the common insult and circumlocutory wisdom. As Isaac Lowe, Carl, Yates is the personification of these qualities. He thrusts the friendly needle into family and foe with the aplomb of a New York Second Avenue Yiddish Theater alumnus. Menasha Skulnik (or Jackie Mason) could not improve on · his circuitous route to kindly wisdom. For example, he tells his workhouse daughter 'Fànny (enduringly and en-dearingly played by Romola Temkin): "If you were a mother, you would know how hard it is to be a father." Fanny and her sisters

Tracy (Adele George) and Carrie (Sheryn) Young set out to discover how hard it is to be a father by taking the preliminary step of courtship. All charming old maids, they are over-protected by their widower-father, who gives all his savings to the Temple, dresses like a beggat and has great expectations for his daughters. He wants a nice German professidhal man—perhaps, a chiropodist with a degree each of them. Suitor

Burton to Tour in Hamlet

NEW YORK (UPI) - How do you trap a movie-rich, romance busy skyrocket such as Richard Burton into agreeing to play the title role in 'Hamlet" for 20 weeks?

The answer of producer Alxander H. Cohen, who has the British star's signature on such a contract, is that you don't,

You don't con Burton into anything. He is, above all, a dedicated stage-trained actor, and if you offer him the opportunity to do something he wants to do, he will do it if he possibly can.

"I HAVE seen him turn." down big-money offers right and left in recent months to make room for this venture, said Cohen. "He is the most business-like theater professional I have ever dealt with except for Sir John Gielgud."

And it is not exactly an accident that Sir John, himself great Hamlet of our time, will direct the Burton production, which goes into re-hearsal Feb. 2, starts a tryout engagement in Boston March 2, opens for a 12-week New York run on March 19 and then tours major cities for six weeks.

"I was in Rome on business: March 27," Cohen said, March 27," Cohen said,

She Doesn't Know What to Wear

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) -- Will Alice Wharton be permitted to wear slacks at work, or must she wear a skirt?

Miami's first mail lady asked to be allowed to wear slacks but Post Office Department officials in Washington haven't made a de-

Regulations call for women to-wear skirts, but postal officials say motorized carriers in Mrs. Wharton's area use scooters and trucks, where skirts don't belong.

Wharton wore Mrs. slacks Monday --- her first day on the job.

It looked like Disneyland and it was in Anaheim but the scene was Bourbon Street and the music was straight out of New Orleans.

High temperatures in the Southland were nothing compared to the heat wave generated the past two nights at the fourth annual "Dixieland at Disputation"

The thin wail of the clarinet, the brassy tone of the trombone and the shrill tenor of the trumpet were the night sounds floating across the water to an estimated 5,500 hand-clapping Dixieland enthusiasts.

THE AUDIENCE, lining the banks of the juncture of the Walt Disney waterway, was as informal as the music was good.

and just plain "cool clothes" were the uniforms for the night but the audience still got hot. Floating down the river on barges were the all-time great Dixieland bands of Kin Ory, Teddy Buckner, the Dukes of Disneyland and the Firehouse Five plus Two.

TRUMPETER Al Hirt, the King of Dixieland,

was a feature all his own.

Those were the musicians and they played the classics of that style of American melody which was born in the South.

"South Rampart Street Parade," "Muskrat Ramble," "Lulu White's Blues," "Bourbon Street Parade," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Tiger Rag" and "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home," were just a few of the tunes that set up a fuot-stamping and hand-clapping response from the audience.

THE MUSIC was old as were some of the performers like Kid Ory, styled by announcer Frank Buck as 75 years young.

The audience was young and old. A few small children, perched upon their fathers' shoulders so they could see the barges come swinging down the river, clapped their hands just like the "grown-ups."

The production was technically perfect. Batteries of powerful searchlights mounted on towers spotlighted the performers spectacularly.

The finale was a roll call of the great bands performing, "When the Saints Go Marchin' In." And when the crowd marched out the spirit was still upon them.

FOR THE LOVE OF A WOMAN. Often said to be the world's most beautiful building, the Taj Mahal at Agra, India, was built as a tomb by a sorrowing ruler for his beloved queen. The Taj Mahal is famous for its hypnotic effect on tourists by moonlight. Just one of the many interesting segments of "Around the World in 80 Minutes."

With Kodak photographer-lecturer Don Nibbelink as a guide, you'll visit the country described as the "Land of Smites," Thailand, and be fascinated by the bizarre statues and temple architecture. These magnificent golden statues are found in Bangkok and will be shown in beautiful wide-screen color which Nibbelink presents AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 MINITES.

HILBERT ADEMA - was born in the tall corn state of Iowa, moved to Worthington, Minn., and had most of his education there. As a young chap, he went into the cafe business and owned and operated several different places in Oregon, Washington and California, spent 7 years in Wenatchee, Wash., while the Coulee Dam was being built. While working as Chef in the Ventura Coffee Shop in 1946, he decided to venture in the real estate business and got his salesman's license at that time. In 1947, he went to work for J. F. Lewis Co. as salesman. In 1950, opened HEIM

QUICK to Greet New Residents!

* YOU'LL GET a hearty greeting and quick service from our nearest carrier-boy when you move into a new neighborhood - if you let us know a few days in advance! He will start delivery the day you arrive, so you won't miss a single issue!

IF YOU are moving soon, notify our office or your present carrier, of the moving date and your new address. And please be sure he is paid for all copies he delivers before you move. Otherwise, their cost will come out of his own pocket, as he's in business for himself. Thank you!

 The price of a used car can be a "fooler." What a might appear at first glance to be "real deal" on a used car, often times is no deal at all, IF the car's condition is BELOW STANDARD . No one knows the value of a used car BETTER than the dealer who offers it for sale . It is always to your advantage to trade cars with a reputable dealer; one whose cars are priced honestly . Pete Beathard Unleashes Pass to Willie Brown for 17-Yard Gain to Oklahoma 21/2-Yard Line in Final Quarter

Go-Go Sooners Nod SC, 17-12

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH

The USC Trojans' No. 1 national ranking, victory string of 12 straight and hopes for a second consecutive unbeaten season all went down the drain in 2 hours and 40 minutes Saturday as the unbelievably powerful Oklahoma Sooners crunched out a 17-12 triumph.

The thermometer at bench level on the Coliseum field read 118 degrees, while another thermometer on the Coliseum deck level was reported to have soared to 126!

A disappointing turnout of 39,345-undoubtedly held down by the inferno-type heat wave-viewed the game in-person, while millions watched the thrifler via television.

The score by no means illustrated the Sconers' tremendous margin over the Trojans. Coach Bud Wilkinson's famed ball-control offense never was more brilliantly demonstrated than in the broiling Coliseum Saturday.

Oklahoma ran almost two plays to every one of USC. The Sooners ground out 307 yards rushing to a mere 121 by the Trojans. Outside of USC's two scoring occasions, the Oklahoma line was harder to crack than the Rock of Gibraltar.

In fact, three major mistakes by Oklahoma kept the game from assuming the proportions of a rout:

1. Joe Don Looney-later to be named back-of-thegame-grabbed a Trojan defender's face mask late in the second quarter and drew a 15-yard penalty. The driving Sconers thus were shoved back to the Trojan 30, instead of being in position for what seemed another certain Oklahoma touchdown

2. The Sooners actually scored another touchdown in the third period, but it was called back because of illegal The call förced Oklahoma into its second mistake—a field goal attempt when the visitors were in perfect running position. (The kick was blocked by Hal Bedsole, a clawing tiger on DEFENSE all afternoon, recovered by Troy's Gary Kirner and raced back to USC's The big break proved for naught . . . on fourth down the Trojans still were on their own 31!)

3. Sooner fullback Jim Grisham fumbled on USC's 22 with three minutes to play, after a devastating tackle by Long Beach's Mike Giers, and the Trojans still had time to pull the bacon out of the fire after recovering. (But they didn't. Two magic eye passes by Pete Beathard trickled off the fingers of Bedsole and Willie Brown and Oklahoma took over in the final minute on USC's 24.)

ADD THREE MORE touchdowns to Oklahoma's total and you can visualize what a rout the national TV contest might have been.

The Trojans never were ahead. The closest they came to Oklahoma was 7-6 in the first quarter and a bad pass from center prevented them from knotting the count 7-7 at that point.

A clue to the game's outcome came in that first period. USC received the opening kickoff, ran three plays, then punted. Oklahoma then controlled the hall for 25 of the next 26 plays!

Only break in the Sooner chain came when Pete Lubisich recovered a fumble on the 10th play. On the very first USC play, Loran Hunt returned the favor and the Somers had the ball again at the exact spot where they had previously fumbled.

Fifteen plays and 65 yards later, Oklahoma had its first points on the board via a nifty double reverse that catapulted the swift, 225-pound Looney 19 yards into the end zone. George Jarman converted and with 10 minutes gone, Oklahoma had a 7-0 lead.

A note on that double reverse, which USC blotted out in the second half: Pulled three times in the first half, the twin reverse accounted for 54 yards and a touchdown, (It's a helluva play for one half!)

As everyone expected, the Trojans came roaring back and needed but 10 plays to notch their initial TD. Brown and Mike Garrett cracked through the Sooner line for big-gainers in this drive, with fullback Ernie Pye diving into the end zone from one foot away.

Again the black cal crossed the Trojan path via the bad pass from center and placekicker Dick Brownell had no chance to lie the game,

A completely unrehearsed play gave impetus to Oklahoma's next touchdown in the second quarter. On another double reverse attempt, Virgil Boll was trapped by more Trojans than a piece of cheese in a mousetrap, VIRGIL THEN GAVE an imitation of an Olympic shotputter and putted the ball 19 yards in the general direction of Looney. Joe Don grabbed the ball as if it were a sack of potatoes . . . but hung onto it to give Oklahoma big first down on USC's 47. Eight plays later, Oklahoma had its second score when quarterback Mike Ringer slammed off left tackle for four yards. Jarman's placement gave the Sooners a 14-6 edge.

The margin went to 17-6 not too many minutes later when sure-footed Jarman laced a 43-yard field goal , and the Trojans looked beaten even before the halftime intermission.

Thinks looked even less bright after three quarters when USC still was behind 17-6.

Wilkinson: "USC's offense uses material very well. They move the ball as well as any team I've ever seen.

"To be a good team, we should throw better, USC didn't have anybody lining up further than five yards away from the line of scrimmage on defense because they knew our offense was geared to running."

"Referring to Joe the Hacker's comment in your column, he has hit the nail on the head with his reference to golf fees in this city as well as in the county. How can fees be any cheaper with the high salaries being paid to links officials? How can they attend conventions in Rome, Scotland, Las Vegas, Reno and other places, and pay the high motel, bar and aircraft fares without drawing on the golfers, pensioners, working men and housewives for this kind of activity they claim is necessary? There is another big swindle going great guns—the boat launching racket. Under the bridge at the Second St. overramp, they charge the small boat owner $1.50 to launch his boat. However, they are missing another great source of income by not putting up a turnstile across Alamitos Bay and charging $3 to go out in the

- "1. Standing in line at 6 a.m. a week in advance. "2. Dialed in until my finger was sore at 6 a.m. a week in advance.
- "3. Had a friend who did either of the above and been invited to play in his foursome.
- "4. Played in a club or city tournament on the week-

"There are numerous inequities in the Long Beach public golf course situation, but starting times is not one of them. For instance: Golfers shell out and a surplus in excess of $200,000 a year goes into the city's general fund. We help pay for tennis, baseball, bowling greens, etc. Skylinks has been a rude, underdeveloped course for five years. (The responsibles will point to the planting of 1500 trees this year, but if you made a bouquet out of the whole batch you'd have a tough time making shade.) As Skylinks greens committee chairman, I helped draw up a paper which pointed out a half-dozen problems and suggestions to solve them. After passing this along to the authorities, I got the strong feeling that a desire existed for us to go jump in Lakewood's lake." (signed) C. R. Duclos, 6371 El

"That letter you printed regarding the Recreation and, most damaging of all, Park courses does have some merit, such as reducing fees and employing rangers to speed up play, but when this party (Ine the Hacker) casts insinuations upon the honesty and fairness of all the starters, he is away out of line. I have found all the starters to be fair and honest, cooped up in their little cubby holes, bending over backwards trying to please everyone, an impossible task." Is there a touchstone to your success? "The biggest thing has been control. It's something that has come to me in the last three years. I don't know the reason why for control. If I did, I would tell every kid in

Will you have goose-pimples when you walk out to the mound Wednesday?

"I don't think so. I've never pitched the opener before, but I have been in three Series. There is a thrill about playing in them, but the games are not as important as the crucial games in winning the pennant. Fighting to get there is the big thing."

Do you think the Yankees are a stronger team than the Cardinals?

It's hard to say and teams in different leagues are difficult to compare. The Yankees are a good team. They've got power, depth and pitching. They're always

By JERRY WYNN Do you feel the impetus of coming from a rough pennant fight will help the Dodgers? "Not necessarily, because the impetus is gone once the pennant is won. Of the three pennant winners I've been on, one team won the pennant by 16 to 18 games and won the Series; another won the pennant on the last day and lost the Series, and in 1959, we won the pennant in a playoff and won the Series. So who can say which is the best way?"

If you had to vote for the National League's most valuable player, whom would you choose?

"I think Dick Groat was as valuable to his team as any player in the league. He pulled the Cardinals' infield together, made a better player out of Javier and is a real team leader. Jim Gilliam did a great job for us and so did Tommy Davis. I guess would be between Groat and Gilliam.

Your picture has appeared on the cover of Life and several other magazines this year. Do you enjoy the attention being heaped upon you?

"No, not particularly. I can't think of advantages except for a great deal of personal satisfaction. Everything I do I want to do well."

What has been your greatest thrill in

"The no-hitter against the Giants this year was the best game I've ever pitched. And the game against the Cardinals last week was equally as great a thrill. It was a game we had to win."

Who is going to win the World Series? "The team which gets the hottest, I'll let you know for sure next week."

About the only sure thing in the World Series is the best pitcher in baseball. And

Casey Keeps Mets Loose in Losing

The $64,000 question-or thereabouts-with the New York Mets is whether or not Casey Stengel will return next year as manager.

Mets' president George Weiss says, "I firmly believe Casey will return, I asked him point-blank a month ago to sign a new contract right there and then, but he wouldn't do it. He asked for more time to think it over.

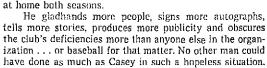

But in all talks we've had lately he has shown great interest in the young players on our farm clubs and he wouldn't be thinking of them if he was quitting."

Asked about the situa-tion, Casey says, "Everywhere I go, everyone keens asking me the same question and I keep telling them I don't know yet. If my health permits, I'll probably be back.

And the condition of his health? "Tve never felt better," he said with a wink before one of the Dodger games the past week.

Casey, of course, has been the Mets' No. 1 attraction in the two years the club has operated. He's their crowd magnet . . . and the prime reason they have drawn more than a million at home both seasons.

Life can be pretty miserable on a losing team . . . but not so with the Mets. Pitching coach Ernie White echoes the sentiments of all those connected with the club when he says, "It's a lot of laughs . . . because Casey makes it

WHITE, A SOUTHPAW pitcher with the Cardinals in the early 1940s, oversees the Mets' bullpen. IIe's the man Casey telephones when there's trouble brewing . . . which means he's in almost constant touch with Ernie.

White reveals several hilarious experiences he's had this season with Stengel "over the pipe" . . . baseball's term for telephone.
"First of all," Ernie points out, "Casey calls me

Weiss. You know how he butchers names. I've always

"And when he calls, you never really know what he's Marv going to say. There was a game early this year when clasey replaced Frank Thomas in left field with another fense, gaining 125 yards, inplayer along about the seventh inning. The phone rang and he says 'Mr. Weiss, I'm gonna make a change with that feller in left field.'

"I wanted to know what that had to do with the bullpen and Casey answered, "Well, Mr. Weiss, there's nobody in the dugout near me to talk to so I thought I'd the final period tied 21-21. relay the information to you."

WHITE ALSO TELLS about the game in Milwaukee in which Carlton Willey was facing his old club for the

"Willey was going along in smooth style," White reveals. "He was anxious to show up his former teammates and had a two-hit, 2-0 shutout going into the eighth. I had Jay Hook and Ken MacKenzie loosening up just in case when the phone rang, 'Mr. Weiss,' Casey said, 'who you got warmin' up?'

"I told him and he replied, 'I don't need neither one of those gentlemen,' and hung up.

"Well, before you know it, the Braves fill the bases In the ninth, score two runs and still have two on with two out. We eventually lost. But before the winning run scored ... the phone rang again.

"'Mr. Weiss,' Casey announced, 'we're blowin' the THEN THERE WAS the time the Mets were playing the Cubs and ran out of pitchers. "The score was something like 15-3 against us in the sixth inning. We only had seven pitchers on the staff at the time and Casey had already used up six. "I had one man left in the bullpen when the first three hitters up in the seventh bombed our man. There went the telephone. "'That feller of ours aint doin' so good, Mr. Weiss,' Casey said . . . and then asked, 'Who you got ready?' "I reminded him I had only one man left and with our pitcher due to open the next inning as a hitter, it might be better to wait and use a pinch-hitter for him, then come on with the last hurler. "In that case, Mr. Weiss' Stengel said, 'tell the feller you got warmin' up to go to the clubhouse and get himself a sandwich and beer, then be ready to come in the next inning because he's got a long wait ahead of him." CASEY LIKES TO kid a lot about so many college kids playing ball now and about how they sit in the clubhouse and talk about "knuckle fishing and electric commuters (nuclear fission and electronic computers)." One student, according to White, explained in detail to Casey one day that he didn't have to warm up because by thought transference he could analyze the precise movements of his arm in every situation. Well, Casey just stared at him for a minute and then Tonslaught, with two touchsaid, 'Okay, but just remember to keep the ball low!'"

Fishin's fun for anybody, pro or farmer, and Redondo's Fisherman's Wharf is out to prove it. Its whole sportfishing fleet will be available free for four days on a first come, first served basis.

It's as easy for a person to board a fishing boat or barge and catch fish as it is to buy a ticket to a ball game and eat a hot dog, according to Press Fiscus, Redondo fleet manager, so come fishing free and see for yourself."

The entire fleet and manpower services will be offered— two barges and three party boats—without charge on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Oct. 1 and 3, 8 and 10.

"These units will be loaded on a first come, first served basis," said Fiscus. "There should be plenty of room, however, as the barges are 250-footers, and the boats 65 foot. This company simply feels that rather than start a contest or derby or similar promotion, it would be a boon to more sportsmen to invite them to come fishing free."

Pomona Finale to Megaton

POMONA-More Megaton, 3 3-year-old racchorse, has found a way to beat the heat and get paid for it. He goes to the track and creates his own "breeze."

Saturday he went to the well for the second time in four days and beat the hide off seven older horses in the $20,000-added Pomona Handicap, picked up a check of $12,200 in the bargain and finished up this meeting with two wins and two seconds in just 14 days to wind up everybody's "horse of the meeting."

It was just last Wednesday that More Megaton upset Nevada Battler in the Pomona Derby, and he came right back at odds of 16-1 to win driving by more than two lengths under a perfect ride by the popular Ray York. Gallant Host lasted to be Victory Beauty, who in turn had a nose advantage over the 9-5 favorite, Rob Roy III.

Sweep for U.S. McKinley Star of Series stars of the United States twisted Britain's tail Saturday and completed a 5-0 clean sweep in the interzone semifinal of the Davis Cup.

Chuck McKinley, the Wimbledon champion from San Antonio, Tex., put on a dazzling display to defeat left-hander Billy Knight 8-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Then Frank Froehling of Coral Gables, Fla., crushed Britain's No.1, Mike Sangster, 6-1, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

The Americans started the last day with a winning 3-0 lead and the tension off.

They now plan to make a leisurely swing through Europe and Asia before tackling India at Bomba next month. The winner of that match will challenge Australia for the trophy in Australia at Christmas.

A CROWD of 3,000 watched the final singles on the red shale court of the West Hants Club.

McKinley, 22, turned out to be the stat of the series. He played his best tennis against Knight. With the match already won, he broadened his range of strokes and delighted the crowd with a stream of lobs, drops and top spin.

FOR BEAUTY IN DINING ROOM

Davis Furniture, 1975 Long Beach Blvd., offers this dining room setting that is beautiful as well as practical. An attractive combination of woods-American walnut with bandings of the exquisitely - figured Carpathian Elm burl - is used throughout. A graceful dining table, its edges slightly curved, gains beauty from the use of burl veneer around the apron; the same veneer forms the epaulettes on top of the hexagonal legs. The magnificent buffet offers spacious storage space.

1N THE "FANCY" category are many new patterns, currently attracting a great deal of attention. These are often very definite patterns, designed for period furnishings, such as French traditional styles or Early American set-

In either case, carpets and rugs are declaring their own importance this year, as strongly-stated colors replace many neutrals, and texturecolor combinations point to an emphasis on the "welldressed floor."

Homemakers who previously would not consider a patterned carpet or rug are taking a new look at the design introductions for fall, They are discovering that classic patterns have been restyled and re-scaled for the dimensions of today's homes and that there are many subtle approaches to pattern for those who are still undecided on final decor.

PLAIDS, stripes and checks are some of the fresh ideas currently seen in the pattern category. These are often interpreted in lively and offbeat colorings and, in some cases, co-ordinated with solid colors in other styles.

What's the difference between a careet and rug? More and more it's getting to be the final touch of fringe trim, a horder motif or other design that marks a rug as a self-contained design unit. Some styles are offered in both standard broadloom widths for carpet installations! and in rug form with the option of a trim such as knotted

New dveing and construction techniques now account for some pattern developments. These include "decodveine" and "resist-dveine" processes. A carpet made in: natural-color or white varus is treated to a single dve bath, which brings out two or more color tones. The result is an economical way of producing pattern and new style possibilities for carnets which prior to these developments. would have been far more expensive.

FURTHER STYLE possibilities are seen this fall in carpets and rugs which can be obtained in virtually any color, texture, size or shape on custom order, a service now offered by a number of manufacturers. Also noteworthy is the fact that many new tug

GIVE GIRL HER OWN ROOM

What better way to make a girl feel cared for than to give her a room designed especially for her. And how much easier for her to assume the responsibility of 'keeping her room in order" when it really is HER room. The furniture in this group caters to the young needs of growing girls and creates a world of her own that makes responsibility a natural part of growing up. It's a place to play her favorite records or watch TV without disturbing the family . . . there are bookcases, low cabinets and chests to make the lesson of "everything in its place" easier to learn.

color arises so often with the homemaker. What is it, how does she obtain it, and where does she use it?

A. Accent color is the bright or brilliant value of any hue that is used. It is obtained by establishing a desirable color scheme for the room, and creating interest, variety and unity to the scheme by the use of the accent color. It is used in the small areas of the room and in several repetitions in various parts of the room. It can he repeated in welting, fringes, small accessories. small pattern motifs in fabric or wallpaper, flowers, porcelains, pictures, etc.

Q. What is the difference between contemporary and modern furniture?

A. Generally speaking none. The definition for the words modern and contemporary is the same-of our time. Commonly, people like to refer to pieces with a futuristic flare as "modern furniture," other pieces of light scale, but with a provincial touch are often called "Danish modern."

FOR DOLLS AND DARNING

An authentic adaptation of its Early American ancestor, the new Sprague & Carleton "Dough Box" is designed in solid rock maple to conform · to current height and scale of upholstered pieces and lamps so that it can be used easily with both. The dough box, being a flexible storage piece as well as decorative end table, provides a deep, concealed space for magazines, knitting, games or toys as it once did for dough in home baking. Divided lids make its contents accessible from either side of a chair and without lifting lamp or table accessories.

Trundle Bed Finds Way Back

their way back into the American home, "They have been thought as practical since their Gothic origin," says one manufacturer, "but the reasons have varied from era to era. Trundle beds, by the way, are also called truc-kle beds," he explained.

It seems that during the Middle Ages, houses were heated by one immense fire place in the main hall or living room. A trundle bed was kept under the larger, canopycovered bed and was pulled out near the fireplace at night for the children to sleep on.

As cities grow larger, lots and homes get smaller. Since children's rooms are usually the smallest, the trundle bed is a handy solution to the present-day space problem. Many parents want the trundle bed for other reasons: their kids like to have company, overnight company, and here again pulling out the trundle bed drawer, with its comfortable mattress and bedding solves the problem of the overnight child guest.

RUGS GO INTO KITCHEN

Carpets and rugs, traditionally used to beautify living areas of the home, are now at work in other areas as well--"home management centers," for example, and even carpeted kitchens. Here, a handsome area rug with a thick shaggy texture and widening circles of color is used in a room which might provide extra family dining space as well as a desk for the busy homemaker. A related color is seen in the kitchen carpet, a practical style with a medium color and tight-looped texture, made of continuous filament nylon.

Beauty and accuracy are elegantly combined in this Seth Thomas finest quarter-hour Westminster chime clock, "Legacy." Traditionally designed in mahogany and brass, it presents an ideal decoration-conversation piece especially as a mantel clock available in key wind or electric. These grandfather and grandmother clocks are on display at California Time Service, 2194 Lakewood Blvd.

How City Changes Its Looks

Long Beach, as in the case of cities in general, is undergoing a continuous process of 'face-lifting' with new and more modern structures replacing out-dated buildings. Contrasting photographs here illustrate the point. At left are pictures of old structures razed to make way for new buildings pictured directly opposite, at right. Edward O'Connor, head of the city's Building Department, has provided tax figures showing the great financial benefits from improvements such as illustrated. For example the old building at 1212 E. Ocean Blvd. (upper left) had assessed valuation of $420 and the city tax was approximately $5.75. After the new building (upper right), assessed valuation was $139,540 and tax 2,521.67—quite a boost in city revenue. The buildings which formerly stood at 331-39 Olive Ave. (second row, left) were assessed at $400, with taxes of $5.48. Replacing them is the Palms apartment house, assessed at $49,320, with taxes of $710.82. At lower left is structure formerly at 3529 E. Third St., assessed at $800, with tax $10.96. It was replaced by the apartment house shown at lower right, with assessed valuation of $24,740 and tax exceeding $300. Such redevelopment of the city by private enterprise was strongly praised by O'Connor. He urged that civic-minded developers consider many more such improvements, and in fact there is an expanding trend in this direction. O'Connor saw civic pride, growing demand, mounting land values, building material sales and other profits as factors in redevelopment progress.

OFFICIAL EMBLEMS of the Long Beach Diamond Jubilee are these diamond pins demonstrated by models for the Long Beach District Board of Realtors. The pins help the city celebrate its 75th birthday, Nov. 1 to 30, and are being sold by local Realtors. Shane Ellis (left) shows how they add a touch to sun glasses. Burbara Lundell says they add glitter to headgear, and demonstrates use of the diamond pins on a ski cap. Cheryl Abbot uses them to fashion her initial on a blouse. Miss Abbott also finds them handy for putting the final touch on an anklet band. The diamonds (alas, they aren't real) are sold by Realtors for a dollar apiece, and proceeds help finance the Jubilee celebration events. The Board of Realtors accepted the pin-seiling job to spur public interest in the celebration.

TOWER OF THE PRESS

Well-stacked newspaper supplements of "RCA Victor Week" running today in the Independent, Press-Telegram and 210 other newspapers would pile up higher than Chicago's 398-foot Wrigley Tower. Pretty Ingrid Bergen helps illustrate the point. RCA is running 8-page rotogravure sections in today's papers which will circulate to more than 33 million families in the U.S. Paper used would stretch around the world one and a quarter times.

Meredith Village Model Home Offered for Sale, Furnished

Meredith Village will officially open one of their new Craigmont models, a six-bedroom, two-story residence, to homebuyers fully furnished this weekend, it was announced by Eddy Meredith, the builder-developer of the 155 home Village located between Santa Ana, Orange and Tustin on Prospect Avenue.

The $6 million Meredith development is noted for a variety of four, five and sixbedroom homes with two and three-car garages.

The featured Craigmont models with three different exteriors has 3,200 square feet of space and features formal plus informal dining rooms, formal living room, spacious foyers and wide stairways, wall-to-wall premium carpeting throughout, walnut panelled family room, General Electric kitchen, large cement patio, all hand-rubbed. walnut cabinetry and three install one, the baths—one with exit to pool or patio area.

IN ADDITION to the six The all-electric Enderle with a total of 28 different Homes like this in Meredith Village are loaded with many luxurious extras. The large homes are built on extra-large lots.

Seven Apartments for Each New Home

If you are going to move in Long Beach in the future, the odds are 7 to 1 you will go into an apartment!

At least that is the prevailing rate in apartment construction compared to private home construction, based on figures for the past two months.

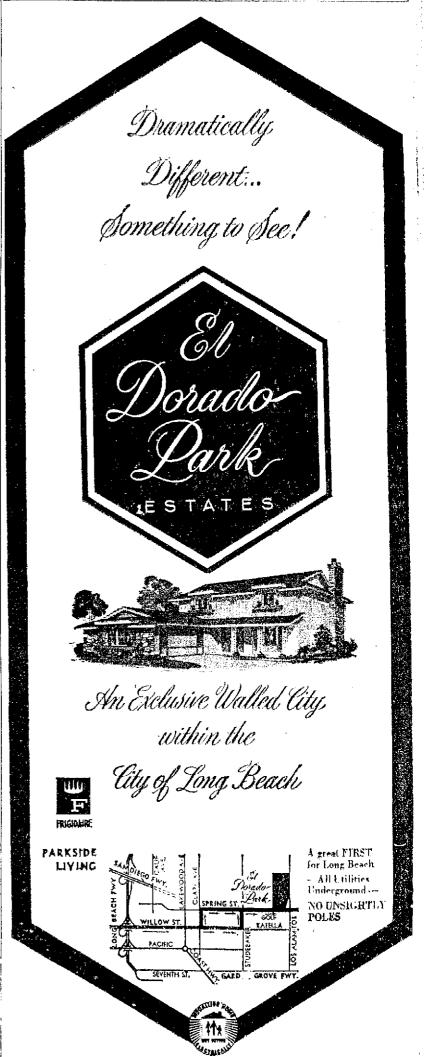

During August the City Building and Safety Dept. issued permits for 69 single family dwellings to be constructed at an estimated cost of $1,126,000.

IN THE SAME PERIOD there were 55 permits issued for 519 individual apartments which would house 519 families and 7 permits were issued for two-family units housing 14 families.

Estimated cost of the 55 major apartments was $3,042,000' and the seven two-family units, $106,855

Permits for additions or alterations to older homes e issued on 566 projects costing $743,560.

Total valuation of building permits for August reached § $7,352,286 for 2,538 permits.

A Fig for the Weather--Social Life's Fine

By Iola Masterson I, P-T Women's Editor

OH, THE weather was hot but the pool was cool and you can't beat that to make a gal kind of drool. So pardon the garbled gobbiedy gook. Trying to say, it was a little hard to keep Junior League provisionals' minds on business Wednesday when, with committee members, they met at Barbara (Mrs. Chester) Moore's home for an ayem business, plus poolside "bring your own sandwich" meeting.

Needless to say, when the time came no one needed any urging to jump into that pool---and stay there, Barbara Ivey was in charge of the kind of indoctrination affair-how much work the league does and how much fun members have, all wrapped up in one neat package of a day.

Before splashing they heard talks from sustainers Holene (Mrs. Jack) Drown, Betty (Mrs. "Bix") Bixby, Carolyn (Mrs. Bob) Fox, Marjory (Mrs. John) Clarke and Betty (Mrs. Palmer) Wentworth. Good talks, snappy, too, to hasten the splash and swim session.

Some of those romping in the chlorine deep (undoubtedly thinking with great studiousness of lessons learned-ha!) were Janice Baker, Diane Barkis, Joanne Coursey, Louanne Hoff, Patty Newkirk and Pat Olson.

THE HAT is out of the bag-at least the theme is for Long Beach Auxiliary, So. Cal. Symphony Association, always very grand headdress ball. Lia (Mrs. Geza) Kremples, general chairman (to take on this job requires valor of the very highest social order) entertained her planning committee Friday in her home.

Theme announced? "With a Song in My Heart" so women can let favorite tunes go to their heads come ball date-Nov. 22. Mark it down now. Will take place, as usual, in International Ballroom, Lafayette.

Present to plan for evening of glamor and food were Isadine McCall, auxiliary president, Lucy (Mrs. Wild Waves Say ...

Duane) Kuster, Betty Maude Benwell, Virginia (Mrs. Farl) Milton, Millie (Mrs. Frank) Vessels, Jean (Mrs. Harvey) Doody and Mary (Mrs. P. Victor) Peterson.

FINALLY, last weekend, they made it. But imagine the moving day-should say days-consternation Carolyn and Larry McDowell Jr. went through until M-Day actually was a thing of the past, Carolyn had them packed right down to the toothbrushes for their van date as of Sept. 18. Van arrives but we have pouring skies. So all agree, no soap, not even with rain-

So again on Thursday (sunny in Newport Beach from whence van originated its jaunt) the men tried. Pouring here. They moved into an own-your-own in Newport (4223 Patrice Road) with already down snow white carpeting. Those muddy shoes wouldn't have

First night they at long last arrived in their new domicile (week ago Friday). May and Jim Sipprelle joined them for dinner, if you can imagine. But there was planning in Caroline's madness. Sipprelles had to help unpack. Food was brought in from nearest pack-

HAD A note from Grace Williams, 3942 Knoxville, re cute daughter, Rosalind, Roz, now back at her senior year studies at University of Arizona, Tucson, spent all summer (hard work but a wonderful one) in intensive Navy training at WAVE Officers Candidate School, Newport, R. I. They take the same unrelenting course (is that a good term for the training, boys and gals?) that the men OCs do. She was one of 60 selectors who qualified in U.S.

-one of only 30 who were college or university juniors Before returning home this Millikan and LBCC grad took time out for good behavior to visit friends in Cape Cod, New York and Washington. She's sold; plans to complete her training in R.I. next fall and become a WAVE ensign.

THAT MAN about many towns, Lee Carpenter, bon, bon vivant, has been up to his well used suitcases and trunks in moving operation from his home in Lakewood (sold to Lillian and Ray Clark) and into a Los Cerritos area apartment.

Once in, he may not stay long. He has strong inclinations, for more lovely reasons than one, to return to Italy, Genoa or nearby, where he has a car lease business started for him, among other things.

Lee just returned a minimum time ago from two months spent in Italy. On his return his house looked like a continuous party had been going on since his departure, artfully arranged by his auto agency manager, Bill Maxey. To give you some idea (I'd blush to tell it all) there were 17 goldfish a-swimming in the bathtub plus one or two here and there in other unmentionable receptables, thereby making the homecoming something of a problem, especially since no fishing signs were well displayed.

A BIG, a fine, an all masculine party was "Gap" Powell's annual salute to the brotherhood of SAE (Sigma Alpha Epsilon), with alums and actives plus rushees at LBSC invited. A steak fry (what less would do) with George Jr. and John Jarman manning the braziers until a total of 170 spencers were cooked, manfully consumed.

"Ev" Sawyer copped honors as the longest time alum. He was initiated in 1894 (69 years ago) at U. of Nebraska and still going S(AE)trong. Ernie Folsom, who joined in 1910 at U. of Nevada, was present. Just grabbing other names out of the air - so were Fred Penland, Don Gill, Bill Grant and, to add to the inspiration of the night, 11 SAE little sisters from LBSC campus who helped serve.

One man I know waited two hours to eat but kept getting so involved in conversation he finally managed to get one of the last three cooked at the end of the meat-hook row.

"Fine lingerie was the first field I wanted to go into when I began designing and manufacturing in the women's apparel field," states Virginia Wallace, top California designer, who will be commentator at a showing of her elegant hostess and at-home line at Symphony Juniors' fashion show luncheon on Friday.

Miss Wallace started her vastly successful career with a plaid taffeta petticoat in 1947. There was a scarcity of fine fabrics and laces then, right after the war. she says, but taffeta could be had A Bullocks-Wilshire buyer liked this particular novelty idea and placed a $3,000 order before the budding designer had office, showroom or factory. She managed to do the seemingly impossible and filled the order on time; her petticoat turned out to be a true trend-setter, and she embarked into this highly corapetitive field,

WITH AID and encouragement of other buyers she extended her operations to New York and various top stores across the country. Having previously been a buyer herself, she still had difficulty pricing garments, getting competent help (she began with two home-workers) and securing small amounts of fabrics from the big mills which preferred selling to big manufacturers.

She says she pushed and pressured her way into Celancse Corporation and today, when they have stopped producing taffet on a large scale (they're yarn manufacturers primarily) Wallace products is one of the five key accounts they've maintained. They receive thousands of yards of taffeta a month.

At present this dynamic woman creates gowns and tra. bridal sets inspired by the couturier collections; she goes into delightful color coordination in gowns and robes, feeling that it is as important here as in day wear; she now uses all the drip-dry fabrics.

"We use any fabric that's lovely," says Miss Wallace. "But taffeta petticoats are still growing strong!"

THIS THEN is the talented commentator who will show her line to members and guests of Symphony Juniors at their luncheon at the Edgewater Inn on Friday. Her models will be from Wilma Hastings and they'll carry holiday gift

Long Beach Joins Nation in Tribute

Joining in the nationwide observance of National Business Women's Week Oct. 6 through 12, the four Long Beach Business and Professional Women's Clubs will sponsor a banquet at 7 p.m. Oct. 7 at Petroleum Departing from the traditional practice of naming 'a "Business Woman of the Year," the event will be a tribute to ALL women in the labor force. To this end, invitations have been extended to all business and professional firms and service clubs to participate.

GUEST SPEAKER will be television newscaster Baxter Ward, director of news for KABC-TV, who has selected the provocative title, "The Unchecked Bal-

Ward is holder of the coveted "Golden Mike"

JOINING IN NATIONAL observance of Business Women's Week Oct, 6 through 12, local business women use scales to indicate greater balance between men and women in the labor force achieved through recent passage of the equal pay bill. This achievement, along with other strides, will be celebrated when four Long Beach

Southern California, and is a three-time nominee for the Emmy.

Musical portion of the program will be presented by Martha Daughn Locker, dramatic lyric soprano and a sister of BPW member, Florence Morton, Nancy Simmons will accompany.

Coordinating participation of the four clubs is Kathryn Campbell, general chairman.

Presidents of the groups, each of whom will preside over a portion of the program, are Betsy Byrnes, Belmont Shore Chapter; Mildred Stanley, Margaret Ives Chapter; Marie Mulvey, Long Beach National Chapter; and Ora Knudsen, Manuela Nicto Chapter.

AN INTERNATIONAL organization, BPW today numbers 170,000 members.

In the legislative area of federation activity, high point for business and professional women came in June of this year when President Kennedy signed into law the equal pay bill-a part of the BPW platform for more than 20 years.

The organization came into being in 1918 when the YWCA's War Work Council called together a group of business and professional women who were asked to suggest how working women might be more effectively utilized in the wartime economy. Wars end might have ended the group, but club women and government officials alike felt that such an organization would be a national asset in the The group held its first convention in the summer of 1919 and established the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. From the beginning the federation sought not only expanded economic opportunity for women and the promotion of their welfare, but the improvement of women's preparation for business and professions. It has continually fought economic discrimination against women and has encouraged the penetration by women

BUSINESS WOMEN'S Week was established to give every community an opportunity to reflect on the contributions of women workers to the economy and to give working women an opportunity for self-

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

This Man Is a Real Danger

DEAR ABBY: I could write a book about my nine years of married life. My husband had a very unhappy childhood, and he's been taking it out on me and the children. He tried to kill me once. He choked me until I was unconscious, and then left me for dead, Not one to hold a grudge I forgave. him and he promised to do better. Then he lost his temper again and chased me with a butcher knife. I had to run to the neighbors for help. It was then that my clergyman explained that my husband was sick and I should stick with him in sickness and in health. My husband promised to see a head doctor, but he keeps stalling. Abby, I can't sleep for worrying what he will pull next. I have five little ones who hide when they see him coming down the road. Can you help me?--

FRIGHTENED BUT FAITHFUL DEAR FAITHFUL: Your "faithfulness" is commendable, but while your husband is "stalling," they could be burying you. Don't live in fear with this man another day. Your local police can provide you with protection and force your husband to submit to a mental examination.

DEAR ABBY: I work and draw a good salary. My problem is one of my bosses. While he is a flirt with all the girls, he singles me out. If there is a disagreement, he takes my side. I have ignored him for a long time, but I feel attracted to him. I am married and so is he, I only think about him when I am around him. I love my husband and can't understand why I am attracted to my boss. I don't intend to let this goany farther as I am decent and respect my marriage. Should I leave my job? Or will I get over this feeling in time? Eve never encouraged him, but the feeling is there.--IN DANGER

DEAR IN: If you can't see the handwriting on the wall, you need glasses. Quit your job.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who would like nothing better than to waste my entire morning just talking on the telephone. Is there a way to bring a telephone conversation to an abrupt end without being downright rude?—BURNED UP DEAR BURNED UP: Yes. Say. "Goodbye -- I think I smell something burning," (You!)

DEAR ABBY; You will probably never print this, but I hope you do. We have some new neighbors. This morning the man of the family rapped on my back door and asked me if I planned to hang my wash up today. He said if I did, he would not burn his trash until femorrow. I was so touched by such a considerate act that I broke right down and cried. -- "AP-PRECIATIVE"

Trio at Museum

Fall and winter film and concert series at Long Beach Museum of Art opens Thursday with chamber music by the Di Tullio Trio. Joseph Di Tullio, cellist, Louise Di Tullio, flutist; and Virginia Di Tullio Royer, pianist, have planned a program including works of Bach, Lotti, Debussy, Haubiel and Rhoemheld.

The public is invited to these concerts and film showings at no charge. Museum doors open at 7:30 and concerts begin at 8 p.m.

The Seal Beach Artists' while her use of green, blue, League opened its Fall Mem- orange, and yellow color bership Show Saturday at planes with calligraphy unthe gallery on Main Street mistakably derive from the Cunningham School of Monand Ocean Avenue, and will terey via Cay Draknic, her Museum art staff.

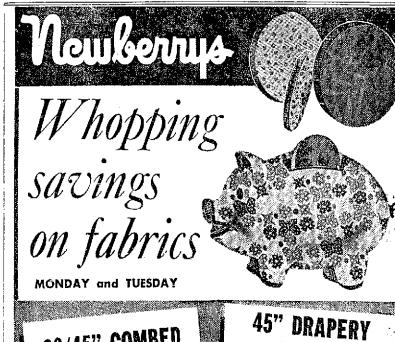

There are the expected scapes and seascapes, some sparkly, some indifferent. One watercolor, "Tranquil Pond" by Aline Thistlewaite, is particularly ingratiating with its lilies and pads in soft wash, Audre Hutchins' "Street Scene" is a bouncy watercolor in fresh wet-on-wet technique.

AMONG THESE artists is a modicum of concern with pure abstraction or action painting. One large clown could fall into the "Pop Art" category, though I doubt if he were intended that way.

Vesta Carton's "South of the Border" in glazed casein is a refreshing primitive with a panoramic hillside broken into areas with black line, each space containing some characteristic activity; colorful parrot almost perches on the viewer's left shoulder.

It is not difficult to see why sales from this gallery have increased remarkably in the last year. This is art without pretense or agony which offers a great deal to the average viewer (if there is such a person).

MATSI

Yours FREE—at many dealers—for just looking and listening! Four colorful, plastic-covered, washable place mats feature famous Walt Disney characters—Tinker Bell, Sword in the Stone, Snow White, Ludwig Von Drake. On the reverse side, a smart, plain tan linen pattern (without any imprint). To get the mats, grownups just visit one of many RCA Victor dealers featuring the mats and ask for a TV or stereo demonstration.

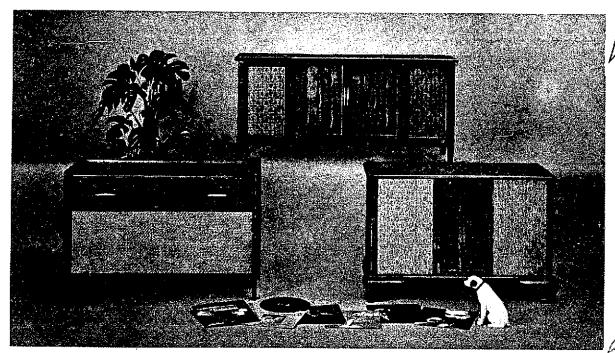

A FREE Rollabout TV Stand is yours at many dealers when you purchase any 1964 current-line model in the 19-inch tube (overall diagonal—172 square-inch picture) Sportabout Portable TV Series. Watch TV anywhere in the house, on the patio or porch. Series has telescoping VHF antenna, plus loop antenna on UHF models, eliminating need for outside antenna in many areas. Rugged New Vista chassis, with Space Age Sealed Circuitry, brings in pictures sharp and clear, even from many hard-to-get stations. Static-free FM sound. Shown at right, the Roommate and the Highlander.

OLLYWOOD (UPI)-Now they're going to put a Martian on television.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. today (Sunday) televiewers will have the opportunity to watch a citizen of Mars bounce around the screen. But they will be disappointed if they expect to see a monster with eight legs, one eye and tenta-

The title role of "My Favorite Martian" is played by a human being; an actor, in fact,

His name is Ray Walston. While he is normal in most other respects he has been endowed with the ability to disappear, read minds and talk to dogs.

No special makeup will be applied to Ray's friendly kisser except for a pair of antennae which sprout from his head just before he does one of his disappearing acts.

EARTHLING WALSTON, a product of the Actor's Studio in New York, likes the idea of playing a Martian.

"Our Martian is a nice guy with a marve-lous Philosophy of life," the actor said during a break in filming the CBS-TV newcomer. The has a sense of humor and a kindly attitude loward this planet,

"He is stranded on earth when his flying saucer crashes, and is befriended by a friendly newspaper man. The show gives us a chance to say something about contemporary American life that hasn't been attempted on TV before.

"As a visitor from another planet he can make some objective observations about the pace of living and values we put on things."

THE SHOW WILL NOT venture into such controversies as United States-USSR foreign relations, the atom bomb or the racial situa-tion. But Walston hopes it will have some worthwhile comments to make along with the situation comedy gags.

Perhaps because he is a method actor, Walston half-believes in Martians and feels compelled to play Uncle Martian, as he is called the series, as if he were for real.

"It's necessary for me to believe in this Martian in order to play him convincingly," Walston said. "If viewers don't accept him as a real being from Mars, then the whole basis of the show is ruined.

"As for myself, I lean toward the helief that there is life on other planets, It's essential that I do for this characterization."

A dedicated actor, Walston has starred on Broadway in "Summer and Smoke," "Richard the Third" and "The Rat Race." He's appeared in a handful of movies and many television shows. But this is his first series.

"One reason I accepted the show was to prove to my daughter Kate (10 years old) that outer space might be populated by something other than monsters which scare her witless, Walston concluded.

Rooney Son Meets 'Aunt Millie'

Sara Haden in 1934 began her appearances as Aunt Millie in the "Andy Hardy" movies starring Mickey Roo-

On Wednesday she appears on 'Day in Court' at 2:30 p.m. on channel 7. Involved in the court case is 13-year-old Teddy Rooney, Mickey's son.

Teddy is the same age Mickey was when he started the 'Andy Hardy" series.

Bert's Eye View

bhogene Coca is not one to duck an issue.

"I knew I'd have to face it sooner or later," she said. She spoke sofily but with dramatic emphasis. Seated on a couch in her "Grindl" set dressing room, she leaned forward with restrained excitement,

"You see," she said, "I had the duck for eight weeks—it was a duckling when I got it for an Easter present.
"I love animals but I'm scared to death when they fight.

"I was petrified at the thought of the duck meeting my cat but I knew they would so I finally brought them together."

AT THE RECOLLECTION, Imogene's eyes widened like Eddie Cantor singing "Susie." Then she smiled.
"Well," she said, "the duck spread her wings and my cat practically fainted.

"For the longest time my cat was really a nervous wreck. "But he's better now. He's compensated for his fear of the duck by finding he can climb trees."

She paused, obviously very happy that the meeting of the cat and duck had not proved a catastrophe.

"OF COURSE," she said, "my grandmother had a way with animals, too.

"She used to raise cats and canaries.

"And do you know my grandmother's cats never chased birds!"

Grandmother, it seemed, had a secret. She called it her "magic-needle" approach.
"You see," said Imogene, "my grandmother always kepi needles hidden around the house.

"Well, if she'd see one of her cats trying to get into a canary cage, she'd go 'plink' with her needle.
"The cats would never chase birds after that."

I CHASED IMOGENE to a different subject, "Grindl," the NBC-TV series in which she Sunday night plays a jill-of-all-trades who encounters more perils than Pauline.
"To tell the truth," admitted Imogene, "I haven't yet watched myself on television in the new series.

But a friend of mine saw the opener.

"She called me afterwards and told me my hair looked nice." Imogene smiled with the delight of a child being presented an after-dinner lollipop.

"As a matter of fact," said Imogene, "she told me my hair never looked better."

She reached up a little self-consciously and patted her hair, then shifted her position on the couch.

"You know," she said, "when we first started shooting the series on stage 7 there were two cats there who were practically wildcars.

Well, I started feeding them and they got tamer and

Weekend wranglers rope jackpots in Long Beach and at other Southland locations in a sport that dredges up a passel of excitement for participants as well as spectators. Wherever there's a corral it's almost a sure bet there'll be cowpokes-private citizens in peaceful pursuits all week, but hellfor-leather riders when the chutes are opened and the chips are down.

Hobbyists all, these horsey folk, like golfers, bowlers, fishermen and such. Their sport is rough and there is danger, too-but, if you can't take it, you don't do it. That's how it is. Roger Coar's camera captures a bit of the action for today's cover, and there is more about these weekend cowboys, from roping to rail-sitting, on Page 7.

Lost treasure and the search for it have intrigued the minds of men down through the centuries, especially of lost mines, and Southland next week tells about one of these and the desert rat who was slain for his secret-but who took the secret with him to his unceremonious grave. Perhaps some rockhound will stumble across this old digging some day, but in the meantime there remains "The Lost Silver Mine of the Moiave.'

White House Birthdays

By Olive Breed

YEARS in which each of the American presidents were born made a great difference in the problems and conditions each faced, but whether the birth months mattered probably is unanswerable. However, some interesting groupings occurred, and if past history continues, perhaps small boys with White House ambitions might remember that 27 of the 34 who made the grade were born between October and April, inclusive From May through September. seven claim birthdays.

Of these born in October, two came in with the country's slimmest majorities; John Adams (2nd) became "president by 3 votes," and Rutherford B, Hayes (19th) was the president by a vote of 185 to 184. Chester A. Arthur (21st), elected vice president, served all but six months and 15 days of one presidential term, and was not re-elected. Theodore Roosevelt was the first vice president to be elected for a full term after succeeding to the higher office. Dwight D, Eisenhower (34th), on the other hand, served two full terms with decisive majori-

Of the five born in November, three died in office, the other two were elected for only one term each; James K. Polk (11th), one the first "dark term, was the first "dark horse" candidate; Zachary Taylor (12th), died after 16 months in office; Franklin Pierce (14th) served four years; James A. Garfield (20th) lived six months and 15 days of his term; Warren G. Harding (29th), our "orator president," was president two years before his fatal illness.

DECEMBER, January and February have three each.

Of three born in December, Martin Van Buren (8th), served one term; Andrew Johnson (17th), was not reelected after finishing all but one month of Lincoln's second term; Woodrow Wilson (28th), Nobel Peace prize winner, was elected two full terms.

Born in January: Millard Fillmore (13th) completed almost three years of the Taylor - Fillmore elected term; William McKinley (2.5 th) lived six months after his second election; Franklin D. Roosevelt (32nd only president elected more than twice, lived but one month of his fourth term.

Washington's February birthday is the only presi-in our legal, national eight holidays, Another of his ex-clusive honors was being unanimously elected; William H. Harrison (9th) was the son of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the grandfather of another president. He served the shortest of any (31 days), having con-tracted pneumonia during the inaugural ceremonies, Lincoln (16th) lived slightly longer than a month of his second term. His birthday is commemorated as a public holiday in 34 states. Among the best known and most fre-quent quotations of our language are many from his speeches. The last sentence of his second inaugural address has become classic:

"With malice toward none with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive to finish the work we are in . . ."

IN MARCH, James Madison (4th) was first of three 2-term presidents, the war of 1812 occurring during his administration; Andrew Jackson (7th) initiated the national nominating convention to supersede the congressional caucus, and for his second term was the first president to be nominated by this na-tional convention; John Tyler (10th) became president 31 days after his election as vice president—not re-nominated; Grover Cleveland (22nd and 24th) won a partial victory between his two terms by receiving a majority of the popular votes, then lost in the electors' ballot.

April-born Thomas Jefferson (3rd) was the first president to be elected by the House of Representatives because the electoral vote was a tie. He was re-elected. James Monroe (5th) received a unanimous vote for a second term, then one vote was diverted so that Washington might be the only president so elected. Monroe also in-herited the War of 1812 debt of $120,000,000 and retired more than half of it during his first term. His eight years in office have been designated as among the most peace-ful in our history; James Buchanan (15th), only bachefor president, announced in his inaugural address that he was not a candidate for reelection and his acts were not politically motivated. He also stated that the Treasury surplus was embarrassingly large, Ulysses S. Grant (18th) was given all the electoral votes in his second election, his opponent having died before the electors met,

MAY, JULY and August supplied two presidents each:

May birthdays go to the 33rd and 35th presidents; during Harry Tuman's in-cumbency the 22nd Amend-ment, limiting one man to two terms, became law. The current White House resident claims May as a birth month.

July's John Quincy Adams (6th) was the second and last chief executive to be chosen by the House of Representatives, no candidate receiving a majority. His was also the first election for which the popular vote was recorded; Calvin Coolidge (30th) was the second man to be elected vice president, succeed to the presidency, then be reelected.

Both August born presi-(Continued on Page 25)

When Paris Plays

"IRMA LA DOUCE," a Billy Wilder production about the girls and their men who populate the less respectable streets of Paris at night, comes to Long Beach movie houses this week with Shirley Mac-Laine and Jack Lemmon as the stars.

Lemmon, a member of the Paris police force, is assigned to the rough Les Halles marketplace where he meets Miss MacLaine, one of the girls operating in the district. He falls in love with her.

The plot moves rapidly—but lightly—through a raid on the streetwalkers, Lemmon's invention of another identity—Lord X—to hold Miss MacLaine's love, and Lemmon's "murder" of Lord X, his conviction, and his escape from jail.

A bright new music score by Andre Previn is introduced in "Irma La Douce," in which Bruce Yarnell, Lou Jacobi and Hope. Holiday also have important roles. It is filmed in Technicolor and Panavision.

Life among streetwalkers: Miss MacLaine gives her rival a well-placed kick in a fit of jealousy.

Billie and Helen Hicks, 3508 Knoxville, have two adopted children, Randy, 5, and Lindy Ann. 2. Helen keeps the street "rolling" on acts of compassion, so no one was surprised to learn that she and Billie had adopted an orphan in Korea Neither were the Hicks surprised when the street insisted on joining their Project Orphan, means To Be A True Servant), was born of unidentified parents in Kyung Sang Nam Do, and was brought to the Holy Land Christian Orphanage in October 1961, through the Pusen City Hall.

Adoption papers are sent to sponsors who pay $10 a month for the support of an orphan. When parcels are received at the home, a picture of the child with the packages is sent to the American parents. If he is old enough, the child writes to his mother and father, otherwise a staff member will do so.

Winters in Korea are cold, so the group is now making warm quilts filled with discarded sheet blankets, pieces of blanket and other offerings. The Hick's home is the gathering place for knit mit-tens, felt slippers, quilt patches and children's outgrown coats and sweaters.

Every other Thursday evening the women meet to sew and make plans for the orphans, Everyone is welcome, "Many of the women donate 50 cents for the privilege of sewing for this project. That is for postage to mail the articles, so no one minds," Helen said.

RICKY GILLS, aged 10, is president of the neighborhood children's club. By doing yard work and running errands, the club has earned $10 this summer. Ricky proudly offered the combined carnings of the children to be sent to Korea, "It will take care of an orphan for a whole month," he said.

Doris Wilde's talent show, starring the neighborhood children was the hit of the July 4 block party and added $14 to the orphan fund. She is now making plans for a toy collection drive, Helen Hicks and her chief constituents, Joan Smith, Annie Gills, and Rose Wright, are now selling tickets for a turkey dinner and dance on December 6. The public will be invited.

It appears that Knoxville Avenue is adopting an orphanage.

More than 3,000 orphans in Korea still need sponsors. Anyone wishing clothing, may send it directly to Post Chaplain TSAPAC, APO 18, San Francisco, Write COMPASSION on the lower left hand corner of the box and it will be sent duty free.

Weekend Cowboys Rope the Jackpot!

By Helen Graham

UNDREDS of motorists view a bit of rodeo fun every weekend without even knowing it where Wardlow Road arches over the Long Beach Mounted Guard arena by the Los Angeles River. Those who want a longer glimpse are welcome to circle back and join the relaxed spectators around the Jackpot roping is a holdout of the man's world of old-time rural America, corralled within the Long Beach city limits at 3400 Golden Ave. Today's cowboys ride the freeways, and their horses follow on wheels. The men who enjoy this rugged sport are not wealthy playboys, but avid hobbyists with a highly developed skill which combines the delicate precision of a Sunday golfer with the mansized muscle of the Old West.

The weekend cow pokes bring their own fine horses from all over the countryside . . . Montebello, Bellflower, Chino, El Monte, Ventura . . . in about a 50-mile radius. Often there is a tagalong contingent of blue-jeaned offspring and wives, some of whom are champion riders in their own right. From 20 to 30 is an average turnout of weekend ropers, and spectators sit on car fenders or spare mounts as box seats around the corral. No fancy dudes or show-off silver mountings here; just an informal coterie of competent riders on skilled roping horses matching mind and muscle for an occasional cash win.

AMATEUR HORSEMEN and a few ex-rodeo performers, now tethered on weekdays to such mundane grub stakes as carpentry, masonry, eggcrating, real estate, contracting and highway construction, may, in jackpot roping contests, loose the reins in a fast-paced dust-up with the Herefords Wednesday nights and Saturday and Sunday after-

One jackpot can run up to $100 with 20 or more riders contributing, and a team of two steer ropers can win it, but entry fees for the afternoon's sport may have been $15 to $30, so that a contestant feels on top of the game if he just breaks even. He can go home with a sizeable purse. The losers, however, only consider that the y have bought a good afternoon's fun, practice and experience in the sport they love.

A dozen or so similar arenas hold jackpot rop-A dozen or so similar arenas hold jackpot top-ing contests—Rolling Hills, Canoga Park, Topanga, Thousand Oaks and Ventura—but Long Beach with its clubhouse, snack bar and corral area for the roper's children offers some added inducements to make the sport a family outing as well. Behind the "penthouse" or timing booth tiny youngsters are busy looping their own little ropes over each oth-er's heads or fence posts, content to spend all aft-ernoon absorbing the redolent aura of horsemania and a pride in Daddy's rugged skill.

OILING THE MACHINERY of the Long Beach roping contests are Bill and Lenell Benoist, 2972 Cedar Ave. Their famed Appaloosa horse-breeding hobby mounts Bill handsomely for roping competition. Lenell, assisted by lovely ropers' brides Ann

Team roping takes two men into action, one to rope the steer's horns and the other to snag his heels. Above, Bill Benoist and Ray McCarroll team up in a bit of action. Ropers always draw many onlookers.

they snake a loop at, with the rest of the entry fee going up for grabs in the jackpot.

There are two kinds of contests. Most popular is partners' steer roping. One man, the "header," ropes the steer's horns to get him positioned for the "heeler" to throw his loop over the hind legs, thus holding the white-face immobile. The automatic starting gate begins the timing and the field judge drops his red flag to signal a "fair catch." Lenell and the girls in the timing booth tally with stopwatches and announce the time

Calf roping, on the other hand, is a one-man show where the rider must rope a racing critter, throw him, and tie three legs with a pigging string while the stopwatch measures his skill.

A ROUGH SPORT? Sure, but a sprained wrist, finger fracture or a cracked rib in a man's world like this one, is shrugged off. Often bandaged limbs are hung carelessly in a sling while the sidelined rider sits on his horse to watch the competition. Age is no factor here, and some ropers are over 70, competing equally with teen-agers. It's considered a relaxing sport. As Bill Benoist puts it, "Where else can you get a massage and rubdown built into the entertainment?"

The requirements are a sense of rhythm basic to all athletics, good horsemanship, and a fierce desire to build, twirl and cast that loop on a fastflying Hereford. It takes as long to learn championship roping as championship golf, bowling or tennis, depending on the individual, his talent and men are separated from the rail-sitters. If you are contemplating entry in the competition, it's a case of a kingdom for a horse, unless you can borrow one. A well-trained roping horse can bring from $1 to $10 thousand, but a $150 colt you train yourself can win you a jackpot, too. The mount must be stabled and cared for, unless you own a couple of acres yourself. Then there is another thousand or so for a horse trailer. A rope is pretty special, so you pay from $5 to $8 and put it in a $20 insulated round can to keep it limber and at just the right temperature. Saddle and other equipment will run another $300. Now you're in business, ready to compete in the next jackpot go-round for whatever cash it yields.

However, if you get really good in the local competition, you go on to the Oakville, Calif., roping contests in which the prize money can total $36,000 in the three-day event, which ain't hay even to a roping horse!

BUT NO REAL horseman talks much about the expense, or if he does it's defensive: "Yes, but look what a high-powered boating hobby costs, how crowded the marinas are, and how many more months you get to enjoy the year-round roping sport. And if you like horses, this is where you

No matter how you slice it, a roper on a good horse with perhaps his family watching from the fence, has made his investment where it pays off most handsomely—putting him right where he most wants to be, with the people, the atmosphere and the competition he loves-jackpot riding.

Speed and coordination between man and horse are essentials in the sport of jackpot roping, a pastime ensteers), and ropers pay a fee of $1 for each animal joyed by weekend cowboys in long Beach as well as at several Southland corrals. Above, Bill Pellam ropes a calls.

The Strange Case of the Lover in the Attic

Fate set the stage for one of weirdest murder mysteries

TDALE AND gaunt from his 20-year incarceration in a windowless attic, Otto Sanhuber, known as "The Little Man in the Attic," nervously fingered his hat as he sat quietly facing the bar of justice. One of the strangest crime epics of the 20th century . . . a fetish love affair that ended in murder . . . was about to be revealed to the world.

It was June 11, 1930, and an expectant stillness fell over the Los Angeles County superior courtroom as Judge Hardy took the bench. The "Attic Hermit" was on trial for his Blinking as though the lights were hurting his weakened eyes, he took the stand and replied brokenly to District Attorney Costello's questioning. In a thin, thready voice he began recounting the uncanny events that led up to the killing of Fred Oesterreich, a wealthy Los Angeles manufacturer.

COSTELLO began the questioning in the usual manner.

"Where and when were you born?"

"I don't know, sir," came the besitaling reply. . . . I was abandoned as a baby . . . and left on a doorstep . . . I'm not quite sure where, sir . . . maybe in Milwaukee . . . about 1890,

Ashen and undernourished, he huddled in the witness stand as further questioning began to unfold more of the weird story. It had begun about 1908 back in Milwaukee. He had struck up a friendship with young Raymond Oesterreich (pronounced "O-strike"), Fred Oesterreich's teenage son. Deprived of a family life, Otto was happy to be welcomed into the home as a visitor by the pleasingly attractive (then in her 30s) Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich,

As a friend of her son she treated him warmly, giving him the freedom of the home. Soon he began to think of her as "the most wonderful wom-an in the world," Fate was already setting the stage for murder when Raymond, the Oesterreichs' only son, died suddenly, leaving Walburga hidden charms in his younger years. for soon their warm friendship turned Oesterreich did not share his wife's attraction for the undersized Apollo, so it became necessary for them to arrange secret meetings when Fred was away at work. One afternoon he returned home unexpectedly and Sanhuber made for the attic where he remained in hiding for the night. The arrangement worked out very well because, from then on, Otto lived in

With rough boards he fashioned himself a windowless cubicle with one small electric light. His snug little nest was just big enough for him to stretch out in and house his few precious belongings . . a stack of paperback murder mysteries and two small

EVENTUALLY his status in the household became a combination hermit-chore hoy-lover. Acting as a houseboy during the day, dusting, cleaning and waiting on his lovely lady; then in the evening before Oesterreich was due to arrive home, he would beat a hasty retreat to his attic. There, in his neat little hide away, he would lapse into an imaginary world of mystery stories and makebelieve gunplay.

Questioned as to why he kept the guns, Sanhuber related that occasionally, when it was safe, he would go out for a short walk at night and that the guns would "make me feel big." The Oesterreichs moved five times during the 20-year romance and each time Mrs. Oesterreich went househunting with a purpose. She must find a suitable attic for her little lover. She was always successful, but when they moved to California and began looking for a home in Los Angelcs, it wasn't easy to find one with a garret. Southern California did not lend itself to attics. But eventually one was found and they all moved Mrs. Oesterreich, her husband and the phantom attic-dweller!

INCUBATING in his neat little nest during the long evenings, with his guns and mystery stories, he began to vision himself as his lady's protector. He could see himself as a hero maybe rescuing her from a prowler or a burglar . . . maybe even sav-ing her from the violence of her own

Then, one night, events combined in true Agarha Christie style which provided him with his opportunity to become a hero. Fred and Walburga had been out for the evening and returned about midnight From his listening post at the top of the stairs he heard a scream! His blood curdled with the thought that his beloved might be suffering at the hands of her husband and he brandished his guns and dashed down to the rescue.

The scuffle that followed left Fred Oesterreich stretched out on the floor dead, with three bullets in his body, One had penetrated the heart. Mrs. Oesterreich, who had not been at-tacked by her husband but had cried out in pain when she had slipped on a throw-rug, spraining her ankle, sat motionless on the floor where she had fallen. She was stunned and hopelessly confused. But the Little Fellow again came to the rescue,

HIS KNOWLEDGE of mystery stories came in handy and he ordered his idol to go to a closet at the rear of the house. Locking her in, he instructed her to tap on the door with her shoe and call out for help. When help arrived she was to say that a burglar had shot her husband and locked her in the closet.

This worked out just as planned and although there was a thorough investigation following the tragedy, Mrs. Oesterreich was cleared of suspicion and the attic-dweller was un-

After the investigation, the strange pair settled back into their regular routine . . . a routine that both of them had begun to accept as normal. Otto had grown accustomed to his tiny quarters, feeling safe and shel-tered from the world and content to continue his services as a little helper around the house. It might have been said that they lived happily ever after but for further complications. . . .

MRS. OESTERREICH became fearful that the guns might some day be discovered in the household and she persuaded the Little Man to break them up into small pieces, file off the serial numbers and she would have them disposed of.

Never at a loss for "friends," Wal-burgu, on two different occasions, asked men friends to do away with the fragments. A lover's quarrel with one of these friends some years later caused him to go to the police and another investigation followed that linked Mrs. Oesterreich with the killing and smoked out the Little Man in the Attic.

After her arrest, the always resourceful Mrs. Oesterreich engaged the famous Hollywood attorney Jerry Giesler as her lawyer and was eventually released because of lack of evidence.

BUT SANHUBER gave what amounted to a confession to the grand jury and was held over for trial in superior court. On the witness stand, however, he repudiated his former statements and claimed innocence of the killing. The gun fragments had been dug up but were unidentifiable and could not directly link him with the crime. He consistently claimed that he had never left his cubicle on the night of the murder and that burglars must have done the shoot-

He presented such a pitiable and tragic picture that the jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter rather than murder. It was eight years after the actual shooting had occurred and the three-year statute of limitation on the manslaughter charge prevented his imprisonment. The judge dismissed the case and he was set free.

The Many Lives of

. . . the developer who first opened offices in Long Beach, later had an L.A. boulevard named after him . . .

H. Gaylord Wilshire

By Roberta Murray

THE YOUTHFUL manager of the Long Beach Development Co. had just opened offices in the $50,000 Long Beach Hotel in 1887 and was the subject of much speculation among mothers of marriageable daughters.

"He's Henry Gaylord Wilshire. Gay, they call him. Isn't that Vandyke beard distinguished? They say he's single—and wealthy. Harvard man such a gentleman...divine dancer."

But the fathers of these dayshters probable.

But the fathers of those daughters probably said, "The Wilshires, father and sons, have invested a fortune in Southern California real estate. They're real go-getters, especially Gay. Wants to put a ladies' billiard room in the hotel. Imagine. Next we'll have a saloon in this dry town."

One thing puzzled them though. "Sometimes he talks like a Socialist. But with that money he

HE COULD BE and was. Ideas radiated from him as from a Fourth of July sparkler. If he wasn't advocating government ownership of the trusts, he was promoting the sale of Long Beach property all the way to Rattlesnake (Terminal) Island at a neat profit. Ocean-front lots in "Peerless Long Beach" sold for $25 down and $25 six months later. Future improvements would include piped-in water, sidewalks, electric illumination and a 100-foor-wide "Grand Pacific Boulevard."

The wide boulevard was probably Gay's idea, because wherever he had a hand in city planning, his first thought was of adequate thoroughfares. Spacious Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles and Commonwealth Avenue in Fullerton are other testimonials to his foresight.

Already Gay and his brother William, vice president of the development company, had a commitment from the Southern Pacific Railroad magnate, Col. Crocker, to build a line replacing the ridiculous "teakettle" service, (Crocker was the father of a young woman whom Gay had escorted about during a stay in San Francisco. While no serious romance had blossomed, a profitable business association with papa did.) According to Los Angeles County Supervisors' records, "H. G. Wilshire was granted a right of way along 2nd Street shire was granted a right of way along 2nd Street from Maine to the Alamitos line" in 1887. This was probably the forerunner of the Southern Pacific line to Long Beach.

IN THE DOLDRUMS since the collapse of Willmore's American Colony in 1884, the little beach town needed Gay's spirited promotion if Crocker's prophecy were to become a fact—that "Long Beach would become the resort of the south as Monterey is of the north." It also needed the plush Long Beach Hotel to attract the monied people, socialities, and occasionally even recally. The ple, socialites, and occasionally even royalty. The Long Beach Journal did its bit by publicizing guest lists and faithfully describing the gowns of the ladies who attended the gala balls.

The town was on the brink of a big boom. The hotel was to be enlarged. The Wilshires built a cottage on Pine Avenue and the Journal reported that the elder Wilshire would soon erect a fine brick business building nearby.

Then in 1888 the hotel burned. Lawsuits and a series of disheartening legal difficulties beset the development company. It began to look as if the hotel would not be rebuilt. And without it, Gay reasoned, Long Beach could not expect to become the cosmopolitan cultural center that he had en-

H. Gaylord Wilshire was a figure prominent in the early history of Long Beach.

HIS FRIENDS, Count Charles Bozenta Chilapowski and Madame Modjeska, who came from their Trabuco Canyon home in summer to enjoy the beach at Anaheim Landing, gave glowing accounts of a new tract which was opening up in what is now Orange County. It looked like a good business venture and it would bring Gay miles closer to the Modjeska home which attracted many artists and intellectuals of the day.

So Gay Wilshire invested in and helped lay out a town with streets wide enough to serve a burgeoning population for years to come. The town was Fullerton, and he is considered one of its founding fathers.

For about a year he lived nearby, operating ranches and experimenting with various crops, among them the grapefruit, which he is said to have introduced to this area.

Old-timers who still remembered the laboring Butterfield stagecoach with its hardbitten drivers, eventually grew used to a new sight, that of Wil-shire's tallyho which he used to transport his friends to the Modjeska home.

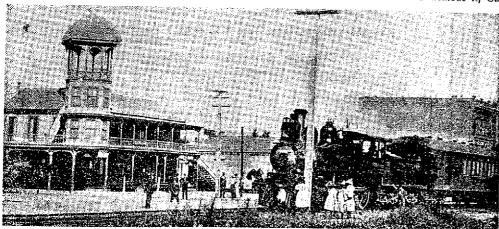

ROADS WERE winding, rutted and narrow, but the liveried driver of the coach sat tall and dignified, as if he were taking his lord through a pleasant English countryside. As the house came into sight, the guard stood up in the careening vehicle and gave a horn blast piercing enough to flush the mountain lions from their lairs.

Strangely this cultural and intellectual atmo-sphere did nothing to dim Gay's ardor for socialism. It was not so much that he wanted to be poor with his fellow man, but that he wanted to be poor with his fellow man, but that he wanted every man to have as much as he. But share he did, through "The Challenge," a Socialist newspaper which he launched, pouring a small fortune into it rather than make it self-supporting through realistic subscription rates realistic subscription rates.

In 1890, he unsuccessfully ran for Congress on the Socialist ticket, and the same year went to England where he lived for several years.

Wilshire helped bring a railroad to Long Beach but didn't stay to see it in operation. He moved on to Fullerton where he assisted in laying out that community. Above, rail terminal at Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Ave., 1882.

ANY TIMES Mr. and Mrs. James Miller passed by the old Spanish two-story home at 4030 Virginia Road before they decided to purchase it. They guessed (and they were right) that the house was about 40 years old; structurally, it was in excellent condition but needed a touch of paint here and there. The corner lot had much to offer.

An archway to the left of the entry leads to the dining room. Here, an antique marble-topped commode with a handsome gold-framed mirror above is in perfect company with the Italian furniture. An antique French cabinet is in one corner. The graceful lines of a large oval window in the room are maintained with white drapes that curve around the top rather than run in a straight line. Austrian valances decorate other windows.

A favorite room in the home is the solarium off the living room. Furniture here is upholstered with mattress ticking. Potted plants are here and there in this delightful, sunny room.

DOWNSTAIRS rooms include a large, spacious kitchen, an adjoining butler's pantry or dinette, a paneled service porch and a powder room. The latter is papered with gold figured wallpaper; has an attractive chandelier hanging from the ceiling; features a round wash basin with gold dolphin fixtures—it is a tiny room filled with imaginative decorating. Also downstairs is a large bedroom with an entry to the garden.

Older homes such as this one seem to be full of surprises. For example, at the head of the stairs to the left is a tiny balcony. Also, leading out from French doors in one of the bedrooms is another balcony. Bedrooms are spacious; so are the walk-in closets.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

With the Virtue of Simplicity

RDER is a lovely thing, a poet once said, and in today's rush to find something new, something different in home design, it is refreshing to discover a house where genuine elegance is the result of plain simplicity.

"There is nothing tricky about this house," said architect Fenick A. Vogel, who designed it. "Just a straightforward plan that should appeal to home buyers who are thinking about tomorrow as well as today.'

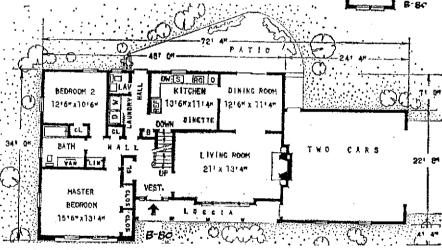

House of the Week B-80 does, simply and economically, solve the age-old design problem of providing for the usually obscure needs of the

By Jules Loh

THIS IS ONE of its additional advantages, however. Its main appeal lies in its honest and logical answer to the needs of the present-up to the minute design both in-Center half planning in both front and rear is the key to excellent traffic in the floor plans here. Second floor, upper right, can be finished little at a time.

Bird Feeder Easily Made

NE WHO enjoys watching birds and listening to their songs will find a simple bird feeder is a way to invite them to come to the yard and stay a while,

A shallow can, measuring about five inches across and few inches deep, and two wire clothes hangers are the materials.

Set the can inside the clothes hanger, Pull the hook upward, pressing the wire tightly to each side of the can. Then force the wire outward from the top of the can, usng a firm thumb or a pincer to bend the wire at right angle. Shape both wire hangers the same way, (See diagram.)

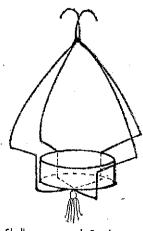

THEN PLACE one hanger crosswise within the other and tape together tightly below the hooks and also where the hangers cross at the base.

Place the can inside the frame of wire. Wind a strip of tape across the wires and around the can, both at the top and base of the can to hold the wire frame rigid.

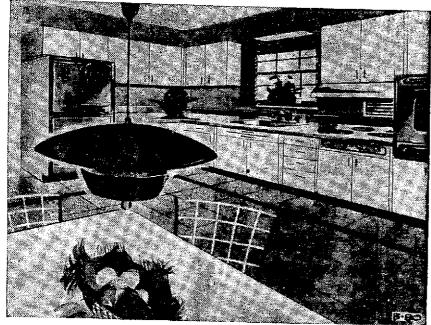

Add a cup of wild bird seed to the can and hang it high out of the way of cats. Put it where you can see it from a window. Before very long you will see your first curious and hungry visitors: Some-how they tell their friends and many more birds will come.

When they stop coming you will know that the seeds are all shelled out. Empty the can of the hulls and add another cup of wild bird seed if you wish to be entertained by hungry songsters.

Shallow can and 2 wire coat hangers are materials for a simple bird feeder. Diagram shows how to do the basics.

All housekeeping facilities, including first-floor laundry, are centered at the service end of the house. This is artist's conception of the very efficient kitchen.

side and out, uncluttered by gimmicks or frills that often add much to the cost with little corresponding increase in livability.

With its upstairs unfinished, B-80 is a two-bedroom, $1\frac{1}{2}$ bath home with 1,380 square feet of living area in dimensions of 48x34 feet, not counting the double garage which adds 24 feet 4 inches to the width.

Finishing the upstairs, which could be done a portion at a time as the extra space is needed, would add 1,034 square feet to the total.

THE FORMAL living coom, a comfortable 21 feet by 13 feet 4 inches, is highlighted not only by a large fireplace but also by a bay window which provides indoor enjoyment of the delightful front porch, or loggia, which plainly is one of the most attractive exterior features of the house.

The exterior walls are shingle, with accents of stone and board and batten. The dormer and cupola pleasantly complement the loggia.

Aside from the spacious bedroom closets (one a walkin), note the handy location of the broom closet and both linen closets, plus the coat closet in the front vestibule and the storage closet adjoining the laundry. The 24 foot 4 inch by 22 foot 8 inch garage contains extra space in both directions, and the full basement provides almost unlimited storage space.

THE SECOND floor addition (which could, of course, be completed from the start) is the bargain kind, its ceiling and walls a part of the basic house structure.

Center hall planning in two directions results in a traffic pattern in this house which, again, is simple and direct.

The service hall at the rear leads into the bedroom hall opening up all areas of the house from that direction; and the main entrance vestibule accomplishes the same result from the front of the house without wasting additional hall space.

Entering the house from the outside likewise has been well planned for convenience—in all kinds of weather.

Doors at both corners of the garage permit driving and entering the house through the front door (under the covered loggia porch) or the rear, either through the service entrance or the sliding glass patio doors in the dining room.

The kitchen features the L-shaped plan for its work area, long recognized as a step-saving design, and is large enough to accommodate a dinette which doesn't interfere with traffic through the room.

Salad Pie a Meal in Itself!

By Mildred K. Flanary Southland Magazine Home Economics Caffer

There are pies-and there are pies! But the big food news today is an easy-as-pie salad pie, a delectable main course.

Into the baked shell goes a variety of fillings. all of which contain diced cooked meat and vegetables or other gastronomic companions. The advantages are obvious: a complete mealin-a-pie dish that looks handsome, tastes superb, and can be made in advance of the company or family meal.

Equally tasty and fetching is the Fruited Chiffon Pie illustrated today. The happy secret of both pies is the presence of reliable unfalvored gelatine. Once dissolved, the gelatine combines with the other ingredients and simply chills until done.

Following are the recipes for both:

Easy-As-Pie Chicken Salad

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- 11/4 cups cold water
- can condensed beef broth cup salad dressing
- tblsp, chopped
- i tsp. salt.
- 2 tblsp. lemon inice
- 2 tblsp. chopped pimiento
- cup diced celery 2 cups diced cooked
- chicken
- 1 9-inch baked pastry shell

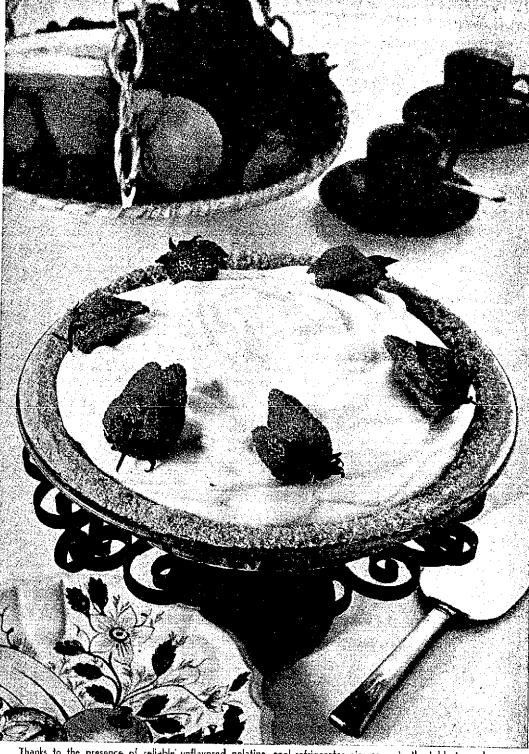

Sprinkle gelatine on the water in a 21/2 quart saucepan to soften. Place over moderate heat. stirring constantly, until gelatine is dissolved, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in beef broth, salad dressing, onion, salt, lemon juice and pimiento; beat with rotary beater until smooth. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Add celery and chicken. Turn into prepared shell. Chill until firm. To serve, garnish with a wreath of diced green pepper and pimiento. Yield: 6 servings.

Note: If desired, recipe may be doubled. Two cups finely cut corned beef, turkey, cooked sea food or 2 cans (6½ or 7 nunces each) tuna in vegetable oil may be substituted for chicken.

Fruited Chiffon Pie

- I cup corn flake crumbs
- 1/3 cup butter 2 lblsp, sugar

Measure corn flake crumbs, butter and sugar into a 9-inch pie pan. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 5 minutes. Remove from oven and mix thoroughly. Press against bottom and sides of pan. Chill,

Thanks to the presence of reliable unflavored gelatine, cool refrigerator pies come to the table to perk up dull appetites. They can be complete meal-in-a-pie dishes and/or dessert favorites like Fruited Chiffon Pie.

Chiffon Filling

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
- cup sugar
- tsp. soli cups water can (6 ounces) pink or plain frozen lemonade concentrate.

- 1 tsp. almond extract *1 cup icy-cold
- evaporated milk Sliced, well drained, fresh, frozen or canned fruit (strawberries, peaches, raspberries, blueberries, etc.)

Mix together gelatine, sugar and salt in a 21/2 quart saucepan. Stir in water. Place over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until gelatine and sugar are dissolved, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in undiluted frozen concentrate and almond extract. Chill until mixture is the consistency of unbeaten egg white. Whip chilled evaporated milk in small bowl of electric mixer on high speed until soft peaks form, about 2 minutes. Fold into gelatine mix-Turn into crumb crust; chill until firm. Chill at least 1 hour. Garnish with sliced fruit,

*To chill evaporated milk, pour into ice cube tray and freeze until soft ice crystals form around edge.

Note: If desired, 1 can (6 ounces) frozen strawberry-lemon, raspberry lemon, or lemonlime concentrate may be substituted for lemonade concentrate.

Recipe of the Week

COOKIES that hit the spot also hit the $5 recipe jackpot this week for Miss Katherine Carlson, 258 Roswell Ave., Long Beach 3. Miss Carlson's

Fruit Nut Refrigerator Cookies

- cup butter
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 2~eggs4 cups sifted flour
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. cinnamon tsp. soda

- 1/2 cup nut meats, chopped
- 1/2 cup pitted dates. chopped
- 34 cup maraschino cherries, chopped

Cream butter and sugar together, add eggs, mix well. Sift flour, salt, cinnamon and soda together. Add 1/2 cup of flour mixture to the fruit and nuts. Add dry ingredients to the creamed mixture, mix well and add the remaining floured ingredients. Form into rolls 1 inch in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper. Store in refrigerator overnight or longer. Slice ¼ inch thick and bake on greased cookie sheet at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Wally Gallenburger tests the free coffee that he brews daily at a Long Beach market, some 10,000 cups weekly.

TE'II DRINK 140 swimming pools full of coffee in Los Angeles County this year—from vending machines alone. This is the measured estimate of industry spokesmen, figuring an average-sized pool holds 21,000 galtons and 211/4 vendingsized, 6-ounce cups of coffee make a gallon, This is one of the ways in which Americans consume more coffee than all the rest of the entire world population.

. Office and factory workers have become addicted to the coffee break since World War II, some union contracts even requiring free coffee, Such is the case at Mattel, Inc., toy manufacturers, who pay out $10,000 a year for coffee. Time losses, once a serious problem, however, have been ameliorated by the vending machines which make the coffee in quantities or by the cup even to automatically adding sugar or cream.

The Pan American Coffee Bureau reports that Ameri-Bureau reports that Americans 10 years of age or older, use 20.4 pounds of coffee per year. Last year U.S. imported 24,573,887 bags weighing 132 pounds each at a cost of $1.7 billion. Of this, the Davidson Pros. division of Automatic Bros. division of Automatic Retails of America, Inc. anti-cipate $4.2 million of vended coffee sales in L.A. areas,

Free cups of coffee are being offered by some grocery markets with interesting results. For instance, one. Long Beach market makes 10 to 12,000 cups a week, 50 cups at a time in alternating per-colators. Sugar and fresh half-and-half cream, one gallon a day, is available for the paper cups furnished by the coffee company whose brand is brewed.

"There is a line-up at 9 every morning," the manager says, "and everybody takes a cup. Many take two but not everybody buys groceries."

Those in the industry say there is an increased tendency

Torrance.
D.S., K.S., K.G.: SALMON, with its two medieval British alternate spelling of Solomonthe Biblical word for "peace-ful one." Salmon was also a shop-sign name from a store where fish were sold many centuries ago. Ancestors included Salmon of Yorkshire in the late 1300s, The Salmon shield is black with three silver salmon emblazoned on it.

DEAR MISS RULE: Can you inform us on SWIGER?

L.P., Long Beach. L.P.: SWIGER, eight centuries ago in Germany, was the warrior name Swidiger, mean-ing "strong spearman." Through surname evolution Swidiger became Schweiger, then Swiger, Schweiger also meant "silent, taciturn per-son." The Schweiger coat of arms, granted in Austria in 1540, is a shield without emblems, divided diagonally, the upper half gold, the lower half

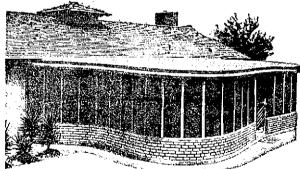

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly give the origin of McCREA and RAE.-R.M., R.R., Long Beach.

R.M., R.R.: McCREA and RAE are from MacRae, traced to the Scotch clan name Mac-Rath. This proud, ancient clan claims descent from a Highland chieftain called Rath, meaning "lucky one." The clan home was Kintail in Ross-shire, Scotland, Mac-Rath was modernized as Mac-Rae, MacCrea, MacRay and Rae by 18th Century descendants. The clan shield is silver. emblazoned with a blue band between three stars and a red lion. The family motto "For-titudine," means "Firmness."

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the source of WILLETT? -D.W., Lakewood; R.D., Long Beach; L.M., Artesia. D.W., R.D., L.M.: WILLETF

D.W., R.D., L.M.: WILLETF philology is English, from the first syllable of the baptismal name William, plus the French suffix, "-ett" meaning "little." William means "Resolute protector." Richard Wylyot, a remote ancestor, lived in east English Norfolk as early as 1273. The Willett coat of arms, used in Devon, Essex and Northumberland, has three narrow black bars below three black rampant lions on a silver shield. Thomas Willett, who migrated from England to Plymouth, Mass., about 1630, was selected by for FREE Estimate the colonists as mayor of New York after its capture from the Dutell in 1664

Bed Smokers: Foam Is Safer

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

F YOU INSIST on smoking in hed, pick a bed with a foam rubber mattress. It's the safest, new research shows.

Researchers at the University of Saskatchewan tested the burning properties of three types of mattresses: cotton-filled, innerspring, foam rubber. Foam rubber proved to be the safest

Foam rubber proved to be the safest because on contact with glowing cigarette heat, it merely melts. Furthermore, a burning rubber odor serves as a warning.

Although foam rubber does not burn on contact with a cigarette ash, it is flammable if exposed to an open flame, the researchers note in the journal Hospitals.

However, virtually all mattress fires are caused by a burning cigarette—not an open flame. From this standpoint, foam rubber still is the safest type of mattress

SINCE BROMIDES (drugs with a sedating effect) are no longer in general use in the practice of medicine, they should no longer be made available to the general public without a prescription, two British Columbia researchers believe

Bromides, they remind, may produce a state in which habituation and impaired judgment will lead to excessive intake and severe polyoping intake and severe poisoning.

The researchers report two recent cases of poisoning due to common bromidic agents available at any drug

Their report is in Canadian Medical Association Journal,

A NEW ANTIBIOTIC called chelocardin has, in animal experiments, proved effective against certain hard-to-control bacteria frequently involved in urinary tract infections. The new agent was derived from a soil sample obtained from a flower bed in Springfield, Mass., reports the New Physician, a medical journal.

ANOTHER NEW antibiotic, pristinamycin, has been up to 93 per cent effective in countering staphylococcal bacteria in trials on human patients in France. The drug, taken by mouth, is not yet available in the United States. Pristinamycin has been effective in some patients whose condition did not respond to other antibiotics.

PERSONS WHO consume large amounts of vegetable oil daily in an attempt to reduce blood cholesterol experience a mild diarrhea occasionally.

A consultant to the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that vegetable oil be taken with meals, incorporating the oil, whenever practical, into a food product. This affords a better chance for the oil to be dispersed and may eliminate the diarrhea.

A TEAM of Philadelphia researchers has dashed the long-held belief that peptic ulcers are likely to flare up in the spring or fall.

Doctors at Gastrointestinal Research Laboratory at Pennsylvania Hospital checked the hospital records of 411 patients who suffered ulcer perforation or bleeding.

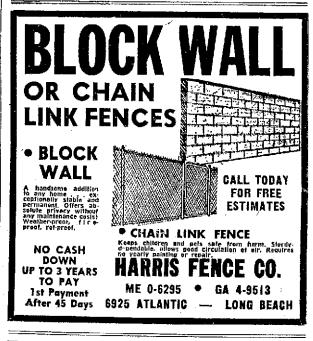

The differences in monthly incidence were slight, the researchers say. Their conclusion: the spring and fall flareup concept has been exaggerated.

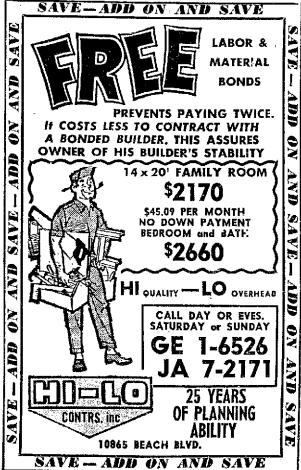

The report is in Annals of Internal Medicine.

CAPSULES: In animal experiments at least, peanut hulls have an antitooth decay effect, reports Journal of Dental Rescarch. . . Two promising heart drugs, already available in Great Britain, are now undergoing trials in the United States: Atromid, which lowers blood cholesterol, and Alderlin, which prevents abnormal rhythms. . . If you're intoxicated at time of serious accident involving bleeding, your chances of survival are less than if you were sober, says Annals of Surgery. . . A San Francisco surgeon reports that a surgical patient lived three years with only eight inches of small intestine; normal length: over 20 feet. . . Lisping is not caused by faulty bite (malocclusion) but by inadequate or perverted tongue function, two Swedish dental scientists report.

Landscaping Important to Home Buyer

Buying a new home? Then check the land and the land-scaping, advises the American Association of Nurserymen. Modern advances in landscaping and planting may make the difference between enjoyment of your land for living, and not. Check the design, the position of the house on the lot and the quality of the land-scaping. It usually will pay a prospective home buyer to hire a good landscape nurseryman to go over the properly with him and offer advice. He will check the grades before any planting is done, sometimes be able to save good trees. Some builders install the cheapest of plants in a skimpy row along the front of the house just to take away the bareness. Others do a capable landscape job. The nurseryman can help you de-cide whether or not you are receiving sound value in the planting. If the builder allows a rebate for landscaping, the nurseryman can tell you what you may purchase for this

Some builders do a basic planting job and then provide a landscape plan for the home owner to have completed by a recommended nurseryman. This is sound procedure, too, resulting in good landscaping values that increase the resale value of the home,

If little or no landscaping is offered with the house, it can be achieved by experienced landscape nurserymen, by means of an F.H.A. home improvement loan up to $3,500 or more, being available for this purpose.

HOW YOUR CHILD LEARNS

Cite True Values

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: "I keep telling my son Joe how much it means to me for him to do good work in school and take more of an interest in learning things, but I don't seem to make much of a dent. He doesn't really seem to have much of a sense of obligation. How can we instill that in ANSWER: Why not try telling him that success in school is essentially to his own advantage?

What he learns now is going to determine his hap-piness, his career, his income in later years.

He's not going to school to please others but to help himself. If he loafs, he will be the one to suffer,

QUESTION: "Why do so many children have such a hard time learning rules and definitions?"

ANSWER: The rules often don't seem to have any connection with anything concrete, real, or useful. It is important to provide the child with a simple example which clearly illustrates the rule and its application.

If you tell him that a comma is a punctuation mark indicating separation in ideas or construction within a sentence, you had better show him a sentence with commas performing these functions.

Prove to him that a comma is not merely a rule but a mark with a practical mission in the art of expression. He'll then see the value of learning the rules governing its use.

QUESTION: "While I've read a lot of practical suggestions in the "how-to-study" books and articles, I notice that my daughter, who makes excellent grades, has her own peculiar study habits, which usually don't conform to these suggestions. Aren't study habits pretty much an individual matter?"

ANSWER: There is no single established way to study, of course. Research reveals that good students arrive at their goals by many different roads.

If a student's study method produces good results, he should stick with it. In this case, the end justifies the means

The how-to-study advice is for those who have no satisfactory method and who want to do better.

Sketchbook's bike stand plan eliminates this nuisance from your life very simply. Using one sheet of half inch exterior plywood provides you with two racks that hold any size two-wheel bicycle, plus a top tool chest and back cabinet for storage of bike accessories and parts.

THE STAND and storage, as shown, is one compact unit measuring approximately two foot square. It can be placed strategically in the garage or in any other convenient spot. The space between the two racks is wide enough for a small tot's tricycle to be parked there if need be,

The Sketchbook plan offers an added optional detail showing how the bikes may be locked to the stand, if you wish to add this precaution-ary measure. The plan contains step-by-step building instruction, parts and lumber list, plus a diagram of how to cut out all parts from the 4x8 plywood sheet.

Neatness is an equal reward of this easy-to-build project. The youngsters will have no excuse. The place for their bikes will be in the stand. And any father that's fixed a broken chain or hunted for a

W. S. (Dusty) Rhoads demonstrates a step in finishing violin parts. His skill has been acclaimed by experts.

He's a Modern Stradivari

By Tamara Andreeva

S. (Dusty) Rhoads lived to be 75 before he found himself and his true vocation. With it came hap-piness, recognition, fortune.

A native of Missouri, Rhoads knew only what he calls "hoedown" music. He listened to it most of his life, and he could pick a pretty mean tune on a homemade fiddle. Never did he dream that he and violins would become closely associated.

In 1906, like most ambitious young men of his time, he started westward, working as mechanic, machinist and carpenter. In the early 1930s. he had a band in Las Vegas, Nev., known as "Dusty Rhoads and His Oldtimers." "We played hoedown and broadcast it," he recalls.

In 1942 he moved to Berkeley, Calif. "I was supposed to have retired," he says, "but I was just tired,"

It was there he started toying with the idea of making a violin.

"I reworked a three dollar fiddle and sold it for a hundred," he says, "I knew I could do better than that if I built my own." And this he proceeded to do.

RHOADS went to the San Francisco library one day in 1957 and perused Joseph Reid's book on making a violin, "It described some Stradivari violins in such excellent detail," he relates, "that I got a hankering to make me one." His reproduction of the famed 1716 "Messiah" model Stradivarius was faithful in the smallest detail: the back, ribs, and neck were made of hard sugar maple; the belly of spruce pine. Every part of what he still insisted on calling "a fiddle" was made by hand.

"I had to follow the woods." he explains, "because to violins woods are the same as vocal cords. The woods to the violin are the same as voices. No two pieces of wood sound alike. The thickness of wood is responsible for the pitch. By shaving the wood down or leaving it thick you can have your fiddle sound higher or lower."

Tongue-in-check, Rhoads called his first two Stradi-varius copies "Kate and Dupli-

HIS VIOLINS completed, Rhoads took them to Dr. Sidney Griller in the music department of the University of California at Berkeley. Dr. Griller tuned "Kate" and Griller tuned "Kate" and played a few bars. Then he stopped to mutter: "Amazing ... incredible ..." He was talking about the trueness of tone in Rhoads' violins. It was not only as good as the original Stradivarius, but better he said ter, he said.

Rhoads admits that he, too, was surprised. "I was not even sure that I took all the 'wolves' out of these first two models," he confesses. (The "wolves" are scratchy tones that have to be "taken out" of a violin by various and sundry means, from using different woods and strings mechanical adjustments like gluing and tuning.)

One of Rhoads' secret reone of knoads secret re-finements is the use of a fine mesh silk stocking to check the finish of a violin. If, after rubbing the inside of the newly — built instrument the stocking comes out without a run, the workmanship is perfect. If the stocking snags, Dusty continues to polish with pumice.

ACCORDING to Rhoads, very small things account for the excellence or total failure of a violin. "For instance, varnish," he elucidates. "In my first two violins I did not get the true tone until I got rid of the cheap commercial varnish; resanded, and re-finished the instrument with pumice, rottenstone, and raw linseed oil."

Rhoads can tell why good violins are so expensive: one can pay anywhere from $500 to $12,000 for them. 'It takes me 300 hours to finish one," he says, "And the old masters took longer. In those days all they had was time . ."

Just as horse lovers are constantly horse-swapping, world's best violin makers are continually exchanging good woods. Dusty got many of his best pieces from friends in the Swiss Alps. And if you see him in the West's high country, searching for something, he is looking for chunks of good wood. Like gold, he says, good wood is where you find it.

THIS IS COCO, the Eloise of the poodle world. She is 2 years old, was born in London and has con-quered Connecticut. She has a vile disposition, is elegant, snobbish, noncomforming, impulsive, maddening and completely enchanting. She owns illustrator Jon Whitcomb, who has chronicled her madcap adventures in words and pictures. Read "COCO, THE FAR-OUT POODLE" (Random House, $3.95).

THERE HAVE been more than 20 editions of Joseph Gaer's earlier book, "How the Great Religions Began," an inquiry into the origins of the major religions of the world.

In "WHAT THE GREAT RELIGIONS BELIEVE"
(Dodd, Mead, $4) the author presents essential beliefs of Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, Confucianism, Taoism, Shin-to, Judaism, Christianity, Is-Zoastrianism and Zen-Buddhism. The style is simple and clear. Although the great

THE STORY of Howard Blackburn, Yankee seaman from Gloucester, is almost a legend among seafaring men. It is told again in "LONE VOYAGE" by Joseph E. Garlan (Little, Brown, $5.) Black-burn, a late-19th Century mariner survived five blizzard-swept days and nights in the North Atlantic dead shipmate and with totally frozen hands and feet,

Wilshire Is Subject of Two Books

A CONTEST with the city fathers of Los Angeles over his right to an audience in Central Park (now Pershing Square) provides an hilarious true tale. Fashionably dressed, Gay was a regular orator there, a launcher of willy volleys against capitalism. troublesome did he and fellow orators become that an off-the-cuff ordinance was passed prohibiting "debates" without a permit.

Prohibition of free speech was a cause worthy of Wilshires attention and he decided to make a test case of it. His attempt to be arrested was reported by a mused newsmen who quoted him as saying, "Where is that offi-cer? I am tired of speaking. Why this delay?" Reluctantly officer stepped into the comic opera situation and obliged.

Later, Gay wrote in "The Challenge" that the judge decided "the Constitution of the United States trumps any old city ordinance.'

Gay sank his own and other people's money in gold mining ventures. In the last few years of his life he invented the Ionaco, a widely advertised electronic gadget which his public relations man guaranteed to cure the mankind and darken milady's grey hair. The American Medical Association and assorted Better Business Bureaus were investigating when he died in 1927.

Two books about the effervescent personality are to published soon. Emily Harvin, a life-long friend and a writer now living in Corona del Mar, has custody of the Wilshire papers and is beginning the personal story of Gay and his wife Mary and the procession of people who entered their orbit; Jack London, Lawrence Tibbett, Re-becca West, Upton Sinclair, George Bernard Shaw and many others.

For some years Dr. Howard Quint of the history department at the University of Massachusetts has been working on a book about the sociological and political Wilshire. By agreement with Emily Harvin, he has had ac-cess to the Wilshire collection.

No doubt the forthcoming books will illuminate all of the angles of the complex man who lived as a capitalist, but preached socialism (his views seem conservative enough today), was branded an egomaniae and impractical dreamer. The interest of Long Beach readers of course, will be in the part that he played in the early beginning of the

Pearl Buck Writes of Korea Life

By Vera Williams

NOBEL PRIZE winning author Pearl S. Buck has written a new novel, "THE LIVING REED" (Day, $6.95) which promises to take its place with her "Good Earth" and "Imperial Woman" in popularity with the reading

Pearl Buck is at her hest when she writes about the Asiatic people whom she knows so well, having lived all of her early life in China with her missionary parents. For this new novel she spent much time living in Korea among the natives of that country. It is the longest and certainly one of the widest in scope of her books.

The 478-page book tells the story of a high ranking Korean family or clan beginning in 1881 with Kim Il-han, adviser to Queen Min who ruled Korea during that period with grace and splendor. Korea is picturesquely described as "a tiny peninsula hanging like a golden fruit before the longing eyes of surrounding nations."

Strongly grounded in actual history, the novel touches on many aspects of Korea's past.

The story revolves about Kim Il-han and his lovely wife, Sunia, and their two sons, Yul-chun, the elder, and Yul-han, the younger.

One day in a fit of childish anger Yul-chun tore up the bamboo shoots in the family garden, "You have destroyed food. You have destroyed food. You have destroyed life," his father chided him. "Though it is only a hollow reed, it is a living reed. Now the roots must send up other shoots to take the place of those you have destroyed." This bit of Oriental wisdom followed the headstrong Yul-chun all his life Eventually he joined the exiled revolutionaries and became the legendary figure known as the "Living Reed."

The second son, Yul-han, married a Christian girl named Induk and he became a Christian also, Eventually, because they were Christians he, his wife and daughter died martyrs' deaths. They left a son, Liang, to carry on the family name.

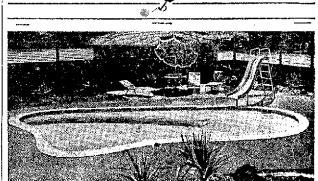

Pearl Buck carries her story of the life of the Kim clan through the third generation recounting the complicated love affairs of Sasha, the late Yul-chun's son by a Russian girl, and the love affairs of the late Yul-han's son, Liang.

Boat Cruise of the Desert Set

By Fred Taylor Kraft Travel Editor

THE TANG of mesquite in the cooling desert, the lure of camping along a great stream filled with fish just waiting to be taken, and the churning of cruise boats --each will play a part in bringing a throng of outdoor enthusiasts to Blythe for one of the West's novel events Oct.

The annual Boat Cruise of the Desert, started in 1935 and growing more popular each year, will see almost 500 boats-carrying 1,500 people -strung out for miles on the Colorado River on a 75-mile overnight junket from Blythe through the scenic desert to Yuma and return.

PARTICIPANTS always look forward to their rendezvous - a few hundred feet south of U.S. Hwy. 60-70in the first light of dawn where, amid the drifting aroma of fresh-brewed coffee, there is a gay spirit of camaraderie. There follows the pleasant task of gathering camping equipment together and loading the boats as they rock gently in the shallow water along the beach.

Hundreds of onlookers gather to witness the departure, later to fish the Colo-

If You Can't Lick 'Em, Fool 'Em!

By Robert L. Thompson

THE DATE was Aug. 6. 1846, and Commodore Robert F. Stockton was attempting to slip into the harbor at San Pedro. Streaks of morning light pierced the darkness to fall on a sluggish sea, and then from the grassgrown hills the sun popped up to pry into the activities of this adventurer and his band of hardy men. His ulti-mate goal was the pueblo of Los Angeles. There he hoped to come to grips with Gen. Jose Castro and seize from him control of all California.

A few half-naked Indians were fishing from their dugout canoes as Stockton sailed in dropped anchor. Stoically the Indians watched Stockton and his 300 men disembark. As he came ashore Capt. Fremont was landing with a smaller group in San Diego. The strategy was for both forces to converge on Los Angeles and destroy what they thought to be an in-ferior Mexican force. All of this was being done even though the American officers had no official word that we were at war with Mexico.

TWENTY-FOUR hours later scouts reported that Gen. Castro seemed to have a garrison of 1,000 well-equipped men. On receipt of this news, Stockton foresaw a stiff struggle, called his officers together and issued orders that his ragged troops be drilled constantly in the short time they had left before battle.

On Aug. 9, a breathless sentry dashed into camp with word that two Mexican officers were approaching under a flag of truce.

"Truce, indeed!" Stockton snorted. "Here we are hundreds of miles from assistance, once our true strength is known those Mexicans will pounce upon us and destroy

He sent some men out to intercept the Mexicans and keep them out of sight of his camp until called for. Quick-ly he had his small force marched to the other side of one of the nearby hills. Then forming his men four abreast, with a good interval between each rank, he had them marched in a circle so that from his camp only a few of the ranks could be seen as they crossed the brow of the hill. He had only six cannon. Five of them were six-pounders and one was a thirty-two, a large gun for that day. He camouflaged his six-pounders so that they looked like 32s. After that he allowed the Mexicans to enter.

THEY WENT through the formalities, both sides deploring the spilling of blood, then the Mexicans asked for a truce. Stockton declined, While all of this was going on the Mexicans could observe what appeared to be an endless column of troops marching over the brow of the next hill, They were also given the opportunity to gaze down the barrel of his 32pound cannon. After the truce team left Stockton fervently hoped that they had been sufficiently impressed with what they had seen that it would sink deeply into

Two days passed and nothing happened. Then the truce team was again observed approaching. This time they informed Stockton that if he tried to take El Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles de Poriuncula he would be making a grave for his men. Undaunted, Stock-ton lold them to have the belis ready to toll at 8 o'clock the next morning for he would then be coming in.

BACK IN CAMP he prepared for the assault, determined to proceed though Fremont had not made an appearance,

He was not pounding at the city gates the next morning as he had promised, but on Aug. 13 he did move out to start the attack. Over the grasslands he marched, hindered only by a few herds of wild cattle. Sometime during the day Fremont joined up. Late in the afternoon they approached the outskirts of the city. Stockton was determined to have his day. The advance was ordered. Into the town they came—taut, rifles ready, and alert to repulse the expected charge. They marched through to the plaza, and it was a town silent, hostile, and afraid.

The city was taken without a shot being fired. Castro had disbanded his men and fled toward Sonora, evidently firmly convinced that he was greatly outnumbered.

Los Angeles in 1857, much as it appeared when Commodore Stockton tricked defending Mexican forces into quitting the city although he actually was badly outnumbered.

You can also feed your sweet peas in this way. Put the sweet pea food into the furrow and let the water carry it through the soil to the roots. For some reason, giving food and water by this method has been most satisfactory.

When you have to start spraying your sweet peas, I recommend a two-purpose spray that is both a fungicide and an insecticide, since sweet peas in our area are inclined to suffer from fungus as well as insects. And if they are attacked by soil insects, remember that you can treat the soil with a copperether soil disinfectant without injury to the little plants.

THE DOBERMAN is a manmade dog. About 1879, in the city of Apolda in central Germany, Luis Doberman had the unthankful task of being the town's dog catcher. However, he loved dogs and long wished to create what he considered an ideal dog-a giant terrier. Striving to make his dream come true, he blended the Rottweiler, the German pinscher, the black-and-tan terrior, and added a dash of old short-haired shepherd stock. The results were the regal, sleek, working Doberman pinscher whose intelligence is almost human.

A well-bred Doberman, correctly handled and given af-fection, is a great dog. He is the official dog, along with the bulldog, of the United States Marines.

GERMAN SHEPHERD Dog Club of Long Beach has its sanctioned match today at Recreation Park, Tenth Street and Federation Avenue; entries close at noon next Saturday at Del Webb's Kern City; Bakersfield Obedience Club will have a match from 2 to 5 p.m.; entries to close at LONG REACH . .

HENRY REUSS Bird of Paradise

CONTINENTAL chefs are often very imaginative. They conjure up endless va-rieties of exotic names for their specialties.

Usually their descriptions are more romantic than accurate, meaning that the entree does not always bear a close physical resemblance to its title. There is one outstanding chef in Long Beach, however, who believes in creating dishes that look like they sound. He is Henry Reuss new maitre chef de cuisine in the Breakwaters International Hotel's glamorous Skyroom. An excellent example of Henry's theory is an entree called Bird of Paradise. It consists of a tender squab-chicken stuffed with wild rice and served on balf a pineapple with a delectable cognac sauce. By artfully adding a head made from a pineapple slice, Henry makes the dish resemble an attractive bird.

A native of Wuerzburg, Bavaria, Henry has been in the United States nine years. He is a culinary wizard possessing two bachelor degrees in cooking from the International Trade School at Frankfurt, Germany, where he was also an instructor. At the Skyroom, now serving dinner daily and Sunday from 5 p.m. on, Henry offers such superb international favorites as lobster stuffed with crabmeat, tournadoes of beef a la Royale, coundre filet de boeuf (roast sirloin surrounded by young vegetables) and a variety of fine charcoal-broiled steaks. His continental dinners, priced from $4.75, include soup du jour and green salad, potato, fresh rolls and beverage. Other entrees start at $2.75. A new menu, featuring the above items and many more, will be in effect at the Skyroom starting this week. The Skyroom, with enchanting views of the harbor and city, is also open for breakfast and Inncheon: - -

Can you enlighten me?—F. Owens, Washington, D.C. A. Says Annigoni, who sketched the President while at work in his White House office over a period of three days and who exhibits no particular affection for his subject: "The only gesture he made to help me was to entertain all his visitors on the same side of his desk so that I could always see him from the same angle . . . I was astonished that so many problems were discussed in front of me (home policies and, above all, at that time, Congo questions) as if I was not there at all. The plans of new taxes, for instance, was one subject."

Q. Two questions about Katharine Hepburn: Why has she never married Spencer Tracy? Does she have a brother who's a playwright?—Ann Reilly, Virginia Beach, Va.

A. Mr. Tracy is married, has never been divorced.

Miss Hepburn's brother, Richard, is a struggling playwright.

Q. Is Mamie Eisenhower a champion canasta player?
 T. M. Cullman, Indianapolis, Ind.

A. No, but she has played the game long and well.

(WE'RE GETTING YOUNGER EVERY YEAR)

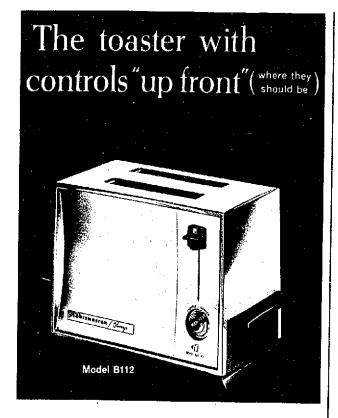

That's how Dodge got started. With the sporty black job on top. Thirty-five horsepower, cone clutch, and a built-in ruggedness that made dependability a part of the English language. This year that tradition of dependability is fifty years old.

Obviously, we made a few changes in the last fifty years. For instance, electric lights, generator and self-starter are now standard equipment. So are a lot of other things. Bright new styling, easy-to-care-for interiors, your choice of models with standard seats, buckets or a special combination job with flip-down center arm rest. To keep you on the road and off the grease rack, we've added a welcome selection of easy maintenance features; self-adjusting brakes, sealed suspension system, 4,000-mile oil changes and a special rust-protection process to protect your investment.

We're rather proud of the '64 Dodge. We think you'd enjoy owning one. And to make it harder for you to say no, we have priced it with Ford and Chevy. Take another look at the '64 Dodge, above. If you like the looks—and most people do—go drive one. Price one. The man to see is your Dodge Dealer. 1964 Dodge. Smart. Solid. As easy to own as any full-size car around. And, of course, dependable. After all, we invented the word.

My Favorite Jokes

BY DEAN MARTIN

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dean Martin, born Dino Crocetti in Steubenville, Ohio, 46 years ago, is probably the lucklest entertainer in show business. A former gambling croupler with a small, tremulous voice, no dramatic training and limited comedy talent, Martin today is one of Hollywood's top personalities. Deceptively shrewd, carefully casual, he had his nose straightened, enhanced his cureer by partnership with Jerry Lewis in the 1950s, then branched out as a single. Martin, who recently finished starring in Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed?, has been married twice and is the father of six children. He lives in a large rambling Beverly Hills mansion, earns upwards of $500,000 a year, has made a fine career out of mixing songs and wisecracks.

An actor who is always bragging about his golf score was playing in a foursome with friends. One day his ball landed in a sand trap. Hidden from view, he hacked away at the ball. When he finally drove it out, his friends asked: "How many strokes did you take?"

"Three," he answered.

"But we heard six!" they protested.

Here are some of his favorite funnies.

"Three of them," he replied, "were echoes."

The man worked hard for his candidate during the election and was very much surprised to find himself brought into court.

"What have I been arrested for?" he inquired.

"You are charged," said the judge, "with voting seven times."

"Charged!" exclaimed the defendant. "I thought I was getting paid!"

As they entered the hotel lobby together, the young bride was very nervous,

"Darling," she said to her husband, "I feel so conspicuous knowing that everyone will be staring at us because we're newlyweds. Can't we do something to make it look as though we've been married for a long time?"

"Yes," replied the groom. "You carry the suiteases!"

An army camp in Texas, located on a wide open plain,was exposed to howling winds. One day during maneuvers a young soldier came floating down into camp. He was rather badly bruised but didn't get much sympathy.

"What do you mean by coming down in a parachute with this 100-mile-an-hour wind blowing?" asked one of his superiors. "It's a wonder you weren't killed."

"I'd like to explain, sir," replied the private weakly when he had puiled himself together. "You see, I didn't come down in a parachute—I went up in a tent!"

A loudmouthed customer kept shouting at a pretty waitress. Another fellow, seated at the opposite end of the restaurant, asked the girl: "Do you want me to take care of him for you?"

"Oh, no," answered the waitress with a smile. "He's my husband."

"Husband!" said the man. "I don't understand."

"It's like this," she explained. "We've got it down to a science. He makes all the other customers feel sorry for me. Then they give extra large tips."

The teacher wrote on the blackboard: "I ain't had no fun all summer."

Then she asked a youngster in the front row: "Harry, what should I do to correct that?"

"Maybe," he suggested helpfully, "you should get a boy friend."

A young bride went to the supermarket and bought a can of tuna fish. Next day she was there again and bought another can of tuna fish. The third day, she repeated the same procedure.

"You bought tuna fish yesterday," said the clerk, "and the day before, too. Don't you get tired of it?"

"It's like this," replied the bride. "I've been giving my husband tuna fish every night for a week now—and he still wants to go fishing!"

"How much are the cigars?" asked a customer at the tobacco shop.

"Two for a quarter," said the girl behind the

"All right," said the man, "I'll take one."

"That'll be fifteen cents," replied the clerk.

The customer paid for the cigar and left. A man who overheard the transaction came up to the counter.

"Here's a dime," he said. "I'll take the other one."

dad takes over the PTA

Can a male viewpoint help PTA? This town's men say yes

LOS ALTOS, CALIF. hat the average PTA in this country needs is a solid dose of business efficiency, administered by the fathers.

That's the contention of the men of this California city, near San Francisco, and they've set out to prove their point by taking over the Oak Avenue Elementary School PTA from their wives, who always ran things in the past. This fall the fathers are launching their second season in the driver's seat after a spectacular beginning last year that saw sparks fly and timeworn customs tumble.

Basically, what the fathers say is this: A PTA, like any business, should stick to its main job, which is to get the parents-all the parents-to sit down and talk horse sense about their kids' education and how to improve it, instead of wasting time on minor projects good or bad.

In the old, pre-father days, say the fathers, Oak Avenue was pretty much like PTAs everywhere: strictly a mothers' show, with the men seldom bothering even to show up. Meetings were talky and dull, taken up with an endless stream of trivial projects that sometimes seemed to have been invented merely to fill time. In one classic instance, the PTA spent 45 minutes discussing the menu for a potluck supper-Normal turnout was a bare 30 mothers, maybe a halfdozen fathers.

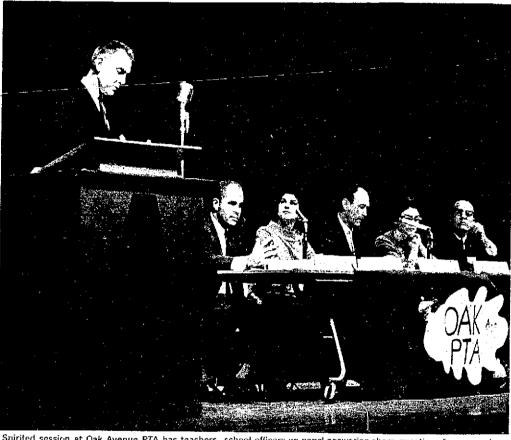

THE PRESS WATCHES

Yet today the fathers can proudly point to Oak Avenue meetings so lively and provocative that San Francisco papers cover them regularly. Parentshundreds of them now, of both sexes-not only attend PTA but, once there, argue excitedly over the kind of school they want. The result is better-informed parents, better-motivated teachers and, in the long run, a better school.

The story of Oak Avenue's transformation is largely the story of one man, Wally Cunneen, vice president of a firm of San Francisco architects. In 1961, the first of Cunneen's three children enrolled at Oak Avenue. Cunneen gave in to the urgings of his wife, a former teacher, and accepted a committee chairmanship in the PTA.

To Conneco, an executive jealous of time and impatient with cloudy detail, the methods of the mothers he found himself working with seemed topsy-turvy. They began by scheduling two-hour meetings monthly and only afterwards dreamed up reports and projects to lill the time. Why not creasoned Conneen, do the opposite-decide first what you wanted to accomplish. then allot only the meetings needed? And why waste the time of the assembled PTA with minor topicslike that porluck supper-- that could be handled faster and better in small committees?

Such refreshing ideas only served to get Cunneen elected president of PTA for the 1962-63 year, Right from the start, he applied business methods. He moved to attract absentee fathers to meetings by appointing a "sales manager"-Bob Morton, in real life a pharmaceutical sales manager-and a "sales force" of 20 mothers, who went to work phoning the stay-at-homes. An answering father who protested he had no time for PTA was only inviting a stiff reminder that his child's education was a basic obligation. If he said he had to baby-sit, he was told: "Bring the kids. We'll take care of them."

The calls paid off when a record crowd of some 300 curious parents turned out for the new regime's

They got a jolt. For the first time in Oak Avenue history, the meeting began promptly at 8 p.m. and stopped on the dot of 9:15. Chairs were grouped comfortably around cafeteria tables, not in rows as before, and coffee and cookies were served as you entered. As promised, a mother and three teenagers provided a baby-sitting service. Best of all, instead of the usual baffling clutter of projects the agenda featured a dynamic naturalized American who had some enlightening things to say about the virtues of public education in America. He hadn't been able to get much in Armenia.

Next meeting, Cunneen pulled another surprise. He collared a panel of experts-a school board trustee, school administrators and teachers-sat them on the dais and gave the parents free rein to hit them with any question they wanted, no holds barred. So lively was the response that almost 50 parent queries had to go unanswered for lack of time. With typical ingenuity, Cunneen published these questions, along with the answers, in a newsletter. Headlined the influential California Teachers Association bulletin: "SNAPPY PTA MEETINGS REAP BIG DIVIDENDS."

RECORD TURNOUT

Now the word was out, and Cumeen's third and last meeting this spring pulled the largest PTA crowd ever in populous Santa Clara county, More than 800 parents and visitors jammed a high school gym commandeered for the occasion to hear Maxwell Rafferty,

by FRANK CAMERON

the state's Superintendent of Public Education, deliver a plea against progressive schooling. The big turnout was final proof that parents were willing to make the effort to learn something about their kids' education.

Cunneen sums up his goals simply. "In a family it's usually the man who decides how the couple will vote on school issues, but often he's even less well informed than his wife," he says. "Yet these are matters that can make the difference between good schools and bad. We're trying to get both parents more involved in the school's needs and problems."

TIME SAVERS

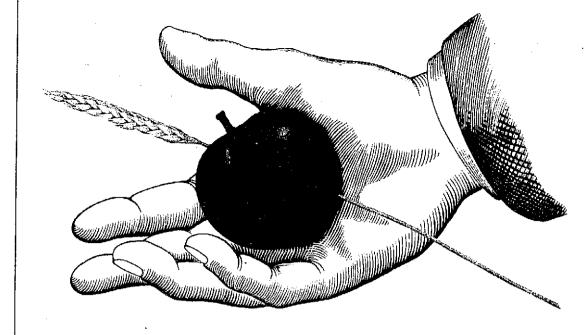

Once out of his cocoon, Cunneen observes, the male PTA member proves ingenious at time-cutting ideas. Meetings have been limited to 3 or 4 a year, starting and ending on time, with the hands of a dummy clock pointing to 9:15 as a constant reminder. Minutes of the previous meeting are not read but mimeographed and handed to parents as they enter, and officers are now elected simply by flashing nominees' names on a screen. Special, one-shot assignments use a father's talents without his having to become "married" to PTA. For instance, a father may supervise an occasional baseball game or moderate a panel.

As for the 50-odd regular, essential PTA activities—buying encyclopedias, staffing the library, raising money, running the blood bank, planning lunches—they're handled by the mothers just as before. But it's done in committee now, without taking the time of the whole PTA.

This year's new, male-dominated slate of officers — seven fathers and one mother, headed by Sperry-Rand executive Fred Waldron—has some new twists in store for Oak Avenue, Describing his goal as "an end to indifference," Waldron intends to make still better use of fathers' business talents by such devices as getting a lawyer to advise him on parliamentary rules, a public relations expert, and an advertising man to help sell the "defeat of indifference" idea.

How do the mothers feel about all this? Occasional griping is reported, but the vast majority of the ladies seem to nod assent to the remark of Mrs. Lloyd Humphreys, president of the Los Altos School District Council. Says Mrs. Humphreys:

"The women don't mind. After all, most of the men are only taking part at their wives' urgins."

Me

This is one question which particularly "bugs" the parents of girls who supposedly have "everything."

Take the case of Alexandra Zuck, a beautiful. brown-eved brunette from Bayonne, N. I., whose hair Hollywood bleached baby-blonde, whose name it changed to Sandra Dee, whose avocation it altered from junior model to a full-fledged movie star, purportedly representative of the younger generation, and who today ranks number three in screen popularity, just below Elizabeth Taylor and Doris Day

Three years ago when she had just turned 18. Sandra was earning $1,500 a week. She owned a hillside mansion in Beverly Hills, a $12,000 mink coat, a red Thunderbird, all the material possessions popularly equated with success.

Young actors who were paired with her on arranged premiere dates found her a warm, down-to-earth. remarkably unspoiled star. Her career potential seemed limitless, and she appeared blessed with an inordinate amount of common sense.

"The last man I'm going to marry," she used to say, "is a man in show business. They're selfish, unreliable and make lousy husbands. The Hollywood type of marriage is not for me. I want all my children to have the same father. I'm going to take a good long look before I get married. I'm not going to jump into it. Certainly, not with a show-biz character.'

A few months later, after she had filmed Come September in Rome with Walden Cassotto, a talented, diminutive pop singer who calls himself Bobbu Darin, this very same level-headed girl eloned with him in the middle of the night in a red Rolls Rouce to Elizabeth, N.J. Their courtship had lasted one

People who knew both parties gave odds that the marriage wouldn't endure, and the unanimity of that prediction cleared the market of takers.

TWO YEARS LATER

A few months ago-after one child, a handsome boy named Dodd Mitchell, and two and a half years of a happy-scrappy, tumultuous-tempestuous marriage -Sandra turned up on a music recording stage at 20th Century-Fox to sing a tune for Take Her, She's Mine. She removed her dark glasses revealing a blackened right eye, swollen and discolored. Then she admitted that she was no longer sharing her husband's bed and board, that, in fact, Bobby Darin had moved out. They had separated; a divorce seemed imminent.

Today after four months of separation, the Darins are back together. "I found out." Sandra says, "that marriage isn't the story-hook romance I thought it was. It's putting up with a man's snoring and his putting up with you when you look like a drip without make-up. It's realizing that no one is perfect, but if you love someone and he loves you and you have a lovely son, then it's worth all the pain and aggravation to work it out and come to some understanding,

"Bobby is the first boy I ever dated, other than for studio-arranged dates, and I guess if I had been a little older or more mature when we got married, if I'd had some preparation for marriage, maybe I would've handled our problems better. But when I married him, I just didn't take on a husband. I took on a boy friend and lover and husband and father, and I didn't know how to cope with all these different personalities and especially with a husband on the road night after night. You'd have to be insane to like sitting in a night-club dressing room through two shows every night and traveling with a baby.

Sandra Dee

WHEN YOUTH RUSHES INTO MARRIAGE

BY LLOYD SHEARER

Sandra Dee is shown with singer Bobby Darin soon after the couple's recent reconciliation. Sandra vowed she would never marry anyone in show business, wed the singer after whirlwind courtship. They have a son.

"It's a rough life, and it doesn't square with a young girl's dream idea of marriage. If I had my life to live over again, I think I'd go to high school and college before I got married. But still, I wouldn't want to give up for a minute what I now have.

"You know," Sandra goes on, "when Bobby and I were quarreling, I wouldn't go to a marriage counsellor because I don't believe you and your husband can do this together. At least I couldn't, so I went to an analyst, and I told him we had problems, and he heard me out and said the problems existed because I was childish. I had never dated any other men; I didn't know how to adjust to Bobby. But the key line in his advice was this: 'If you can realize your problem—not knowing how to handle your husband—then you don't need me, because I can't solve the problem. But you don't need analysis if you can face up to the problem and try to cope with it. You just go home and try.'"

IS THIS THE PATTERN?

Why did Sandra Dee get married so quickly in the first place? Is impetuous, reckless, instant marriage typical of most contemporary teenage brides? What can other teenagers learn from Sandra's marital and pre-marital behavior and the heartache it brought?

In Hollywood, the know-it-alls blame the actress' elopement on the overpossessiveness of Mary Douvan, 40, her attractive mother.

Says a family friend: "The trouble with Mary is that she was the most intensive stage mother Hollywood has ever known. She never let Sandra out of her sight. She never let the child develop any self-reliance or self-sufficiency. She did everything for the kid. She was Sandra's constant, 24-hour-a-day companion.

"Naturally, the girl rebelled. She used Bobby Darin and marriage as an escape mechanism. Bobby was the first guy she had ever gone with out of personal choice, and when he suggested marriage, Sandra was overripe.

"The biggest mistake Mary Douvan made was to object to the marriage. When she and Sandra argued about it in the Hotel Drake in New York, Mary should never have walked out. But she did. She got angry and left Sandra and went home to her own mother in Bayonne, N. J."

Sandra had never before been alone in her life. "I was frightened to death," she admits. "I didn't even have my poodle with me. Naturally I phoned Bobby. He was in another hotel around the corner someplace. I think he was singing at the Copa at the time. He came running, and four days later we eloped.

Mrs. Mary Douvan, Sandra's mother, says: "Don't let your daughter start dating boys when she's 11 or 12."

"My mother said to wait, that I was too young for marriage, not to do it. That was her mistake. She should have said, 'Go ahead. Get married.' Then I would've backed off. That's how all kids are. You can't really tell them.

"I remember as a kid if my mother said, 'Don't do this,' I immediately wanted to do it. The great, important word that bugs teenagers is No. The best cigarette I ever smoked was hidden behind the screen in the bathroom. Ever since Mom said, 'Go ahead and smoke,' I've never had a cigarette that tasted quite as good. I guess I would have avoided a lot of problems if I'd been more mature."

Sandra Dee's mother, an intelligent, perceptive woman who married a New Jersey bus driver when she was 18—and divorced him when Sandy was 4—says, "I've been made the heavy in Sandra's marriage to Bobby, and I don't think I deserve it. I did only what any mother would do under the circumstances.

"After all, I had no busband to turn to for advice. My second husband, Eugene Douvan, who helped me raise Sandra—he died of a heart attack just before we came to Hollywood, so I was both father and mother to the child in her most formative years.

"There we were, the two of us, alone in Hollywood. Naturally I was solicitous of her welfare. I didn't make her an actress. I never projected through my child. She was ambitious, and she wanted to make it on her own.

DATES WITH ACTORS

"I guess I should have had her go out with boys who weren't actors, who weren't in show business, but the studio kept putting her in one film after another—she's made 21 in 5 years—and they wanted to publicize and promote her, so they always had her going out with one of their young players, John Saxon or someone like that, and who could blame them? But Sandy never cared for actors or singers or men in show business. She said she'd never marry any of them. If ever she married, she'd choose a professional fellow or someone out of the business so there'd be no career conflict. And she was sincere, so I never worried on that score.

"I bought us a nice house with a swimming pool and I thought it was just a question of time before a flock of young college boys would come courting. But it never happened.

"In 1960," Mrs. Douvan recalls, "we went to Rome on location, and Bobby Darin was in the picture, and you know how things are on location. The whole crew gets thrown together, and soon everyone is buddy-buddy. But at the start, Sandy wouldn't even give Bobby the time of day. She was nice and polite, but she wasn't interested. But the last month something happened. I don't know what. Maybe it was the lure of first love or the magic of Rome or something. It sure wasn't Sandy trying to run away from me.

"I was so happy when they got engaged. After all, Bobby was of age. He was then 24 or 25. He seemed to know what he wanted from life and he seemed capable of getting it.

"When we returned to New York, it was November, around Thanksgiving, and Sandra said she and Bobby planned to get married in February. I thought maybe they should keep company more than 90 days—after all, a girl who has never dated anyone before, how does she truly know she's in love? What standard of comparison does she have? But three or four months was okay by me. But then the next day I saw Sandra with an adhesive patch on her arm, and I asked her what it was from. She said she and Bobby had taken a blood test, and I was sure they planned an almost immediate marriage.

'THINK IT OVER'

"I asked Sandy to wait, to have a regular courtship. It wasn't that I didn't want her to marry Bohby. I just didn't want her to do it so quickly without her getting to know and understand this young man and his problems. I wanted both of them to have a sustained dating period. I just said to her: "Think it over. Think it over. All I have in mind is your own personal happiness."

"When later they split up—it was Bobby who left, not Sandra—and she came to me, I didn't say, 'I told you so,' or anything like that. I merely said, 'If you love him, if you feel happier with him than without him, go back.' So now they're back together, leading their own lives, certainly without any interference from me. So you can see I'm not the terrible, demanding, overpossessive mother I've been made out to be."

Sandra Dee succumbed too quickly to the lure of first love and impetuous marriage. Fortunately, she and her husband have now given their marriage a second chance, largely because they are convinced of their mutual love, and they prize highly the future welfare of their infant son.

In many other young marriages, however, there is no such second chance, only disillusionment and divorce.

Sociologists and authorities on marriage point out that the girl who is prepared for and doesn't rush into marriage—a girl in her early twenties—has a much better chance of forming an enduring marital partnership than an eager, unprepared, emotionally unsettled teenager.

How does a parent prepare a girl for marriage in her early twenties?

Sandra Dec's mother, who's learned the hard way, says: "Don't let your daughter start dating boys when she's 11 or 12 or 13, because when she's been through it all, the thrill and experience of dating, marriage is all that's left for her. That's the trouble with so many girls today. Nothing's left for them, they imagine, but marriage, and that's why they want it so desperately and are so anxious to enter into it so quickly.

"I think the best way is to let a girl start dating boys, going out on triple dates, to parties with a number of friends, when she's 16. By the time she's 20 or 21, she's finished her formal education, she's had a full social life, she's had enough experience to develop the capacity to judge a man.

"Nowadays so many girls are more interested in marriage than the mun they're marrying,"

GOOD SAMARITAN LAW.

To date 21 states have passed Good Samaritan laws to protect doctors who stop at accidents to help victims. In the past. many doctors who have saved the lives of these injured, have later been sued on the grounds of malpractice by these same ingrates. As a result, doctors have been advised by lawyers and insurance companies to keep traveling when they encounter a wreck: New Jersey is the latest state to pass a Good Samaritan law.

VANISHING SPONSORS.

The major trouble with television in this country is its economic structure. Primarily an advertising medium, TV draws sponsors who want to be identified with "a happy, non-partisan, non-controversial, entertaining program." Thus when news or documentary shows built around controversial issues in government, finance, politics or sociology are offered, there are no takers. The networks are "stuck" with such

shows, usually at great financial loss. The result: They cancel such videofare as Eyewitness, and Chet Huntley Reporting and relegate their news and documentary programs largely to non-prime time. In 1960 President Eisenhower's Committee on National Goals said: "Thus far, television has failed to use its facilities adequately for educational and cultural purposes, and reform in its performance is urgent. " To expect the TV networks to absorb the financial loss of public service programs is unrealistic. Great Britain has beaten the problem by offering its people both publicly owned and privately owned TV channels.

HOTELS VS. SHIPS. Hetel-owners are up in arms against shipping lines which use their vessels as hotels and rent out their ballrooms for social functions. On October 3, for example, the Holland-America Line is permitting use of the Nieuw Amsterdam for a charity dinner to benefit the Boys Towns of Italy. Benny Goodman's band will entertain in the main ballroom: and tickets will cost $100 apiece. Hotel-owners in New York have already registered their protests with the shipping line. But as one Holland-America executive points out: "We pay $1,200,000 a year for pier rent and we've got to do something to pay the rent."

Bringing up Baby, • Hints collected By Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

Someone's going steady with daddy

Memo from a popular dad in his own right, Dan Gerber. "It may interest you to know that here at Gerber your baby's foods are 'custom-cooked' to insure digestibility and better nourishment. For example, some foods require longer cooking than others...some higher temperatures. Fruits are flash-cooked... sweet-potatoes are slow-cooked (to break down starches into easily digested sugars). Egg yolks are treated differently from meats. Whatever the method, cooking time and temperatures are scientifically controlled to preserve the utmost in precious food values."

A bit about blocks. There's something about blocks that absolutely captivates toddlers. With or without dad's inspirational help, they're great fun to stack up and topple down. Interestingly enough, they have educational value, too. Every time your toddler succeeds in getting one block to stay on top of another, his hands and eyes advance in skill. Every time he hits upon a new arrangement, he develops his creative imagination.

More about blocks... the "building blocks" of the body; namely proteins. Gerber High Protein Cereal has a 35% protein content, to say nothing of added iron, calcium and B-vitamins. Add a toasty, nut-like flavor and you've nutrition in the nicest form imaginable.

Toddler tactics. From time to time toddlers go on a milk strike. You can often encourage a reluctant one to drink his milk if you let him sip it through a brightly colored plastic straw. Other ways you can get milk into a toddler: offer extra servings of cereal. Or Gerber Custard Puddings. Or treat him to a nog, using Gerber Egg Yoiks as a base and Gerber Orange Juice and sugar for flavoring.

For your baby's well-being: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say:

FUND/65 PLAN OPEN AGAIN

No medical examinations. No health questions.

For a limited time, the famous Fund/65 Plan has been reopened for people 65 or older. This is the low-cost insurance plan that helps pay your hospital and surgical bills and which you can join now regardless of your present state of health. It's open to residents of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. No other plan of this kind now available in these states offers both surgical and hospital protection at lower cost.

Who is eligible? Any resident of the above states, regardless of past or present condition of health, provided he or she is age 65 or older on the effective date of coverage.

Are medical examinations required? Absolutely not. And you need not answer any health questions whatsoever.

Exactly what protection do I get? The Fund/65 Plan covers you for all kinds of injuries or illnesses except those caused by war or covered by any Workmen's Compensation or Occupational Disease law, provided hospitalization or surgery is required. Your Fund/65 Plan policy details the exact benefits summarized below. No guesswork — you know in advance how much you receive.

When am I protected? Your protection begins on October 1 if you live in California, and on October 12 if you live elsewhere. It continues for as long as you pay your premium.

Am I covered for surgical expenses? Yes, A schedule right in your policy spells out exactly the maximum amount you are paid for expenses incurred for every type of operation in or out of the hospital. Payments range from $5 to $200 (Examples: $5 for removal of a toenail; $100 for removal of cataract by lens extraction; $200 for perineal prostate removal.)

Am I covered for hospital room and board? You are—up to $10 a day for expenses incurred for as long as 31 days for each hospital confinement as a bed patient anywhere in the world. Not covered is confinement in Veterans Administration or other federal government hospitals, or in clinics and institutions operated primarily as nursing, rest or convalescent homes, or those established for treatment of alcoholics or narcotic addicts.

Who pays for X-rays, tests, medicines, drugs? Your Policy pays you up to $100 for those expenses you incur each time you are confined as a bed patient in the hospital as a result of a new accident or illness. This allowance covers X-ray examinations, operating room fee, anesthetics (including cost of administration), laboratory tests, prosthetic devices, dressings, drugs, medicines, and ambulance service to and from the hospital.

How often can I receive benefits? You receive benefits every time you are in the hospital as a bed patient for a different cause even if confinements are just a few days apart. You can even collect benefits for the same cause over and overprovided six months elapse between each confinement.

Am I covered if I am ill right now? Yes, if you have not been medically treated or advised for that particular illness.

What if I have been treated? You will still receive benefits when hospital confinement begins or surgery is performed after the coverage has been in effect six months.

Can the Company cancel my policy? The Company cannot cancel your policy, change the benefits, or raise premium rates unless it does so on all Fund/65 Plan policies in your state. You may terminate on any monthly premium date.

Can I collect on other policies, too? Certainly. You receive benefits from your Fund/65 Plan policy in addition to any other policies you might have. For example, benefits from your Fund/65 Plan will be paid in addition to Blue Cross, C. P. S., and even in the case of pre-paid medical plans when you incur hospital or surgical expenses. The only restriction is one Fund/65 Plan policy per person.

Are there any tax benefits? Yes. Your Fund/65 Plan premiums are treated as medical expenses for purposes of taking federal income tax deductions.

$10,000 additional hospital coverage only $9.25 a month more

Thousands of Fund/65 Plan members now enjoy protection against costly hospital and surgical expenses. But what happens when hospital expenses exceed the Fund/65 Plan benefits? Who would pay for long-term hospital confinements that could cost thousands of dollars? To guard against such catastrophic bills, Fireman's Fund introduced the Plus/$10,000 Plan. Available only to present Fund/65 Plan policyholders and those now joining, it provides $10,000 added hospital expense protection for an additional $9.25 a month.

More protection at lower cost than any plan of its kind. This protection package—Fund/65 Plan and Plus/$10,000 Plan—is offered at a combined monthly cost of only $15.75. Your Plus/$10,000 Plan coverage will be effective on October 1, if you live in California, and on October 12 if you live elsewhere. Like the Fund/65 Plan, coverage continues as long as you pay your premium. Addition of Plus/$10,000 Plan coverage does not affect your present Fund/65 Plan coverage in any way.

Who is eligible? Any person, age 65 or older, who is enrolled or who now enrolls in the Fund/65 Plan may take out this additional protection. If you choose, you may enroll only in the Fund/65 Plan, but the Plus/$10,000 Plan cannot be purchased separately. It is added protection, available only to members of the Fund/65 Plan.

How does it work? The Plus/S10,000 Plan takes over as soon as charges made for hospital room and board and miscellaneous hospital services exceed by $200 the charges for the same items covered by the Fund/65 Plan. The Plus/S10,000 Plan pays 80% of all additional hospital room and board and most other expenses for which the hospital makes a charge until you have collected up to $10,000.

You are fully protected for each new ailment, even if you have used all your Plus/$10,000 Plan benefits for another accident or illness—provided six months clapse between each hospital confinement.

The Plus/$10,000 Plan does not pay for surgical expenses; however, this in no way affects the surgical coverage under your Fund/65 Plan.

What are the other benefits? Coverage for existing illnesses, types of hospitals included, exclusions, provisions for renewal or change of policy, increase of premiums, and tax benefits for the Plus/$10,000 Plan are the same as in the Fund/65 Plan.

SARAKA SOLVES THE PROBLEM OF "AFTER 45" IRREGULARIT

Doctor-approved bulk stimulant helps keep you comfortably on schedule as no ordinary laxative can!

As we grow older, our systems may often need outside aid to help maintain a normal regularity pattern. Continued use of strong drug laxatives can be irritating, even dangerous. That's why many doctors recommend SARAKA, the pure, all-vegetable bulk stimulant laxative for middle age and over, SARAKA supplies the moist, bland bulk that is so essential to healthy bowel function. And only SARAKA has a gentle stimulant action to help case this bulk through your system plus Vitamin B,.

Special note to weight watchers: Lack of sufficient bulk in 900 caloric liquids can lead to constipation. If this occurs, supplement your daily diet with all-vegetable SARAKA.

AVE YOU hidden any money lately? It seems as if everyone else has. In Troy, O., a few weeks ago, a dying feed-mill owner revealed on his death-hed that he had buried a fortune beneath the mill; excavation disclosed $500,000 stashed away in three milk cans. The next day, in Madison, N.Y., thieves cracked a safe and took $250,000. The owner, widow of an auto dealer, then disclosed she had another $350,000, tucked away in a secret compartment.

Such secret caches are just one way money vanishes. Currency and coins are constantly disappearing from common circulation. Where does it go? Count a random handful of pennics. You may not find one dated before 1935, and probably no Indian-head pennies. Yet before 1919, when Indian-head pennies were last made, they were issued by the billions. Where are they? Buffalo nickels, made until 1938, also by the billions, have already been replaced mostly by Jefferson nickels.

How long has it been since you received in change a Booker T. Washington half-dollar? Did you ever receive one? Yet from 1946 to 1951, no less than 2,967,205 were made.

There are mysteries. U.S. paper money was reduced to its present size July 1, 1929. Many people now living never saw or handled the old big bills, which were retired as promptly as possible. Yet today the Treasury Department reckons that about $140 million have never been turned in. Where are theul serve Bank for 10 bags of nickels and returned with 1: nickels were in short supply that day. Some more permanently disappearing money goes into private hoards. An lown housewife ripped the back off an old mirror she had bought at an auction for 75 cents, and bills began cascading out on the table. They were all large-size bills, apparently from about the time of the Wall St. crash. The lady's investment made her $1,208 richer.

Money can be lost in the ocean deeps; it's anybody's guess how much went down with the Thresher. Some money is burned up. A plane crash can destroy all the money aboard. Thousands of pennies disappeared regularly at one time because car owners used them to operate balky coils on Model-Ts.

Some coins wear out, or become bent and twisted; the Mint calls them "uncurrent." A good deal of money quits circulating by going into coin collections; there are estimated to be 3 million or more coin collectors in the U.S.

MEMORIAL-DAY FIND

Burying money was the common ancient way of hiding it. The Bible mentions the practice. Sometimes amazing burying sites are chosen. A man stood at the bedside of his dying father, who, paralyzed and unable to speak or write, desperately tried to tell him something. He didn't succeed. But next Memorial Day, the son was decorating his parents' graves and from his mother's dislodged a tin containing what looked like currency. Search turned up several more. The contents were sent to Washington, and Treasury examiners identified and redcemed $23,000.

Badly damaged paper cannot be circulated but if identifiable in big-enough pieces, its value can be recovered from the government. A Midwest farmer, for example, lost his wallet while feeding cows. He suspected a certain cow of eating it. He killed her and found the mangled mass in her stomach. He sent it to Washington and experts identified and refunded $473.

Hiding large sums is unquestionably less common than it used to be, thanks to banks, credit cards and charge accounts. Yet today a good many people make a practice of having quite a bit of real stuff where they can get it. Many hide it on their persons. A Texas policeman saw an old man who looked as if he could use a square meal and offered him one. The man thanked him and said he could buy his own: he flashed a wad of bills adding up to $4,500.

Some coins disappear almost as soon

as they're minted, because, although they're genuine money, like the Booker T. Washington half-dollar, they aren't really meant for circulation. This is true of "proof sets," which contain one each of the five U.S. coins from 1 to 50 cents. Worth 91 cents, the Mint charges $2.10 for a set enclosed in clear plastic. Some sets command fabulous sums. If you want a proof set for 1895, you might have to pay $1,100 for it.

And some people keep money out of circulation as investment or speculation—like the people who tried to cash in on the closing of the San Francisco mint. They bought rolls of uncirculated coins, hoping prices would soar. They said it was better than playing the stock market: the coins were always worth at least face value, and in time, if they became scarce, they might be worth a fortune!

LET'S GO ON A DINOSAUR HUNT

by JACK ANDERSON

Dinosaur expert Untermann poses with thigh bone he bagged on hunt with author Anderson.

"Would you like to go dinosaur hunting?" asked Glade Sowards, quite casually. It was a reasonable suggestion. He is the Chamber of Commerce president here and wants visitors to enjoy themselves. He admitted that trout fishing is popular with tourists; but I had to agree with him that a dinosaur trophy over my mantel would make a more provocative conversation piece than a stuffed fish.

I inquired about the best weapons to use. Sowards said this was a matter for the experts. He referred me to G. E. Untermann, a hulking, flame-faced fellow with great hunched shoulders and wispy white hair, who runs the Utah Field House of Natural History.

The first prerequisite for stalking dinosaurs, said Mr. Untermann, is a whisk broom. Mind you, his advice is not to be taken lightly; he happens to be one of the world's foremost dinosaur hunters. He has been pursuing these bygone blockbusters since 1919.

But don't get the idea that dinosaurs can be bagged with a whisk broom alone. We also brought along a formidable arsenal of chisels, picks and shovels.

In Untermann's red pick-up truck, we headed into dinosaur country. He wore a uniform and badge, giving our safari an official air. Untermann is the state dinosaur game warden, so to speak, having powers to deal with dinosaur-bone poachers. He cautioned me with wry humor that I was entitled to pursue, shoot and kill only one Tyrannosaurus Rex, adult male, or one Diplodocus Giganticus, either sex.

Untermann explained that 12 species of these prehistoric reptiles had once tromped and sloshed in the great, misty swamplands of northern Utah—a fact which may startle visitors who remember this state as one of the world's least swampy places. But Untermann assured me the high and dry Uintah mountains had been steaming swamps 150 million years ago, give or take an eon.

bones in the sand

Monsters though they were, most dinosaurs lived on a sissy diet of water plants. They tended to die along streams, being carried by the current until their considerable carcasses would run aground on a sandbar. These sandbar cemeteries eventually evolved into the dinosaur quarries of today.

The carcasses became buried, says Untermann, under 9-to-10,000 feet of sediment. But during one millenium, the earth gave a terrible wrench and threw up the rugged multi-colored Uintah mountains. This cataclysmic event thrust the long-dead dinosaurs up from their deep graves to the surface.

Though now within pick-and-shovel range, the ancient fossils always arrange to be found in the most inaccessible spots. We drove up Steinaker Draw, north of here, into rainbow-hued mountains where Untermann had spotted a likely quarry. Then we climbed on foot toward a colorful gash in the mountainside—a blending of pinks and purples, yellows and whites—where erosion had exposed geologic secrets of millions of years ago.

Untermann told me to look for "bone scrap," a tell-tale sign that a dinosaur had been there. Although I saw nothing resembling bones, he soon pointed triumphantly at what looked like a scattering of rocks. These bits, he said, were dinosaur bone fragments. He called this geologic arrangement a "float."

My question, "Where do we dig?" drew a look of mild scorn from Untermann. "Nature never throws bone scraps uphill," he said.

Thus I learned my first lesson in dinosaur hunting. Once you find bone scraps—having brought along an expert to assure that they are bone scraps—you start following the fragments uphill to their source. Then, with what energy is left after the hot and rugged climb, you start to dig.

buried in ash

Excavating the small quarry, fortunately, wasn't too difficult. For our dinosaur, to quote the jovial Mr. Untermann, "had made an ash of himself," He had managed to be buried in volcanic ash which was fairly easy to remove.

Surveying the quarry with an expert eye, Untermann commented that it might also contain uranium. He complained that uranium hunters often stomped off with radioactive dinosaur bones that belonged more properly to posterity than to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Digging away, we found larger rocks, which he also identified as dinosaur bones. Then he picked up a smooth stone that looked as if it had been polished by a jeweler. Untermann explained it had come from a dinosaur's stomach. The great reptiles used to swallow stones to aid their digestion, he said, just as chickens swallow grit today. Grinding against the food in the cavernous stomach, the stones would achieve a high polish. Hundreds have been found.

From the flush on his face, I could tell my dinosaur expert had discovered something significant. It was a rock clearly shaped like a huge bone. With picks and chisels, we fell to it. Then Untermann stopped all activity and dramatically held aloft the whisk broom. With expert flourishes, he brushed away the dirt from the bone. "I learned how to do this," he said, "from a Pullman porter."

Eventually, we retrieved a tremendous bone which Untermann identified as the thighbone of the Diplodocus Giganticus (see photo). We lugged it back to town, and the great dinosaur hunt ended.

But there are many more bones still to be tracked down. All you need are strong legs, thick shoe soles, an expert to identify the fossils—and a whisk broom.

You would expect this to be exciting news. Yet, quite likely, it is within a few steps of where you are at this moment. The drug?

An ice cube.

Ice is such a powerful anesthetic that surgeons have used it to perform certain types of major surgery with patients wide awake. In most cases the patients were almost immediately afterward able to sit up in bed, ask for something to eat and then chat with friends on the phone. As they had no anesthetic by inhalation or by injection, there were no after-effects or drowsiness.

Aside from such extremes, dozens of everyday conditions could benefit from ice as pain reliever.

A little sliver in the tip of your finger is easily removed with the point of a needle sterilized in a match flame. If you cannot stand the pain in the sensitive fingertip, place the tip of the finger on an ice cube until it becomes numb. Then the sliver can be lifted out without discomfort.

A nurse in a certain doctor's office is a great favorite with children. She gives them their immunization shots. Before each shot, she places an ice cube over the area for about 15 seconds, quickly dries it with tissues, swabs the skin with alcohol and puts the needle in while the spot is still numb from the ice.

ice the 'trigger' area

Sometimes ice can relieve backache when it is due to simple muscular strain. A man went to a doctor's office complaining that the pain in his back was so severe that he could not bend forward an inch. After examination, the doctor decided to spray the back with ethyl chloride, a chemical which can freeze the skin. However, the bottle was empty. So the doctor put an ice cube over the "trigger" area, the spot which, when pressed, triggered extreme pain in the back. In a few minutes the area was numb.

To the patient's surprise he was able to get off the examining table without help. He bent forward and tied his shoelaces.

When a person gets a heart attack the doctor might have to use morphine to prevent shock due to the massive pain. But until the doctor comes, an ice cube rubbed gently on the chest over the painful area can give relief. After such treatment, morphine may not even be necessary when the doctor arrives.

Persons who cannot tolerate narcotics or who demand an unreasonable amount after surgery, or for some painful ailment, are often given the ice treatment. Not only is the pain relieved but the disagreeable effects of the narcotics such as nausea, constipation and drowsiness are avoided, to say nothing of the possibility of addiction. Unfortunately, ice cannot be used for too long a period after surgery because cold inhibits the healing of incisions.

When you burn a finger by accidentally touching something hot, you instinctively want to cool it immediately. Most people are conditioned to look for butter or an oily substance. But, ideally, the finger should be put in a glass or bowl of cold water in which an ice cube or two has been placed. Or the ice cube can be rubbed directly over the burn until the sting is no longer felt when the cube is removed.

The relief from pain is prompt. More important there will be very little swelling, and blisters won't form. Consequently, the burn will heal more rapidly.

IHE AMAZING 'DRUG' IN YOUR KITCHEN

by Herbert L. Herschensohn, M.D.

Burned fingers should be held in bowl of water containing ice cubes. Pain will lesson, blisters won't form.

You can apply your favorite burn preparation after the pain has subsided.

There is another type of heat injury in which an ice cube works dramatically. A husband and wife were driving across the Mojave desert during the summer in intense heat. The wife was becoming flushed; her eyes became glassy. As she was about to pass out, her husband opened a thermos bottle in which there was cold water containing ice cubes, and rubbed some across her arms, forehead and back of the neck. The treatment revived her in seconds.

Ice has another medical virtue. It helps to stop bleeding, not only that which is visible but bleeding which occurs under the skin—as when a shin is kicked or an eye bruised. The black-and-blue discoloration is due to leakage of blood from torn blood cessels. An ice cube over the injured place constricts the blood vessels so there is less leakage until clotting takes place. This means not only less discoloration but less swelling, less damage to the surrounding tissues, and less pain.

Wherever there is a sports contest, a supply of ice cubes should be readily available. No matter what part of the body is injured ice cubes can be applied with utmost safety. It is to be understood that regardless of how much relief is obtained by the ice the injured person must not return to the game until seen by a doctor. What may appear to be nothing more than a sprain could be a fractured bone.

Another virtue of ice cube treatment is that it helps to prevent infection. Any part of the body that is refrigerated is not likely to become infected, even if contaminated with dirt. The ice-cold temperature keeps germs dormant and unable to multiply and spread. If an ice cube can be held against the wound until a doctor arrives, the danger of infection is practically eliminated.

In emotional disorders ice has been used with success, especially in schizophrenia cases. A sheet wrung out in ice-cold water and placed around the nape of the neck is usually enough of a shock treatment to calm the patient.

When a shoplifter was apprehended by a department store detective she became hysterical. She was taken to the store's first-aid room. The nurse and others could not restrain her, until the nurse took an ice cube and held it forcibly against the woman's neck. The effect was as instantaneous as if a hypodermic sedative had been given. The screaming subsided into soft sobs as she calmed down.

Many skin conditions can be relieved by an ice cube. Itching is an outstanding example. When the skin itches, it is natural for a person to rub or scratch, but relief is only momentary. The itching not only comes back, but more intensely. More scratching and damage to the skin follow. The application of an ice cube stops the itching.

When the area is wide, then the ice cubes can be finely cracked, placed in a Turkish towel which is folded over so that the pack can be adjusted to the contours of the affected part. The pack can be left in place until all the ice melts and reapplied as often as necessary.

This ice-pack method is particularly applicable to such places as the shoulder, in case of bursitis, or to the ankle in case of sprain.

The application of ice directly to the bare skin has been used in the treatment of acne, insect bites, corns and other dermatological conditions.

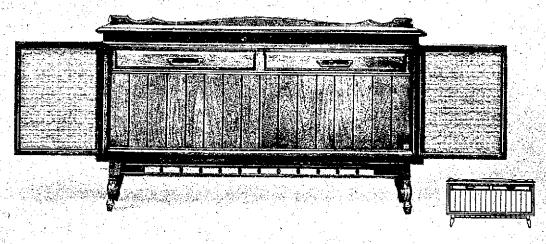

Does this direct application to the bare skin ever cause frostbite—which can be dangerous?

No, it never does. Ice is not dangerous, because it refrigerates the tissues, it does not freeze them. Freezing does cause frostbite with severe damage to the skin and underlying tissues. Water freezes at zero degrees Centigrade. Blood and tissues freeze at a slightly lower temperature. This means that if the skin is simply refrigerated the temperature of the tissues is lowered to somewhere between a half and five degrees above freezing. The difference is not much, but it is great enough to be a good margin of safety.

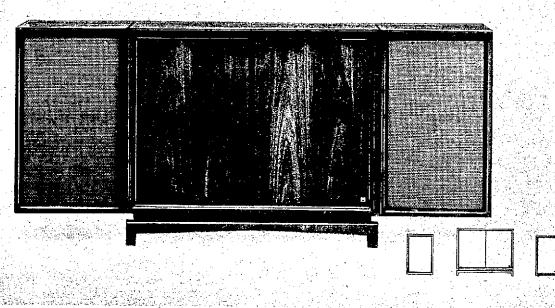

Some persons in their desire to increase the benefit of ice have made ice bags adding salt to them. Salted ice does hasten and intensify chilling but it can cause frostbite.

Leave well enough alone. The ice cube will work efficiently and safely just by itself and needs no further "help."

Smog Foes Face a Growing Enemy

FOR 16 YEARS, the war on smog has been led by the Los Angeles County Air Pollution Control District, During those 16 years. the county has spent $35 million to combat an enemy who grows stronger every year because of continued industria) expansion and an almost unbelievable increase in motor vehicles.

The war has been on two major fronts: stationary sources of pollution, such as refineries and other industrial plants and incinerators, and motor vehicles.

CONTROL of the stationary sources has been the major success of the APCD, according to Smith Griswold, county air pollution control officer.

By enforcement of a rigid set of rules, recommended by the APCD and adopted by the Board of Supervisors, nearly 5,000 tons of pollutants which otherwise would be emitted every day into the atmosphere now are being trapped at their

5 SHOPPING CENTERS TAX REHEARI

By DON BRACKENBURY

An unprecedented Superior Court ruling has ordered Los Angeles County supervisors to rehear petitions from 15 shopping centers—three in the Long Beach area—to reduce 1959 assessments on their property by $4.5 million.

The local firms are Thriftimart Inc., for its shopping center at Bellflower Boulevard and South Street; John S. and Helene H. Griffith, Lakewood Triangle, and John S.

In 1959, the then county assessor, John R. Quinn, levied assessments totaling $7,557,560 against the 15 shopping centers.

The firms petitioned supervisors, sitting as a board of equalization, for reductions in the assessments. The firms said the assessments should have totaled only $2,993,140.

Supervisors rejected the petitions and the 15 firms paid, under protest, $413,429 in county taxes. They took the matter to court in August 1962.

Superior Judge Joseph W. Vickers, after a year of litigation, ruled that there was "no substantial evidence" to support the board of equalization's finding that Quinn had applied the same ratio of assessed value to fair hearings "since some embarassment might attach to the market value of the shopping centers as that which prevailed throughout the county.

Griffith Properties, Santa Fe Springs Shopping Center.

Judge Vickers said the board of equalization's denial of reductions in assessments was "arbitrary and capricious" and therefore void.

In ordering the rehearings, Judge Vickers said the assessor should answer all "revelant or material" questions, including (1) the method he used in arriving at the market value of the properties as of the first Monday in March 1959, (2) the market values of the properties, and (3) the ratio prevailing generally throughout the county, "in a specific and definite percentage figure," of assessed to fair market value.

Quinn, of course, is retired and will not appear to represent the assessor's office.

By a quirk of fate, neither will his successor, Philip

In 1959, Watson was a tax consultant for the shop-ping-center group—although he did not file the petition for assessment review and did not appear before the board of equalization.

In a letter to County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy, Watson said he will disqualify himself from the re-county's position" if he participated.

Watson said his office would rely upon the testimony of "competent civil service appraisal personnel of this office to present the record."

He further commented that, inasmuch as the rehearings deal with assessments made two years before his election, he is "in no way involved." Watson was elected last November and took office last December.

Thriftimart Inc. was assessed at $185,290 for its property at Bellflower Boulevard and South Street and protested $130,210 of this.

John S. Griffith properties at Lakewood Triangle were assessed at $420,710, of which $210,730 was protested. At Santa Fe Springs Shopping Center, Griffith's holdings were assessed at $559,610, of which $410,200

Report JFK to OK Wheat Sale to Russ

Officials Studying Proposal

Phone HE 5-1161

WASHINGTON (UPI) Congressional sources said Saturday they expect a quick decision on a possible multimillion-dollar wheat sale to Russia after President Kennedy returns Monday from his western tour. The chances are it will be favorable, they said,

This feeling was expressed by lawmakers who attended a closed-door briefing by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges Thursday.

They said they could "sense" what was coming even though the administration had made it clear no final decision has been made.

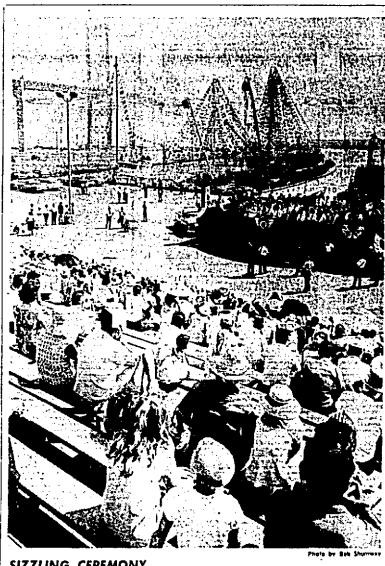

ONE congressman, who is close to the White House. said he didn't anticipate a concrete Russian offer until the United States indicated in some way that it would be receptive.

Freeman, Hodges and Undersecretary of State George W. Ball will hold a similar closed-door session Monday with members of the Senate Foreign Relations and Agriculture committees.

Mr. Kennedy already has started to sound out Congress on the issue and has found it runs both hot and cold, depending on the legislator and what part of the country he comes from, Everybody seems cautious, however.

CONGRESS would favor the United States getting rid of some of its huge wheat surplus for dollars or gold, thus helping to reduce both stockpiles and the balance-of-payments deficit. But none wants to be pinned down with a "soft on communism" label or be accused of providing substantial help to the Soviet system.

"At least they won't be shooting it (the wheat) back at us," said Rep. Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-N.J., a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and one of those favoring the wheat sale,

35 Dams for $3.7 Billion Proposed in 50-Year Plan

SACRAMENTO UP - A 50-year plan to expand the California Water Project by 35 dams in the north coastal region at a cost of $3.7 billion was unveiled Saturday by Gov. Brown.

The cost would be nearly double that of the first stage of the state plan-the Feather River Project-which is now under construction. It would produce three times as much water - 12 million acrefeet a year, about half as much as the whole state

The governor did not propose any financing method, but said it would take the combined re-sources of the state, federal and local governments.

Water Resources Director William E. Warne sald his department has reached "general agreement" with federal agencies on plans for development of the Upper Eel and adjacent basins, which are authorized under present law.

He said he hopes to reach agreement on the whole plan, which involves nine

Trend in Furniture Styling Is Variety

No single trend of furniture styling predominates this fall in the new lines of home furnishings. In fact, many home decor experts warn: "Don't go too far and have everything the same."

This means that a blending of contemporary and traditional furniture is in vogue and with one or two new pieces of furniture a home may take on a new look.

Details of the newest in furniture trends with many pictures of room settings will be found today in the Home Furnishing Fashions section of The Independent, Press-Telegram.

La.C. Says: Who Remembers?

Public opinion polls indicate that the older people are more conservative than the younger. This is no great change from past generations. The younger people live more for today while many of the older people live more in the past. The vigor and progressiveness of the young is essential to progress. But the experience of the older people, if objectively used, is a great safeguard against repeating old errors.

One of the experiences of about a third of our population was that of living through and remembering the 1929 crash and the Roosevelt New Deal administration from 1933 to start of World War II. A poll shows that 64 per cent of our present population does not remember these early New Deal days. Fiftysix per cent of them were not born at time of the 1929 crash. It should be of interest to newcomers to our population to consider some of these events and compare them with what is happening today.

There is great concern today over our unemployment of around 5 per cent of our work force. We are told we must carry on great public works projectsyouth camps and tax cuts with increased government spending to overcome this situation. But a glance at the unemployment figures from the start of the New Deal in 1933 to start of World War II in 1939-when we started making war material-is not much encouragement to those who would decrease the unemployment rate by government spending.

The New Deal immediately started vast public works programs. PWA, WPA, NRA and CCC, and dozens of other alphabetical agencies were put into effect. Large deficits-for those days-were incurred. Anyone who insisted that freedom of enterprise would more quickly bring about recovery was denounced as "an economic royalist." Well, here is the official record of unemployment from 1933 to 1940:

	Unemploy-		Unemploy-	lg
Year	ment Rate	Year	ment Rate	ľa
	24.9	1937	14.3	0
	21.7	1938	14.3 19.0 17.2	ď
1935	20.1	1939	17.2	lo.
1936	16.9	1940	9.9	1"
1 It wa	as only our entranço	e into the war t	hat brought	li
	1		_	1_

our unemployment to its lowest rate of 1.2 per cent. It held at that rate until the end of the war, Immediately after the war, even though we had shortages of about everything, it jumped to 3.9 per cent in 1946 and up to 5.9 per cent in 1949. With very few exceptions it has remained at 5 per cent or more for the years since 1950.

Importance of these statistics is that they show all-out spending by government to promote full employment has never succeeded. There are good reasons to believe it delayed improvement. Business was harassed by bureaucrats, regulations and general loss of confidence in our economic system. The New Deal agencies discouraged business in its efforts. The idea was that raking leaves and other useless projects were the only way to assure jobs for the people.

We are now being told that we can reduce unemployment only by government projects- subsidizing farmers, public buildings for underdeveloped areas, and more controls over business, unions, and the general economy. We are told that tax cuts-with greater deficit spending-is the answer. Well, anyone who remembers those 1930 years has reason to question this philosophy. The figures given above are official unemployment statistics. They should convince anyone that large government spending just does not provide the answer. It could do so only by complete government control over wages, prices and profits-with government telling everyone where they must work for set pay and hours of work. Unless you want this, the above figures should be carefully considered.

Bridge Dedicated as Gala Fishermen's Fete Feature

The colorful Parade of Boats highlights the Fishermen's Fiesta today beginning at 11, a.m., in a weekend · spectacle in San Pedro that saw the dedication of the yet-unopened San Pedro-Terminal Island bridge Saturday morning.

From 11 a.m. through noon today, the Fort Mac-Arthur military band will play at dockside.

Dockside ceremonies at noon and the beginning of the colorful boat parade at 12:35 p.m. will. highlight the afternoon.

FROM 1 P.M. through 4 p.m., national dance groups will entertain and street dancing will com-mence at 7:30 p.m., lasting until midnight.

Five hundred spectators, many in shirtsleeves and hiding beneath the makeshift shade of umbrellas, sweltered in 102-degree heat Saturday for dedication of the San Pedro-Terminal Island bridge, scheduled to open for traffic Nov. 15.

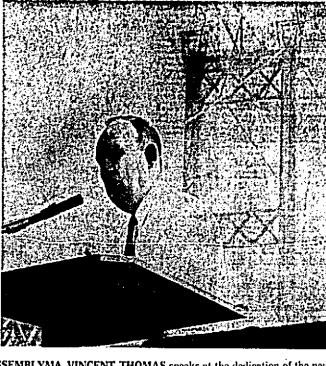

Conspicuously absent from the ceremony was Gov. Edmund G, Brown, who was elsewhere in California with President Kennedy's conservation

ALTHOUGH many of the state, national and local dignitaries indicated they had prepared lengthy speeches to mark the occasion, all cut their remarks short because of down on spectators sitting in specially constructed bleachers.

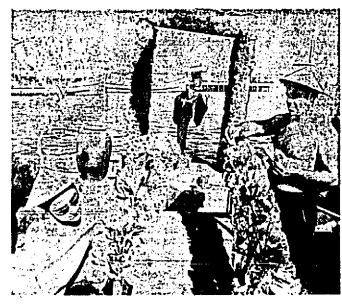

Under Secretary of the Navy Paul Fay, who had traveled from Washing-ton, D. C., for the event, displayed what appeared to be a multipage speech, but threw it aside with the comment, "Here goes five hours of blood, sweat and tears." He quipped, T've heard of sunny California, but you people are overdoing it."

ALTHOUGH none of the spectators or dignitaries appeared overly uncomfortable, most of the men doffed their suit coats for the affair which was preceded earlier in the day by a parade through San Pedro

Los Angeles Mayor Samuel Yorty said the bridge, which is California's third largest, "is a truly remarkable achievement."

Fishermen's Fiesta weekend, the dedicatory ceremonies preceded a 2 p.m. fishermen's skill contest and street dancing and entertainment Saturday night. Other dignitaries attending Saturday's bridge dedication included Congressman August Hawkins; Alan Cranston, state controller; Frank Jordan, secretary of state; Sens-Thomas Rees, and County Supervisor Burton Chace. Also taking part were

A GIRL FOR CHARLIE?

He's Getting to That Age

young Prince of Wales joins thousands of other oys going back to school. Britons are suddenly becoming aware that the heir to their throne is getting to "that age." Around the pubs they're beginning to wink and say, Wonder if young Charlie has a girl ye?")

By ROBERT MUSEL. LONDON (UPI)—Women have driven many a man to strong drink. Can the reverse be true of Princes Charles, heir to the British throne? This summer the son of Queen Elizabeth had his first alcoholic drink in public—a cherry brandy at a Scottish pub. Ever since then—although it may be merely poincidence-he has been Showing interest in the pretty and well born oung girls and teen-agers from whom he may some-

If he were, say, an American boy, the Prince probably would already be dating girls. But since he won't be 15 until Nov. 14 and the royal family has Its own strict rules he only meets them at parties or with his 13-yearold sister, Princess Anne. But the interest is definitely there and the cherry brandy incident served to alert the British public what matchmakers everywhere had taken into account-The Prince is growing up. Despite his comparative youth, the race to share his throne — distant though that day may be since his mother is a young 37—is already in its preliminary stages. he Royal Houses of Europe would be foremost among those jockeying for position except that fate has dealt them the unkindest cut of all.

So unless Charles chooses from the daughters of German princelings he is apt to find his bride among the British aristocracy as grandfather King George VI did when he married Lady Elizabeth Queen Mother.

One of his favorites at

dietta Euston, 14-year-old daughter of the Earl of Euston, who was his "acknowledged" sweetheart a few years ago, As very young children sometimes do, he said he was going to marry "Etta" when he grew up.

They still meet at parties and will probably see more of each other when Charles graduates from Gordonstoun School in Scotland, He will take the examination this autumn which will help his par-ents decide his future

This will include either a period of service in the navy-which his father. the sailor Duke of Edinburgh would like—or with the crack Grenadier Guards in the army, Preceding this will be university training — Dartmouth Naval College or even Oxford or Cambridge.

His cousin, Prince William of Gloucester, this term is starting a year at Stanford University in California, but Prince Charles is not apt to fol-low this royal precedent.

As heir to the throne e will have to pursue his studies in the nation he will someday rule. But that will keep him closer to the blue-blooded British beauties whose par-ents cannnot help thinking of him as the most eligible young man in the

Through his sister and through mixed dancing classes Prince Charles has met quite a few girls.

Among them is Marilyn

Wills, 14. daughter of Hon, Mrs. John Wills who is the Queen Mother's niece; Susan Babington-Smith, 13, daughter of a wealthy banker, as another friend and so is Caroline Hamilton, 13, granddaughter of the Dean of Windser.

The Prince will meet more of the "right" type of girls next year when he joins the Junior Polo Club of the Garth Hunt Club. Its members range from 12 to 17 years old. Charles may have liked the cherry brandy but if he has inherited any of the traits of his fun-loving incestors, King Henry VIII and King Edward VII, he is bound to decide soon that girls are more

Mother's Pepper Punishment Fatal

E CLEVELAND (A)-A 3-year-old girl died Saturdaydaughter's throat to punish her, police reported.

Dead on arrival at Grace Hospital was Kimberly Joyce Adkins, one of five children. The coroner will rule on the cause of death.

Held in connection with the death is the child's mother, Beverly, 28.

Shortly before noon Kimberly took a bottle from a nine-month-old baby. To punish the older child, Mrs. Adkins told detectives, she screwed off the top of a plastic pepper shaker and said, "Hold back your head." Mrs. Adkins said she poured out the pepper and her daughter got white, her lips turned purple and she went limp. A neighbor summoned to the home called WASHINGTON (P) -What an incredible, what a splendid, what a contradictory country this is! How big, how crowded, how empty, how jumpy, how tranquil!

These observations are made not as a poet wax-ing poetic, but as a stu-

that Los Angeles sprawls all over the lot. Geographically, it's our largest city with 454.8 square miles. But unless you're aware of what has been going on in the southwest recently you could be fooled on the second and largest cities in area.

They're Houston and Oklahoma City. Although this is what the book shows, apparently even the statisticians can't keep up with the rapid changes. Oklahoma City reports it now has 631.48 square miles within its city limits. New York, with by far the most population, is in fourth place, with 315.1 square miles. Incidentally, our older, established cities are no longer growing. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all lost population in the 10 years. Hail to thee, blythe suburbs!

GETTING back to Oklahoma City, science has confirmed it's the nation's windiest city.

On the average, the winds swirl across those Oklahoma plains at 14 miles an hour. That's far ahead of much maligned Chicago with 10.1.

Crazy for variety? Try Bismarck, N. D. Temperatures have been recorded there all the way from 109 degrees down to a minus 44. In San Juan, Puerto Rico, it has never been hotter than 96 or colder than 62.

In Colorado the mean altitude is 6,800 feet, and the lowest spot is still 3,350 feet high. The highest point in Delaware is 60 feet, at Ebright Road, wherever that may be.

The United States has 51 persons for each square mile, compared with the 897 crammed into each square mile of the Netherlands. But Rhode Islanders, with 812 for each square mile, are almost as crowded as the Dutch.

Alaska is the least populated, with 4 of a person per square mile. At that, Alaska is twice as crowded as it was 10 years ago.

The District of Columbia, with scarcely any open spaces left, has 12.524 inhabitants per square mile. Many of these are lawyers.

SOUTH CAROLINA has 1,264 people for every lawyer. Here in Washington, D. C., we have one lawyer for every 61 This is a reminder that you can't run a government, without

British Labor Smells Sweet Victory Scent

UP-Staggered by a slap from De Gaulle and a slip by John Profumo, the British Tory Party is believed on his way out of power. Harold Wilson's Labor Party is mounting a final effort to drive Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservatives from office.

Delegates are assembling here for Labor's 62nd annual conference, excited and confident that power is in their grain after 12 years in the wilderness. The conference opens Monday.

The five-day parley is the main forum of contact between Britain's rank-and-file socialists and their leaders. They will range over policy, from the employment of foreign, servant couples to nuclear strategy. Any decisions will guide-but not bind-a future Labor administration. British governments are answerable only to the nation, through parliament.

LABORITES today make up a great, modern political movement with a paid-up membership of more than 6 million. They are men and women, old and young, of all colors and creeds and kinds dedicated to the proposition of social equality in a cooperative, democratic, fair-shares state. A tradition of non-conformism and radicalism unites them. Now when nower stares them in the face and their country is in a jam Laborites are bubbling over with new ideas and plans and hopes to restore Britain's greatness.

Labor's radicalism nevertheless is tempered with realism in the divided world of Kennedy and Khrushchev and Mao Tze-tung. Like past labor governments, the leaders loyally respect the nation's elliances. It was a Labor forcign secretary, Ernest Bevin, who led a grateful Europe's response to the American Marshall Plan in the late 1940's. And it was Labor Prime Minister Clement (now Lord) Atlee who took Britain into the Atlantic Pact.

WHY ARE Labor's leaders sure, almost cockily sure. they're heading for victory? Almost every byelection and opinion poll since 1961 has told a tale of spreading disenchantment with conservative rule. A pro-labor swing of only three per cent would be more than enough to sweep away the Tory margin of about 95 seats in the 630-member House of Commons. Some pollsters have estimated the pro-Labor swing has zoomed up to 16 per cent.

The Conservative Government lately has been hit black and blue. Britain has been barred from joining Europe's Common Market by De Gaulle, The Common-wealth is divided. Successive espionage disclosures have shocked the nation. The sensational sex-security scandal surrounding ex-War Minister John Profumo, who shared the favors of Christine Keeler with a Russian diplomat, has tainted the whole regime. Foreign competitors are squeezing British traders out of some world markets.

LABOR'S internal quarrels are over the amount of sociialism in the party's official policies. If the senior medicine men water down their socialism they must expect to face howls from the left. Too strong a socialist mixture just won't be swallowed by the right. Thus the socialist flavor in Labor's program varies with the temperature of the times, And today Wilson and his lieutenants have concocted a brew acceptable to the right, left and center factions, at least while power is in prospect. The laborites have always followed gradualist policies. In 1918 a program drafted mainly by Sidney Webb-"Labor and the New Social Order"—committed the party to socialism as a goal, but only by methods of parlia-mentary democracy. Successive manifestoes since then have stressed evolutionary growth, giving priority to reformist action rather than to any attack on the basic structure of British society.

In 1945, when Atlee swept in, his administration carried out several important measures of socialization, yet without overthrowing the system of private enterprise.

TTS not easy to imagine what our people and building-laden area looked like when Long Beach was an infant of a town with a few hundred population and the surroundings were wide open spaces.

A word picture is available in a time-yellowed copy of a magazine, "The Cottage Hearth," published in Bos-ton in 1889, which came to this desk through the Diamond jubilee activities.

Clara Spaulding Brown was the writer. She had visited Long Beach, arriving on July 17, 1889, and she described her visit to the town in detail for Boston readers.

HERE'S an excerpt:

"Leaving the train a few miles from San Pedro we seated ourselves in a funny little one-horse car, with tender attached for baggage, which was to convey us the three miles between the station and the beach on a wooden railway.

"Around us stretched alkali marsh lands, and a mile to the right lay the grand Pacific . . . Slowly the heavily laden car bumped and jolted over the rails crossing the San Gabriel River and several sloughs until a long grade was reached, up which we were requested to walk . . . Hoping that another season would witness an improvement in the manner of reaching Long Beach, but pitying the animal on which such a burden was placed, we complied with the suggestion." .

So she came in on the famed GOP (get out and push) wooden railway. She relates how a hotel was under construction at the edge of the beach, but was not ready yet, so she stayed in a tent by the beach.

Speaking of the site of present day Long Beach, Mrs. Brown wrote of the bareness of the mesa: Californians are so accustomed to the treeless, level aspect of a large portion of their country that they don't realize its lack of beauty. To an eastern eye, it is depress-

Is that still the case? A lot has been done with water and planting, but there are still stretches of the Southland splendor.

AFTER Mrs. Brown had been here a while, she learned of the anti-liquor ordinance which prevailed in Long Beach in the early days wrote in great praise.

"It is intended to create a watering-place devoid of the objectionable features which characterize so many resorts where the lines are less rigidly drawn. . . .

"In time, no doubt, the embryo town will be like others, a place of modern imworldly pleasure, but now its chief charm lies in the quiet thoughts from the material soul anew for the inevitable conflict with a selfish, bustling world."

A most interesting report on the impressions of Long Microwaves Set Heach, and what it did for the soul of a visitor, way back in 1889.

And of course her prophecies came true-it did change from the charming little resort place, with primitive accomodations, she saw three quarters of a century ago.

AN important challenge for us today, it seems to me, is to see to it that the community does establish and retain features which give it distinction and an atmosphere suitable to its location by one of the world's most heautiful beaches. We need not abandon all that the 1889 writer found here,

15,000-Plus Enrollment 'Buries' LBSC

By ROBERT WILCOX

Long Beach State College, with more than 15,000 in classes for the first time, is in the midst of the worst enrollment crush in the school's history.

And nobody can tell exactly where it will end. Things looked crowded enough when the college predicted 1,000 more students for this year. In-stead it got 2,200. Here's what has han-unexpected rush? Nobody, to date, knows for

This much is known: About one-third of the increase came in education classes. Language and art also were hard-hit. The higgest "mystery" increases were in the sophomore and senior classes.

College officials speculate that many students were trying to beat the Jan, I deadline when they would be subject to new tougher, teacher credential requirements. Language is a new big area of teacher need. The LBSC art department is gaining prominence, attracting more students.

"AFTER YEARS OF predicting enrollment almost to the student, suddenly here it was," said David L. Bryant, executive dean.

"It" blew the fuses of the registration machinery toward the end of the first week. The college simply ran out of classes -and teachers. For the first time, registration windows were closed in mid-afternoon to regroup forces.

During the shutdown, classes were added, sizes increased and teachers hired. "Let's get the stusaid Dr. Carl W. McIn-; tosh, college president. "We'll worry about paying for it later."

Registration was reopened the next day and most potential students satisfied.

But increased parking woes remained, Last Monday when classes opened. the college's most farflung lots were crammed for the first time. Officials considered ordering emergency construction.

BUT ON TUESDAY spaces began to appear in the most distant parking areas. Barney Carmen, business manager, now calls the situation wishing to be near classes many of them with campus parking permitsare using a privately owned vacant field along Seventh Street, creating a traffic hazard. There are 200 cars there during peak hours. What about next fall if the rush continues? Limiting of enrollments at some state colleges is being considered.

The LBSC administration already is preparing for the spring semester, tightening schedules. "More classes at night and in the afternoons.' says Raymond Lindgren, dean of the college,

THE PEAK OF frustration, according to Chief Monroe,

"We honk, motion, sweat-and wait," he said.

Fire officials said the fastest their equipment can go

Police Capt. Stevenson said traffic officers are under strict orders to brake down at intersections. And he adds a disquieting sidebar: "And some times we can't even use the siren and light because it would give us away to a criminal. Figure out for yourself how fast our cars go then."

Both he and Capt. Kortz agreed that the smaller police car allows more maneuverability than, say, the Fire Departnent's 60-foot aerial ladder truck.

The police pursuit car can dart more easily into the opposite lane.

Interjected Capt. Monroe: "With faster roadways, center dividers and fence barriers now preventing even that ma-

IN PARTIAL attempt to solve the problem, emergency vehicles take to the side streets during rush hours when possible, attempt to avoid one-way streets and freeways and memorize access paths through the freeway "barriers."

As a result, Long Beach generally employs only eightr-nine-year veterans as drivers and pays them $113 a month more than the regular fireman.

"Aside from regular efficiency reports, they are given tests on driving, aptitude and intelligence," Chief Monroe

Area boundaries for police and fire coverage are outlined to take advantage of access roadways, general "work-load" of emergency calls based on past records of the district and the chance to overlap, to cover a neighboring area where a traffic jam may hamper the car on duty there. Larger cities have introduced the helicopter but obviously its weight-carrying feasibility and maintenance costs discourage its wider use.

CHIEF RIZZO SAYS some cities outside the Southland have experimented with red-striped emergency lanes in the middle of roadways and radio equipment on emergency yehicles that changes red lights to green with its beams.

But the sore point is that helicopters, widened streets and special equipment timed for traffic signals spell fatter budgets and taxes. Here again, the small city with its modest treasury and modest fire and police services can only sit by in awe as it sees the problem ballooning with more and more cars joining the speedways of the freeways.

"It's a good thing cities don't keep statistics on how nany lives could have been saved by speedy medical aid or crimes prevented by fast-closing police cars," one official concluded. "It gives you a more comfortable feeling, doesn't

Why Help Nikita With Our Wheat?

KHRUSHCHEV HAS PROMISED the Russian people the world's highest standard of living as proof to them and to the world that communism is a better system than capitalism.

Should the United States help prevent him from falling flat on his face?

He seems about ready to ask us to do so.

ESTIMATES OF THE Russian wheat crop loss this year have ranged from 10 per cent to as high as 50 per cent. That Khrushchev's shortages are acute is shown by the recent Russian deal with Canada for $500 million worth of wheat. Now the Russians are making overtures to Americans for the purchase of large quantities, perhaps as much as three million tons.

Russia's difficulties stem from the basic weakness of the Soviet system, which provides small incentive to the farmers and inadequate equipment and ferti-

If America sells Khrushchev wheat, it helps him cover up his weakness, helps communism maintain its grip on the Russian people and millions of non-Russians, and helps the Soviets convince uncommitted peoples that communism is desirable.

Further, if we should sell wheat to Russia, we would very likely do so at 60 cents below the domestic price-meaning that the U.S. taxpayer would be subsidizing grain exports to the enemy. Just incidentally, we'd be helping Khrushchev keep his agreement to send $33 million worth of wheat to his stooge in Cuba.

SOME CONGRESSMEN are already making speeches about all the practical reasons for selling American wheat to Khrushchev. Perhaps there would be some temporary economic advantages. But morally it is repugnant, and from a long-range practical point of view, it doesn't make good sense at all.

The Heat Wave

As weather extremes go, it wasn't much. The highest temperature ever recorded was 136 F. at

However, no one ever really gets used to weather. The human body is not very adaptable. An Eskimo in a swimsuit would freeze to death about as quickly as a Californian shoppers About the only thing anybody can do about weather

Sukarno Off on Another Crusade

I, P-T WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON-President Sukarno of Indonesia is off on another crusade. This time he is violently threatening the new independent state of Malaysia. Sukarno recently told a wildly cheering mob of 30,000 of his countrymen that he intended to destroy the new infant in the family of nations and immediately started planning to make good on

In order to understand President Sukarno it is necessary to realize that he is nothing more or less than a professional revolutionary. The Dutch provided a convenient whipping boy for Sukarno. While the Dutch were admittedly not the best colonizers in the world (they may, indeed, have been the worst), they were not responsible for all of the ills of Indonesia, although Sukarno tried hard to persuade Indonesians that this was the case. When he ran out of Dutch in his own country, he took dead aim at West New Guinea. That country had been a part of the Dutch empire, but had no social, ethnic or geographical connection with the Indonesian islands. Nonetheless Sukamo managed to create such an upmar over West New Guinea and made himself so obnoxious that the matter was finally adjudicated in his favor partially through the good offices of the United States. Whether U.S. participation in this grab was its

For a Buddhist child, the very term "God" would be strange. For a Catholic child who has been taught by his parents to make the sign of the cross before offering a prayer, it constitutes a departure from his religious practice. For the Jewish child who has been trained to say the traditional blessing, the same would hold true as it would also for many a Protestant child who has been instructed in his home and by his church to pray in the name of his Savior. Tax Bill Wins First Round; Moves to Senate

The House passed President Kennedy's $11.1 billion anti-recession tax cut bill last week and sent it to an uncertain fate in the Senate. Americans in all walks of life would benefit starting Jan, 1 if it becomes

House Republicans tried unsuccessfully to make the two-stage cut - in 1964 and 1965 - conditional on curbs on federal spending. This, too, is the big issue in the Senate where a con-servative Virginia Democrat, Chairman Harry F. Byrd of the Finance Committee, now holds the key to the bill's future

BYRD IS dead against tax relief while the Treasury is deep in the red. So is a big group of Republi-cans. But Byrd, despite liberal pleas for fast action. raised prospects the measure may have to hang fire until next year.

The President, backed by a big segment of the business world, turned on strong pressure to win his House victory. He is sure to do likewise in the Senate, perhaps at the expense of action this year on his sweep-ing civil rights program. He feels deeply that consumer dollars made available through eased taxes would flow swiftly into commerce, bolster, rather than reduce. treasury revenue, and head off periodic business slumps.

One thing seems certain. If he insists on action now, his racial rights program will have to be deferred. Southern senators are ready to filibuster against the latter and tie up the Senate indefinitely.

The Senate, after 11 days of debate, ratified the President's limited nuclear testban treaty with Russia and Great Britain. The vote was 80 to 19. The pact pledges the Big Three and 100 non-nuclear signatory nations to refrain from testing atomic devices anywhere except underground.

FRENCH President Charles de Gaulle refused to sign the treaty and said he would continue with his own independent nuclear course. Fidel Castro's Communist - dominated Cuba also boycotted it. De Gaulle meantime urged other European nations and Britain to join France in building a nuclear striking force on condition they tighten their political cooperation. Brit-ain and West Germany promptly turned him down and will continue adherence to Kennedy's plans for NATO nuclear striking

Senators opposing the treaty did so largely with declared reluctance but with emphasis on their distrust of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. They argued that it carried too great a military hazard to national security.

Close on heels of ratification, the Senate stamped approval on a $47.4 billion defense bill to maintain the nation's military might. The measure represents nearly half of the federal budget.

ON THE civil rights front, two more dynamite bomb explosions in racially tense Birmingham, Ala., damaged eight Negro homes and four automobiles only hours before a two-man presidential team — former Army Secretary Kenneth Royall and ex-West Point football coach Earl (Red) Blaik arrived to begin meetings with white and Negro leaders aimed at restoring racial peace. On the political front, President Kennedy toured II state conservation areas, most of them in the Far West. He called among other things for "parity of opportunity" to help rural peoples enjoy the standards of city living.

The five-day tour picked up definite partisan tinges as it moved along. At Great Falls, Mont., Kennedy flayed the electric power policies of the Eisenhower administration and devoted himself largely to praise for Democrats and what he said they had done to advance conservation and reclamation.

At Salt Lake City, a hotbed of the right wing John Birch Society, he delivered a stern indictment of foreign policies advocated by such Republican conservatives as Goldwater, Sen. Norris Cotton, one of New Hampshire's most powerful Republicans, announced meantime that he would support Goldwater in his state's presidential primary next month. This was regarded as a blow to New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller who plans to enter feller the primary

Joint Moon-Trip Proposal Brings Mixed Feelings

The European press expressed mixed editorial feellings this week over President Kennedy's proposal for a joint Soviet - American expedition to the moon.

The Spanish newspaper MADRID said only the Rusjoint moon landing, which "would bolster Communist prestige." It said, "the proverbial naivette of North Americans comes up with another opportunity to commit an irreparable error."

The DAILY TELEGRAPH of London said it was the "most spectauclar" possi-bility of East-West cooperation in non-military fields. It added, "The obstacle is not unwillingness on either side so much as the difficulty of dove-tailing two technical approaches which have already diverged in fundamental ways." Regarding the nuclear test-ban treaty, the Swedish newspaper SVENSKA DAG-BLADET said, 'The fact that the opposition against the treaty was so exten-sive is a bad sign. The Arizona Senator (Barry) Goldwater's suggestion that the treaty should be adopted with the reservation that all Russian military personal had to leave Cuba was rejected by the Senate and this defeat is supposed to have reduced his chances to be President. But the danger remains in that a political party which can come to power wants to conduct a foreign policy against Kennedy's efforts to end the cold war."

The French newspaper FIGARO said of the ratification, "For the moment optimists have won over, but they cannot naturally give guarantees of any further relaxation of tension between the Soviets and the United States, Pessimists such as Goldwater could one day find themselves in the enviable position of having seen clearly while everybody else was laboring under Illusions."

Latest in the Buena Park Elementary School District system, the plant is named for a former local superintendent of schools, who later became county superintendent of schools and now is executive secretary of the California Teachers' Association.

Children assigned to the new Corey School have been attending Gilbert, Whitaker and Grand Avenue schools. They will meet at those schools Monday morning to collect their gear and then be transported to the new plant. It has kindergarten through fifth grade. Its dedication will be arranged later.

The trustees usually divide their meetings between San Francisco and Inglewood, and this will be the first time they have convened in Orange County. Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke, thief of the 17 state col-leges, will deliver the dedication address. A capsule containing memorabilia of the times will be sealed in the corner stone to climax the ceremony.

Burton to Tour in Hamlet

NEW YORK (UPI) - How do you trap a movie-rich, romance busy skyrocket such as Richard Burton into agreeing to play the title role in "Hamler" for 20 weeks?

The answer of producer Alxander H. Cohen, who has the British star's signature on such a contract, is that you don't.

You don't con Burton into anything. He is, above all, a dedicated stage-trained actor. and if you offer him the opportunity to do something he wants to do, he will do it if he possibly can.

"I HAVE seen him turn lown big-money offers right and left in recent months to make room for this venture.' said Cohen. "He is the most business-like theater professional I have ever dealt with except for Sir John Gielgud."

And it is not exactly an accident that Sir John, himself a great. Hamlet of our time, will direct the Burton production, which goes into re-hearsal Feb. 2, starts a tryout engagement in Boston March 2, opens for a 12-week New York run on March 19 and then tours major cities for six weeks.

Jumps at Disneyland

By KEN KNIGHT

It looked like Disneyland and it was in Anaheim hut the scene was Bourbon Street and the music was straight out of New Orleans.

High temperatures in the Southland were nothing compared to the heat wave generated the past two nights at the fourth annual "Dixieland at Disneyland"

The thin wail of the clarinet, the brassy tone of the trombone and the shrill tenor of the trumpet were the night sounds floating across the water to an estimated 5,500 hand-clapping Dixieland enthusiasts.

THE AUDIENCE, lining the banks of the juncture of the Walt Disney waterway, was as informal as the music was good.

Bermuda shorts, "crop tops," loose fitting shifts and just plain "cool clothes" were the uniforms for the night but the audience still got hot.

Floating down the river on barges were the alltime great Dixieland bands of Kin Ory, Teddy Buckner, the Dukes of Disneyland and the Firehouse Five plus Two.

TRUMPETER Al Hirt, the King of Dixieland,

was a feature all his own.

Those were the musicians and they played the classics of that style of American melody which was born in the South.

Silhouetted Firehouse Five Plus Two

"South Rampart Street Parade," "Muskrat Ramble," "Lulu White's Blues," "Bourbon Street Parade," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Tiger Rag" and "Bill Bailey, Won't You Please Come Home," were just a few of the tunes that set up a foot-stamping and hand-clapping response from the audience.

THE MUSIC was old as were some of the performers like Kid Ory, styled by announcer Frank Buck as 75 years young.

The audience was young and old. A few small children, perched upon their fathers' shoulders so they could see the barges come swinging down the river, clapped their hands just like the "grown-ups."

The production was technically perfect. Batteries of powerful searchlights mounted on towers spotlighted the performers spectacularly.

The finale was a roll call of the great bands performing, "When the Saints Go Marchin' In." And when the crowd marched out the spirit was still upon them.

FOR THE LOVE OF A WOMAN. Often said to be the world's most beautiful building, the Taj Mahal at Agra, India, was built as a tomb by a sorrowing ruler for his beloved queen. The Taj Mahal is famous for its hypnotic effect on tourists by moonlight. Just one of the many interesting segments of "Around the World in 80 Minutes."

With Kodak photographer-lecturer Don Nibbelink as a guide, you'll visit the country described as the "Land of Smites," Thailand, and be fascinated by the bizarre statues and temple architecture. These magnificent golden statues are found in Bangkok and will be shown in beautiful wide-screen color when Nibbelink presents AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 MINUTES.

HILBERT ADEMA-was born in the tall corn state of Iowa, moved to Worthington, Minn., and had most of his education there. As a young: chap, he went into the cafe business and owned and operated several different places in Oregon, Washington and California, spent 7 years in Wenatchee, Wash., while the Coulee Dam was being built. While working as Chef in the Ventura Coffee Shop in 1946, he decided to venture in the real estate business and got his salesman's license at that time, In 1947, he went to work for J. F. Lewis Co. as salesman. In 1950, opened

QUICK to Greet

New Residents!

• YOU'LL GET a hearty greeting and quick service from our nearest carrier-boy when you move into a new neighborhood — if you let us know a few days in advance! He will start delivery the day you arrive, so you won't miss a single issue!

IF YOU are moving soon, notify our office or your present carrier, of the moving date and your new ad-dress. And please be sure he is paid for all copies he delivers before you move. Otherwise, their cost will come out of his own pocket, as he's in business for himself. Thank you!

Pete Beathard Unleashes Pass to Willie Brown for 17-Yard Gain to Oklahoma 21/2-Yard Line in Final Quarter

Go-Go Sooners Nod SC, 17-12

Executive Sports Editor

The USC Trojans' No. 1 national ranking, victory string of 12 straight and hopes for a second consecutive unbeaten season all went down the drain in 2 hours and 40 minutes Saturday as the unbelievably powerful Oklahoma Sooners crunched out a 17-12 triumph.

The thermometer at bench level on the Coliscum field read 118 degrees, while another thermometer on the Coliseum deck level was reported to have soared to 126! A disappointing turnout of 39,345—undoubtedly held idown by the inferno-type heat wave—viewed the game in-person, while millions watched the thriller via television.

The score by no means illustrated the Sooners' tremendous margin over the Trojans. Coach Bud Wilkinson's famed ball-control offense never was more brilliantly demonstrated than in the broiling Coliseum Saturday.

Oklahoma ran almost two plays to every one of USC. The Sooners ground out 307 yards rushing to a mere 121 by the Trojans. Outside of USC's two scoring occasions, the Oklahoma line was harder to crack than the Rock of Gibraltar.

In fact, three major mistakes by Oklahoma kept the game from assuming the proportions of a rout:

1. Joe Don Looney-later to be named back-of-thegame-grabbed a Trojan defender's face mask late in the second quarter and drew a 15-yard penalty. The driving Sooners thus were shoved back to the Trojan 30, instead of being in position for what seemed another certain Oklahoma touchdown,

2. The Sooners actually scored another touchdown in the third period, but it was called back because of illegal procedure. The call forced Oklahoma into its second mistake—a field goal attempt when the visitors were in perfect running position. (The kick was blocked by Hal Bedsole, a clawing tiger on DEFENSE all afternoon, recovered by Troy's Gary Kirner and raced back to USC's 31. The big break proved for naught ... on fourth down the Trojans still were on their own 31!)

3. Sooner fullback Jim Grisham fumbled on USC's 22 with three minutes to play, after a devastating tackle by Long Beach's Mike Giers, and the Trojans still had time to pull the bacon out of the fire after recovering. (But they didn't. Two magic eye passes by Pete Beathard trickled off the fingers of Bedsole and Willie Brown and Oklahoma took over in the final minute on USC's 24.)

ADD THREE MORE touchdowns to Oklahoma's total and you can visualize what a rout the national TV contest might have been.

The Trojans never were ahead. The closest they came to Oklahoma was 7-6 in the first quarter and a had pass clue to the game's outcome came in that first period. USC received the opening kickoff, ran three plays, then punted. Oklahoma then controlled the ball for 25 of the next 26 plays!

Only break in the Sooner chain came when Pete Lubisich recovered a fumble on the 10th play. On the very first USC play, Loran Hunt returned the favor and the Sooners had the ball again at the exact spot where they had previously fumbled.

Fifteen plays and 65 yards later, Oklahoma had its first points on the board via a nifty double reverse that catapulted the swift, 225 pound Looney 19 yards into the end zone. George Jarman converted and with 10 minutes gone, Oklahoma had a 7-0 lcad.

A note on that double reverse, which USC blotted out in the second half: Pulled three times in the first half, the twin reverse accounted for 54 yards and a touchdown. (it's a helluva play for one half!)

As everyone expected, the Trojans came roating back and needed but 10 plays to notch their initial TD. Brown and Mike Garrett cracked through the Sooner line for big-gainers in this drive, with fullback Ernie Pye diving into the end zone from one foot away.

Again the black cat crossed the Trojan path via the bad pass from center and placekicker Dick Brownell had no chance to tie the game.

A completely unrehearsed play gave impetus to Oklahoma's next touchdown in the second quarter. On another double reverse attempt, Virgil Bell was trapped by more Trojans than a piece of cheese in a mousetrap, VIRGIL THEN GAVE an imitation of an Olympic shot-putter and putted the hall 19 yards in the general direction of Looney. Joe Don grabbed the ball as if it were a sack of potatoes... but hung onto it to give Oklahoma a big first down on USC's 47. Eight plays later, Oklahoma had its second score when quarterback Mike Ringer slammed off left tackle for four yards. Jarman's placement gave the Sooners a 14-6 edge.

The margin went to 17-6 not too many minutes later when sure-footed Jarman laced a 43-yard field goal ... and the Trojans looked beaten even before the halftime intermission

Thinks looked even less bright after three quarters nen USC still was behind 17-6.

Then, with two minutes of the final period gone, USC had possession on its own 7-a big 93 yards to paydirt. But Garrett and Brown again went into action, Mike on the ground and Willie via the air. With Beathard toss-(Continued Page E-3, Col. 4)

Wilkinson: "USC's offense uses material very well. They move the ball as well as any team I've ever seen,

"Referring to Joe the Hacker's comment in your column, he has hit the nail on the head with his reference to golf fees in this city as well as in the county. How can fees be any cheaper with the high salaries being paid to links officials? How can they attend conventions in Rome, Scotland, Las Vegas, Reno and other places, and pay the high motel, bar and aircraft fares without drawing on the golfers, pensioners, working men and housewives for this kind of activity they claim is necessary? There is another big swindle going great guns-the boat launching racket. Under the bridge at the Second St. overramp, they charge the small boat owner $1.50 to launch his boat. However, they are missing another great source of income by not putting up a turnstile across Alamitos Bay and charging $3 to go out in the ocean and $5 to get back in. I am giving my name so the tar and feather commission can come and tar and feather me out of town." (signed) Otto A. Koenig, 1141 Mira Mar

(Aw, Otto. Maybe it's the heat wave that's making you broil, ch?)

"I have for the past three years consistently had good weekend starting times on the city courses. These times were obtained in one of four ways: 1. Standing in line at 6 a.m. a week in advance.

"2. Dialed in until my finger was sore at 6 a.m. a week in advance. "3. Had a friend who did either of the above and been invited to play in his foursome.

"4. Played in a club or city tournament on the week-

"There are numerous inequities in the Long Beach public golf course situation, but starting times is not one of them. For instance: Golfers shell out and a surplus in excess of $200,000 a year goes into the city's general fund. We help pay for tennis, baseball, bowling greens, etc. Skylinks has been a rude, underdeveloped course for five years. (The responsibles will point to the planting of 1500 trees this year, but if you made a bouquet out of the whole batch you'd have a tough time making shade.) As Skylinks greens committee chairman, I helped draw up a paper which pointed out a half-dozen problems and suggestions to solve them. After passing this along to the authorities, I got the strong feeling that a desire existed for us to go jump in Lakewood's lake." (signed) C. R. Duclos, 6371 El

"That letter you printed regarding the Recreation Park courses does have some merit, such as reducing fees and employing rangers to speed up play, but when this party (Joe the Hacker) casts insinuations upon the honesty and fairness of all the starters, he is away out of line. I have found all the starters to be fair and honest. cooped up in their little cubby holes, bending over backwards trying to please everyone, an impossible task." (signed) Dusty Rhodes, 3531 E. 15th St.
(Now, I'll bet YOU won't have to stand in line at 6 a.m. A WEEK IN ADVANCE, Dusty the Diplomat.)

"VIN SCULLY was right in not giving those playing field crashers in St. Louis a chance to be on TV. More power to him. You say you'd have enjoyed seeing them evicted. Suppose you'd enjoy a bunch of hoodlums throwing beer cans on your yard or crashing one of your (signed) G. L. Buleher, Long Beach.

(You missed he point, G. L. I did agree with Scully, but I also said I'd have enjoyed seeing the brats getting booted out. Is that a crime?)

'That smart-aleck reporter who said the Dodgers goofed by not showing those kids running all over the field was wrong-and Buzzie Bavasi and Vin Scully were right. You are right, too—the brats need a nationally televised spanking." (signed) Edward C. Wurfel, 801 E. First

(Well, I have one friend, anyway.)

"I just read your article about the incident at 9 Louis. I also read TV columnist Terry Vernon's article. I wrote him a letter also and, believe me, it wasn't friendly. I believe like Buzzie Bavasi-they are just smart brats and should not be glorified on TV. And I don't imagine Vin-Scully cares what Vernon thinks. I told Vernon about the rooster deal (at Candlestick Park) and said it was a little different. The rooster didn't know a ball diamond from someone's lawn." (signed) Mrs. Adelia M. (And the way the Giants played this year, the rooster might have been a valuable addition to their bullpen.)

Lazy' Angels Season Ends

By ROSS NEWHAN L P-1 Start Writer BOSTON—With heavy rain forecast for today the Angels may have concluded their season Saturday. It was 161 games too late.

Boston endowed the Angels vith their 91st defeat—the ame total suffered by the 1961 club-Saturday via a 4-3 count which included a triple play ignited by a Felix Torres'

The Angels outhit the Red Sox, 13 to 6, but five Cherub pitchers issued nine walks which eventually took their toll.

Aware of today's weather prospects, manager Bill Rigney delivered his 1963 closing statement in a pre-game clubhouse meeting, borrowing a page from Norman Vincent Peale's "Power of Positive Peale s Thinking."

"THE WHOLE league was waiting to pin you down this year," said Rigney to his club. Well, they did and they're mighty happy about it. But this may be the best thing that could have happened to

"Let's take advantage of the long winter and give some thoughts to the things we did rrong this year, and the things we neglected entirely. Store them like a savings account and bring them with you next spring. Then be prepared to do something serious about them,

"If you make use of your spare time this winter you can be the players you were in '62 and we will be the team we were in '62."

The Angels, however, turned n a strictly 1963 performance Saturday, suffering their fifth onsecutive defeat.

They wild-pitched one run home, were slow in fielding a run-producing pop fly double, and, most damaging of all

Vaqueros Pick Off 3 Passes

By KEN PIVERNETZ

Long Beach City College lost its first game in two years Saturday night at Veterans Stadium and you would have had to been one of the 5,863 fans on hand to believe Glendale College turned an interception and a fumble near the Vike end zone in the second half into the decisive touchdowns to stun the Vikings, 18-12, and win what must be considered a major upset.

The Vikings had three passes picked off in the last two quarters and it was a factor in the decision as was the five times LBCC fumbled Long Beach recovered three of its bobbles but all of the fumbles broke up potential drives that seemed to elude the Norsemen all night.

The Vikings gained 222 yards on the ground and out-totaled the Vaqueros, 270-211 in net yardage, but the fuminterceptions and 80 yards in penalties were too much to overcome,

GLENDALE'S two touchfowns in the final quarter bordered on the unbelievable and came after the Vikes had stormed ahead, 12-6, in the third quarter on a 41-yard run by Homer Williams, 🔭 🦲

The Vags scored to tie it up with only 3:25 gone in the final stanza when Bob Clemons picked up what looked like a downed pass by Jim Dunn from the LBCG fivethe other foot," Alston ad- yard line, but it was ruled a fumble and the ball was still in play as Clemons scooped it up and went into the end zone,

Two minutes later Glendale gained control of the ball and went on to score its winning touchdown. The Vikings were able to run off only, two Yankee Stadium, was far scrimmage plays before Jim off tune. Podres has been Sartoris intercepted a Dunn treated better in batting aerial and ran it back-20 vards to the Vike 25 to start the winning drive.

It took only seven plays to cover the winning drive with the TD coming on a Sartoris to Jeff White 10-yard pass that ended the scoring and the game as far as LBCC vas concerned, Oddly enough, both team tried to run the ball after every score for a two-point conversion but failed every

The Vikings gained a lot of yards between both 40yard lines, but were a far cry from last year's national championship team,

Williams carried the gaining 15 yards on 23 car-ries for a 6.5-yard average. The Vike defense limited Bill Patrick, heralded Vag halfback, to 10 net yards in 12 the real Glendale hero, intern cepting two passes and com-yards and two touchdowns.

DUNN completed 9 of 19 passes in going the distance at quarterback for LBCC. The ex-Wilsonite directed the first Long Beach TD of the night which saw the Vikes score with only 28 seconds left in the half.

Key plays in that drive were passes to John Tigner for 15 yards and Joe Pearson for nine. The score came on a three-yard pass from Dunn to Tim Russell.

It is appropriate that the world's best pitcher will start in the first game of the World Series Wednesday, and his name isn't Whitey Ford of the Yankees.

It is (fanfare please) Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers. .For Koufax, the Series will climax a season of spectacular achievement - he made more records than The Kingston -and bring an end to a love affair with a couple of million baseball fans throughout the nation. Americans adore their haseball heroes, especially one with a comic-strip first name, an easy, hoyish smile and a blazing fast-ball. And Sandy has been No. 1 on their hit or no-hit parade all season.

When you were a kid, Sandy, did you dream about a season such as this one?

"No, I never thought of being a probaseball player. My career just seemed to

Is there a touchstone to your success? "The biggest thing has been control. It's something that has come to me in the last three years. I don't know the reason why for control. If I did, I would tell every kid in the country.

Will, you have goose-pimples when you walk out to the mound Wednesday?

"I don't think so. I've never pitched the opener before, but I have been in three Series. There is a thrill about playing in them, but the games are not as important as the crucial games in winning the pen-nant. Fighting to get there is the big thing."

Do you think the Yankees are a stronger team than the Cardinals?

'It's hard to say and teams in different leagues are difficult to compare. The Yankees are a good team. They've got power, depth and pitching. They're always

Do you feel the impetus of coming from a rough pennant fight will help the

"Not necessarily, because the impetus is gone once the pennant is won. Of the three pennant winners I've been on, one team won the pennant by 16 to 18 games and won the Series; another won the pennant on the last day and lost the Series, and in 1959, we won the pennant in a playoff and won the Series. So who can say which is the best way?"

If you had to vote for the National League's most valuable player, whom would you choose?

"I think Dick Groat was as valuable to his team as any player in the league. He pulled the Cardinals' infield together, made a better player out of Javier and is a real team leader. Jim Gilliam did a great job for us and so did Tommy Davis. I guess would be between Groat and Gilliam."

Your picture has appeared on the cover of Life and several other magazines this year. Do you enjoy the attention being heaped upon you?

"No, not particularly. I can't think of advantages except for a great deal of personal satisfaction. Everything I do I want to do well."

What has been your greatest thrill in baseball?

'The no-hitter against the Giants this year was the best game I've ever pitched. And the game against the Cardinals last week was equally as great a thrill, It was a game we had to win.

Who is going to win the World Series? The team which gets the hottest. I'll let you know for sure next week."

About the only sure thing in the World into the end zone. Series is the best pitcher in baseball. And his name isn't Ford.

the Nittany Lions took the second-half kickoff and moved downfield as if to wrap up any concern about the outcome. They got to the Bruin 20 with ease, but there a fumbled pass re-ception put the Bruins back in business.

. Zeno was up to the task. He moved the team 74 yards in 14 plays. The key play was a fourth-and-5 situation on' the Penn State 36. Barnes sent Jones, his No. 1 punter into the game and the defense loosened for a kick. Jones ran around end for six yards,

That put the ball on the 30 and seven plays later Zeno dropped back from the five-yard line, threw high far across field to sophomore halfback Bob Richardson. He was open. Touchdown, Placement kick by Zeno. Tie score, 14-14.

But the rest of UCLA's laudable efforts for the day were spent on defense. The Easterners were stopped on the two and had to settle for Coates' field goal from the 22.

Barnes said afterward, "I feel pretty good about the game. We improved a great deal over last week."

Next week the Bruins open the "Big Six" schedule at Stanford.

Casey Keeps Mets Loose in Losing

The $64,000 question-or thereabouts-with the New York Mets is whether or not Casey Stengel will return next year as manager.

Mets' president George Weiss says, "I firmly believe Casey will return. I asked him point-blank a month ago to sign a new contract right there and then, but he wouldn't do it. He asked for more time to think it over.

"But in all talks we've had lately he has shown great Interest in the young players on our farm clubs and he wouldn't be thinking of them if he was quitting."

Asked about the situa-tion, Casey says, "Every-where I go, everyone keeps asking me the same question and I keep telling them I don't know yet. If my health permits, I'll probably be back."

And the condition of his health? "I've never felt better," he said with a wink before one of the Dodger games the past week.

Casey, of course, has been the Mets' No. I attraction in the two years the club has operated. He's their crowd magnet . . . and the prime reason they have drawn more than a million at home both seasons.

He gladhands more people, signs more autographs, tells more stories, produces more publicity and obscures the club's deficiencies more than anyone else in the organization . . . or baseball for that matter. No other man could have done as much as Casey in such a hopeless situation.

'Never Felt Better'

Life can be pretty miserable on a losing team ... but not so with the Mets. Pitching coach Ernie White echoes the sentiments of all those connected with the club when he says, "It's a lot of laughs . . . because Casey makes it

WHITE, A SOUTHPAW pitcher with the Cardinals in the early 1940s, oversees the Mets' bullpen. He's the man Casey telephones when there's trouble brewing . . . which means he's in almost constant touch with Ernie.

White reveals several hilarious experiences he's had this season with Stengel "over the pipe" . . . baseball's term for telephone.

"First of all," Ernle points out, "Casey calls me Weiss. You know how he butchers names. I've always been Weiss to him.

"And when he calls, you never really know what he's going to say. There was a game early this year when Casey replaced Frank Thomas in left field with another player along about the seventh inning. The phone rang and he says 'Mr. Weiss, I'm gonna make a change with that feller in left field."

"I wanted to know what that had to do with the bullpen and Casey answered, "Well, Mr. Weiss, there's nobody in the dugout near me to talk to so I thought I'd relay the information to you."

WHITE ALSO TELLS about the game in Milwaukee in which Carlton Willey was facing his old club for the

Willey was going along in smooth style," White reveals. "He was anxious to show up his former teammates and had a two-hit, 2-0 shutout going into the eighth.

"I had Jay Hook and Ken MacKenzie loosening up just in case when the phone rang. 'Mr. Weiss,' Casey said, 'who you got warmin' up?"

"I told him and he replied, 'I don't need neither one of those gentlemen,' and hung up.

"Well, before you know it, the Braves fill the bases in the ninth, score two runs and still have two on with two out. We eventually lost. But before the winning run scored

"Mr. Weiss, Casey announced, 'we're blowin' the game!"

THEN THERE WAS the time the Mets were playing the Cubs and ran out of pitchers.
"The score was something like 15-3 against us in the sixth inning. We only had seven pitchers on the staff at the time and Casey had already used up six. "I had one man left in the bullpen when the first three hitters up in the seventh bombed our man. There went the telephone.

"That feller of ours aint doin' so good, Mr. Weiss," Casey said . . . and then asked, 'Who you got ready?'

"I reminded him I had only one man left and with our pitcher due to open the next inning as a hitter, it might be better to wait and use a pinch-hitter for him, then come on with the last hurler.

"In that caso, Mr. Weiss' Stengel said, 'tell the feller you got warmin' up to go to the clubhouse and get himself a sandwich and beer, then be ready to come in the next inning because he's got a long wait ahead of him." CASEY LIKES TO kid a lot about so many college kids playing ball now and about how they sit in the club-house and talk about "knuckle fishing and electric commuters (nuclear fission and electronic computers)."

One student, according to White, explained in detail to Casey one day that he didn't have to warm up because by thought transference he could analyze the precise movements of his arm in every situation.

Well, Casey just stared at him for a minute and then said, 'Okay, but just remember to keep the ball low!'

Fishin's fun for anybody, pro or farmer, and Redondo's Fisherman's Wharf is out to prove it. Its whole sportfishing fleet will be available free for four days on a first come, first served basis.

It's as easy for a person to board a fishing boat or barge and catch fish as it is to buy a ticket to a ball game and eat a hot dog, according to Press Fiscus, Redondo fleet manager, so come fishing free and see for yourself."

The entire fleet and manpower services will be offeredtwo barges and three party boats—without charge on Tues-days and Thursdays, Oct. 1 and 3, 8 and 10.

These units will be loaded on a first come, first served hasis," said Fiscus. 'There should be plenty of room, how-ever, as the barges are 250-footers, and the boats 65 foot. This company simply feels that rather than start a contest or derby or similar promotion, it would be a boon to more sportsmen to invite them to come fishing free.

Further north, commercial fishing interests are embroiled in a campaign to "remove" the sea otters from California coastal waters. The demand brought a warning from the DFG that the law against molesting the sleek, playful animals will be rigidly enforced.

Sea otters—carefully nursed back from the edge of extinction in the past half century—are protected by state, federal and international laws.

Morro Bay abalone fishermen claim the otters are destroying abalone off San Simeon. Walter T. Shannon, fish and game director, conceded that sea otters compete with the abalone fishermen for their meals, but "they've been cating fish for centuries without wining out any species," Shannon said. Pomona Finale to Megaton

By ERNIE MASON

POMONA-More Megaton, 3-year-old racehorse, has found a way to beat the heat and get paid for it. He goes to the track and creates his own "breeze."

Saturday he went to the well for the second time in four days and beat the hide off seven older horses in the $20,000-added Pomona Handicap, picked up a check of $12,200 in the bargain and finished up this meeting with two wins and two seconds in just 14 days to wind up everybody's "horse of the meeting."

It was just last Wednesday that More Megaton upset Nevada Battler in the Pomona; Derby, and he came right back at odds of 16-1 to win driving by more than two lengths under a perfect ride by the popular Ray York. Gallant Host lasted to be Victory Beauty, who in turn had a nose advantage over the 9-5 favorite, Rob Roy III.

FOR THE fourth straight day the temperature teased the 100-degree mark, and the closing day crowd was a disappointing 14,240.

The tote board had bright figures for at least a few in hemia Stable's Kelso took the audience as More Megaton clicked for an across the board payoff of $35.20, $10.00

Sweep for U.S.

McKinley Star of Series

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng. 6P-The tennis stars of the United States twisted Britain's tail Saturday and completed a 5-0 clean sweep in the interzone semifinal of the Davis Cup.

Chuck McKinley, the Wimbledon champion from San Antonio, Tex., put on a dazzling display to defeat left-hander Billy Knight 8-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Then Frank Froehling of Coral Gables, Fla., crushed Britain's No. 1, Mike Sangster, 6-1, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

The Americans started the last day with spectator attractions, of ski a winning 3-0 lead and the tension off.

They now plan to make a leisurely swing through Europe and Asia before tackling India at Bomba next month. The winner of that match will challenge Australia for the trophy in Australia at Christmas,

Toledo Preps Try Morning Contests

Toledo, O., has taken steps toward averting rowdyism at night high school football games. The solution: Saturday morning

The time allows adult fans to attend the games, does not conflict with colleges and-most important the daylight provides better crowd control,

WHO'S THE best passer in college football? It could be George Bork of Northern Illinois, who Saturday set two small college records in a 21-12 win over Northeast Missouri State Bork's 20 completions gave him a career total of 408 and his 299 yards gained was 13 better than the mark for one game.

STANFORD'S football team certainly wasn't up to meeting Oregon Saturday the Indians lost, 36-7-and neither was the Tribe hand.

Administrators said the band did not play for the game because it "was not ready for a public appearance."

How City Changes Its Looks

Long Beach, as in the case of cities in general, is undergoing a continuous process of 'face-lifting' with new and more modern structures replacing out-dated buildings. Contrasting photographs here illustrate the point. At left are pictures of old structures razed to make way for new buildings pictured directly opposite, at right. Edward O'Connor, head of the city's Building Department, has provided tax figures showing the great financial benefits from improvements such as illustrated. For example the old building at 1212 E. Ocean Blvd. (upper left) had assessed. valuation of $420 and the city tax was approximately $5.75. After the new building (upper right), assessed valuation was $139,540 and tax $2,521.67-quite a boost in city revenue. The buildings which formerly stood at 331-39 Olive Ave. (second row, left) were assessed at $400, with taxes of $5.48. Replacing them is the Palms apartment house, assessed at $49,320, with taxes of $710.82. At lower left is structure formerly at 3529 E. Third St., assessed at $800, with tax $10.96. It was replaced by the apartment house shown at lower right, with assessed valuation of $24,740 and tax exceeding $300. Such redevelopment of the city by private enterprise was strongly praised by O'Connor. He urged that civic-minded developers consider many more such improvements. and in fact there is an expanding trend in this direction. O'Connor saw civic pride, growing demand, mounting land values, building material sales and other profits as factors in redevelopment progress.

the odds are 7 to 1 you will go into an apartment!

At least that is the prevailing rate in apartment construction compared to private home construction, based on figures for the past two months.

During August the City Building and Safety Dept. issued permits for 69 single family dwellings to be con-structed at an estimated cost of $1,126,000.

IN THE SAME PERIOD there were 55 permits issued for 519 individual apartments which would house 519 families and 7 permits were issued for two-family units housing 14 families.

Estimated cost of the 55 major apartments was $3,042,000 and the seven two-family units, $106,855.

Permits for additions or alterations to older homes were issued on 566 projects costing $743,560.

Total valuation of building permits for August reached $7,352,286 for 2,538 permits.

By Iola Masterson I, P-T Women's Editor

OH, THE weather was hot but the pool was cool and you can't beat that to make a gal kind of drool. So pardon the garbled gobbledy gook. Trying to say, it was a little hard to keep Junior League provisionals' minds on business Wednesday when, with committee members, they met at Barbara (Mrs. Chester) Moore's home for an ayem business, plus poolside "bring your own sandwich" meeting.

Needless to say, when the time came no one needed any urging to jump into that pool—and stay there. Barbara Ivey was in charge of the kind of in-doctrination affair—how much work the league does and how much fun members have, all wrapped up in one neat package of a day.

snappy, too, to hasten the splash and swim session.

Some of those romping in the chlorine deep (undoubtedly thinking with great studiousness of lessons Iearned—hal) were Janice Baker, Diane Barkis, Joanne Coursey, Louanne Hoff, Patty Newkirk and Pat Olson.

THE HAT is out of the bag-at least the theme is for Long Beach Auxiliary, So. Cal. Symphony Association, always very grand headdress ball. Lia (Mrs. Geza) Kremples, general chairman (to take on this job requires valor of the very highest social order) entertained her planning committee Friday in her home.

Theme announced? "With a Song in My Heart" so women can let favorite tunes go to their heads come ball date-Nov. 22. Mark it down now. Will take place, as usual, în International Baliroom, Lafayette.

Present to plan for evening of glamor and food were Isadine McCall, auxiliary president, Lucy (Mrs. Wild Waves Say ...

Duane) Kuster, Betty Maude Benwell, Virginia (Mrs. Earl) Milton, Millie (Mrs. Frank) Vessels, Jean (Mrs. Harvey) Doody and Mary (Mrs. P. Victor) Peterson.

FINALLY, last weekend, they made it. But imagine the moving day—should say days—consternation Carolyn and Larry McDowell Jr. went through until M-Day actually was a thing of the past. Carolyn had them packed right down to the toothbrushes for their van date as of Sept. 18. Van arrives but we have pouring skies. So all agree, no soap, not even with rain-

So again on Thursday (sunny in Newport Beach from whence van originated its jaunt) the men tried. Pouring here. They moved into an own-your-own in Newport (4223 Patrice Road) with already down snow white carpeting. Those muddy shoes wouldn't have

First night they at long last arrived in their new domicile (week ago Friday). May and Jim Sipprelle joined them for dinner, if you can imagine. But there was planning in Caroline's madness. Sipprelles had to help unpack. Food was brought in from nearest pack-

THAT MAN about many towns, Lee Carpenter, bon, bon vivant, has been up to his well used suitcases and trunks in moving operation from his home in Lakewood (sold to Lillian and Ray Clark) and into a Los Cerritos area apartment.

Once in, he may not stay long. He has strong inclinations, for more lovely reasons than one, to return to Italy, Genoa or nearby, where he has a car lease business started for him, among other things.

Lee just returned a minimum time ago from two months spent in Italy. On his return his house looked like a continuous party had been going on since his departure, artfully arranged by his auto agency manager, Bill Maxey. To give you some idea (I'd blush to tell it all) there were 17 goldfish a-swimming in the bathtub plus one or two here and there in other unmentionable receptables, thereby making the home-coming something of a problem, especially since no fishing signs were well displayed.

A BIG, a fine, an all masculine party was "Gap" Powell's annual salute to the brotherhood of SAE (Sigma Alpha Epsilon), with alums and actives plus rushees at LBSC invited. A steak fry (what less would do) with George Jr. and John Jarman manning the braziers until a total of 170 spencers were cooked, manfully consumed.

Sawyer copped honors as the longest time alum. He was initiated in 1894 (69 years ago) at U. of Nebraska and still going S(AE)trong. Ernie Folsom, who joined in 1910 at U. of Nevada, was present. Just grabbing other names out of the air --- so were Fred Penland, Don Gill, Bill Grant and, to add to the inspiration of the night, 11 SAE little sisters from LBSC campus who helped serve.

One man I know waited two hours to eat but kept getting so involved in conversation he finally managed to get one of the last three cooked at the end of the

"Fine lingerie was the first field I wanted to go into when I began designing and manufacturing in the women's apparel field," states Virginia Wallace, top California designer, who will be commentator at a showing of her elegant hostess and at-home line at Symphony Juniors' fashion show luncheon on Friday.

Miss Wallace started her vastly successful career with a plaid taffeta petticoat in 1947. There was a scarcity of fine fabrics and laces then, right after the war, she says, but taffeta could be had. A Bullocks-Wilshire buyer liked this particular novelty idea and placed a $3,000 order before the budding designer had office, showroom or factory. She managed to do the seemingly impossible and filled the order on time; her petticoat turned out to be a true trend-setter, and she embarked into this highly competitive field.

WITH AID and encouragement of other buyers she extended her operations to New York and various top stores across the country. Having previously been a buyer herself, she still had difficulty pricing garments, getting competent help (she began with two home-workers) and securing small amounts of fabrics from the big mills which preferred selling to big manufacturers.

She says she pushed and pressured her way into Celanese Corporation and today, when they have stopped producing taffet on a large scale (they're yarn manufacprimarily) Wallace tained. They receive thousands of yards of taffeta a

Mrs. Walker, who would like to see a slackening of the pants craze, believes capris, shorts and beach wear are fine in the backyard or on the beach-but never on city strects

"I'm convinced," says she, "that lack of personal pride shows up in many ways other than in chaotic hairdos, in too-tight slacks or baggy shifts.

"It shows up, even more pronounced, in our approach to life."

Mrs. Exley echoes that opinion, expressing concern in the too-casual look that's increasingly of our timesnot just in Long Beach, but across the nation....

"Perhaps more pronounced in Long Beach because we are a resort area."

AN INTERNATIONAL organization, BPW today numbers 170,000 members.

In the legislative area of federation activity, high point for business and professional women came in June of this year when President Kennedy signed into law the equal pay bill—a part of the BPW platform for more than 20 years.

The organization came into being in 1918 when the YWCA's War Work Council called together a group of business and professional women who were asked to suggest how working women might be more effectively utilized in the wartime economy. Wars end might have ended the group, but club women and government officials alike felt that such an organization would be a national asset in the

The group held its first convention in the summer of 1919 and established the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

From the beginning the federation sought not only expanded economic opportunity for women and the promotion of their welfare, but the improvement of women's preparation for business and professions. It has continually fought economic discrimination against women and has encouraged the penetration by women into new vocational fields.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S Week was established to give every community an opportunity to reflect on the contributions of women workers to the economy and to give working women an opportunity for self-

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I could write a book about my nine years of married life. My husband had a very unhappy childhood, and he's been taking it out on me and the children. He tried to kill me once. He choked me until I was unconscious, and then left me for dead. Not one to hold a grudge I forgave him and he promised to do better. Then he lost his temper again and chased me with a butcher knife. I had to run to the neighbors for help. It was then that my clergyman explained that my husband was sick and I should stick with him in sickness and in health. My husband promised to see a head doctor, but he keeps stalling. Abby, I can't sleep for worrying what he will pull next. I have five little ones who hide when they see him coming down the road. Can you help me?— FRIGHTENED BUT FAITHFUL

DEAR FAITHFUL; Your "faithfulness" is commendable, but while your husband is "stalling," they could be burying you. Don't live in fear with this man another day. Your local police can provide you with protection and force your husband to submit to a mental examination.

DEAR ABBY: I werk and draw a good salary. My problem is one of my bosses. While he is a flirt with all the girls, he singles me out. If there is a disagreement, he takes my side. I have ignored him for a long time, but I feel attracted to him. I am married and so is he. I only think about him when I am around him. I love my husband and can't understand why I am attracted to my boss. I don't intend to let this go any farther as I am decent and respect my marriage. Should I leave my job? Or will I get over this feeling in time? I've never encouraged him, but the feeling is there.-IN DANGER

DEAR IN: If you can't see the handwriting on the wall, you need glasses. Quit your job.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who would like nothing better than to waste my entire morning just talking on the telephone. Is there a way to bring a telephone conversation to an abrupt end without being downright rude?—BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED UP: Yes. Say, "Goodbye - I think I smell something burning." (You!)

DEAR ABBY: You will probably never print this. but I hope you do. We have some new neighbors. This morning the man of the family rapped on my back door and asked me if I planned to hang my wash up today. He said if I did, he would not burn his trash until tomorrow. I was so touched by such a considerate act that I broke right down and cried. - "AP-

Miss Cleveland Wed to USAF Officer

A strand of pearls, gift of the bridegroom, was the only jewelry worn with her candlelight peau de soie sheath when Martha Ann Cleveland exchanged wedding vows with Lt. John Owen Sommercamp, USAF, in the chapel of the U.S. Naval Station, Long Beach.

The bride's father, Cmdr. Hugh A. Cleveland, USN, executive officer at the Naval Station, gave her in marriage in the presence of 100 guests. The reception following took place at Cmdr. and Mrs. Cleveland's quarters aboard the station. The bridal gown was embellished with Swiss lace medallions and a chapel length train. Her veil of illusion was caught to a Brus-sels lace and maline flower of Mrs. James Valeri of sels lace and maline flower Compton and of John M. cap. its petals embroidered in brilliants and seed pearls.

In the New York Times of Aug. 18 Harold C. Schonberg wrote what I consider a classic on the same subject; albeit his article was in humorous vein. I will quote some of the pertinent ex- lieder and 'Lulu.'

"THINGS have changed," said the Oldest Citizen coming out of the Electronic Center surrounded by his disciples . . . "but the appetite remains eternal. About the concert tonight ... I am perhaps getting old, but I do not entirely approve of concerts without sound. You may smile, but lighting and sensory effects alone without tape—without even a conductor—really! Why, I remember when concerts had nothing but sound. But those were in the great days of conductors. But conductors disappeared like the dinosauria and for the same reason-they were victims of over - specialization." The Oldest Citizen sank into thought.

"IT ALL STARTED," he said, "back in the nincteensixties. It was in those years that the conductors started to specialize in doubling up. It was not enough for them to conduct an orchestra. They also had to exhibit themselves as soloists while they conducted. Why they did this the history books are vague. Was it to gratify their ego? Or did they really think they were better than trained soloists?

"It led to the Uprising of linists went on strike, trying the podium. That was the year Glengg Ggold came to sang anyway, took to the podium and decided to capitalize on his voice. He conducted a concert version of 'Carmen' and simultaneously sang the title role! The next

Mental Attraction Bidders Are Oswald Jacoby at Fault

The transfer bid is not perfect, but it is remarkable to note the steady record of its success. When it does fail to produce a winning result the reason is most likely to be a mistake by its user, not a defect in the bid itself.

However, the Eastern experts have worked out a defense against the bid and I can report on the defense and its results, I have been transferring for 10 years. The defense has come up exactly three times in that period. Twice it made no difference in the final result.

The other time it fixed me. North's double of two of love, I'd like to break off with this boy without hurthearts showed hearts. If he with this boy without hurt-ing him but the question is clubs he would have bid two

as told by Lllen W", Humes, Sherman Oaks

I have always been idubious about answering advertisements I am so glad my better judgment told me to call Pat Walker Stauffer System, and make an appointment to see what she could do to correct my figure.

I have gone from a size 14 diess to a size 10. My weight has dropped from 119 pounds to 104 pounds. I have reduced a treal of 36 inches in a few short weeks. That is the one. thing I am happy about, With the Pat Walker Stauffer System! treatments one does not luse the weight in just one place, but it comes off where you need it.

My posture is much better. The treatments make you feel like walking straight and tall.

I am also happy to say I am now able to wear the clothes that were too small before I started going to Pat Walker Stautfer System. I am still going for the treatments, and will continue to do so until I reduce my 5 foot, 1 inch ligure to an attractive silliouette.

It was truly a Red Letter Day for me when I saw the adver tisement and called Pat Walker for my appointment.

Q. Why should I use a decorator when I know what I

A. Few people can coordiless they have had years of experience. Balance can be the difference between a job well executed or one that looks like a do-it-yourself.

Mae Belle Davis, N.S.I.D.

Q. My home has been done in white on white in the Italian Provincial theme. I would like to introduce a new feeling without making any extensive changes in my basic pieces. What can I do?

A. Using some of the new and bold colors, which is the trend today, can do more, probably, than any other thing, You might have some of occasional chairs recovered in some of these rich colors and repeat them in some new accessories and pillows, and replace several of your present tables with the new Spanish styled pieces, are very compatible with the Italian Provincial furniture you now have.

Brent Williams

Q. The question of accent color arises so often with how does she obtain it, how and where does she use it?

Accent color is the bright or brilliant value of any hue that is used. It is obtained by establishing a de-sirable color scheme for the room, and creating interest, variety and unity to the scheme by the use of the accent color. It is used in the small areas of the room and in several repetitions in va-irious parts of the room. It can be repeated in welting, fringes, s m a 11 accessories, small pattern motifs in fabric or wallpaper, flowers, porcelains, pictures, etc.

Doris Austin

Q. What is the difference between contemporary and modern furniture?

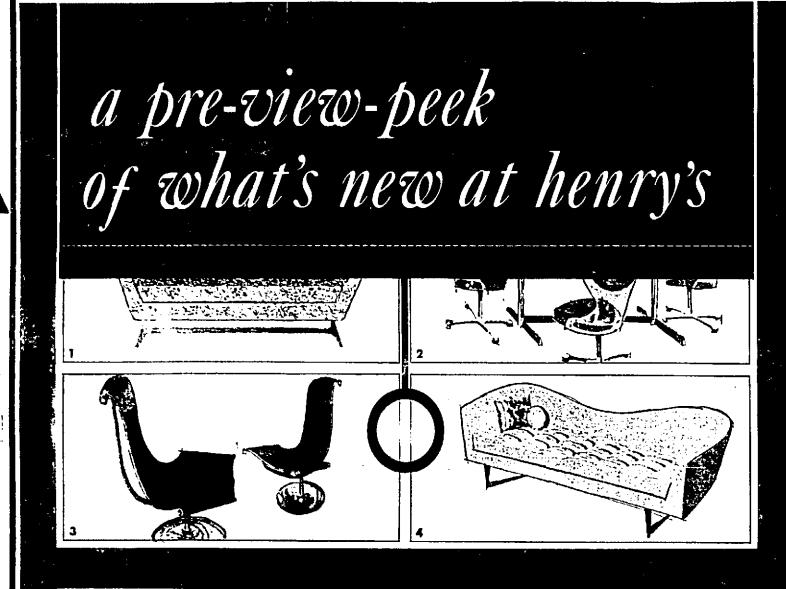

A. Generally speaking none. The definition for the words modern and contemporary is the same-of our time. Commonly, people like to refer to pieces with a futuristic flare as "modern furniture," other pieces of light scale, but with provincial touch are often called "Danish modern."

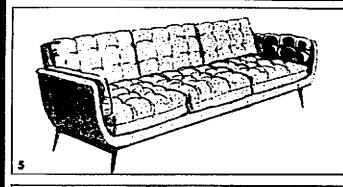

Regardless what the feeling of design is, both are contemporary. Just like Baroque. Roccoco and Directoire are

FOR DOLLS AND DARNING

An authentic adaptation of its Early American ancestor, the new Sprague & Carleton "Dough Box" is designed in solid rock maple to conform to current height and scale of upholstered pieces and lamps so that it can be used easily with both. The dough box, being a flexible storage piece as well as decorative end table, provides a deep, concealed space for magazines, knitting, games or toys as it once did for dough in home baking. Divided lids make its contents accessible from either side of a chair and without lifting lamp or table accessories.

RUGS GO INTO KITCHEN

Carpets and rugs, traditionally used to beautify living areas of the home, are now at work in other areas as well-"home management centers," for example, and even carpeted kitchens. Here, a handsome area rug with a thick shaggy texture and widening circles of color is used in a room which might provide extra family dining space as well as a desk for the busy homemaker. A related color is seen in the kitchen carpet, a practical style with a medium color and tight-looped texture, made of continuous filament nylon.

Beauty and accuracy are elegantly combined in this Seth Thomas finest quarter-hour Westminster chime clock, "Legacy." Traditionally designed in mahogany and brass, it presents an ideal decoration-conversation piece especially as a mantel clock available in key wind or electric. Lloyd's of Long Beach is featuring the Esperanto collection by Drexel. Old World cabinet makers would have been proud to call Esperanto their own. And in a way they did contribute much to this great new collection because Drexel reached into Mediterranean castles for its inspiration. The sofa is custom made by Lloyd's in their own shop for the store at 4141 Atlantic Ave.

FEW REALIZE when they sit at a table that at one time only royalty was given this honor. In fact, not until the latter days of the Roman Empire were permanent tables even permitted to be used by the ordinary people. .

The earliest known tables were Egyptian-used at a time when they were unknown in other parts of the world. They were small and designed to hold small statues of vatious gods, serving a religious purpose. No one dared use them for foodstuffs unless the food was a sacrifice to the

Not until the splendid days of ancient Greece did tables come into use for other than teligious purposes. Eating and entertaining was done in a reclining position, so tables were low, to make it easier for the toga-clad aristocrats to reach their delicacies. There was no standard height. To fit the bended elbow rather than the bended leg, tables were made to order, just as clothes were.

THERE'S LUXURY IN HIDDEN BED

A quilted divan that adds much to a living room setting is really a hidden bed in this setting. This is among the newest offerings at the Sleep Shoppe, 501 Long Beach Blvd., in their Hide-A-Bed line. The beds are available in six sizes up to 89 inches wide and there are 35 luxurious quilted patterns from which to select the covering.

Classics of Designs in Three Ages Provide Trend for Today

Each age has its classics of line the ancient Greek pieces pieces, among them a poudre viders, jewelry compartuesign, and one furniture shown on surviving vases table and bench. used to bring out the beauty of the grain. Contrasting frames on drawer and door panels, and simple ring pulls are part of the understated elegance of the group.

INCLUDED are several small and ingenious pieces along with the beds, chests, and dressers in "Athenian." For example, an octagonal night table with 26-inch round top of Italian marble can also serve as a lamp table or commode. It has two doors, with a tray drawer inside. Two other exceptionally useful items are a threedrawer bachelor's chest and a two-door cabinet of the same size, to use together or separately, under a window, or in a hall.

OF UNUSUAL interest to the many devotees of Italian Provincial is another new hedroom group, "Florantina." In this the designer has remained faithful to the traditional lines of Italian Provincial, but given it a softer look with gently curved drawer frames and door panels. The tique mustard gold with wood is cherry in a richly bronze highlights and with parchment shade matching the hardware is brushed gold. "Florentida" contains 17

SHOWS NEW CARPET

Harvey Tessier, manager of Banner Carpet's Lakewood division, discusses carpet texture and color with customer Urcille Atwood. Tessier says, 'With the advent on this year's carpet market of many new materials it is the wise homemaker who takes time to investigate before buying. It is important that the correct type be used in each room."

INTRODUCING THE DEPENDABLES FOR 84

(WE'RE GETTING YOUNGER EVERY YEAR)

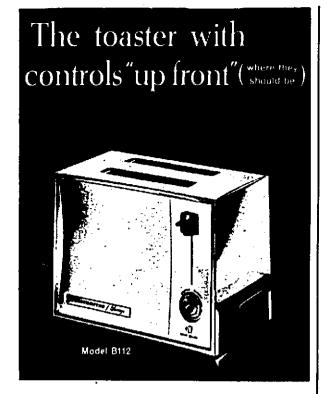

That's how Dodge got started. With the sporty black job on top. Thirty-five horsepower, cone clutch, and a built-in ruggedness that made dependability a part of the English language. This year that tradition of dependability is fifty years old.

Obviously, we made a few changes in the last fifty years. For instance, electric lights, generator and self-starter are now standard equipment. So are a lot of other things. Bright new styling, easy-to-care-for interiors, your choice of models with standard seats, buckets or a special combination job with flip-down center arm rest. To keep you on the road and off the grease rack, we've added a welcome selection of easy maintenance features; self-adjusting brakes, sealed suspension system, 4,000-mile oil changes and a special rust-protection process to protect your investment.

We're rather proud of the '64 Dodge. We think you'd enjoy owning one. And to make it harder for you to say no, we have priced it with Ford and Chevy. Take another look at the '64 Dodge, above. If you like the looks—and most people do—go drive one. Price one. The man to see is your Dodge Dealer. 1964 Dodge. Smart. Solid. As easy to own as any full-size car around. And, of course, dependable. After all, we invented the word.

TOASTMASTER TOURISM 2-SLICE TOASTER

Look what's happened to toasters! They face forward now. Proudly! Elegantly! Everything's new here! Gently curved concave surfaces. Controls "up front," where they rightfully belong. And quiet chrome-satin finish front and back. Durable? They're made by Toaslmaster and most everyone knows Toastmaster products last years longer than others. Next time you want to give an enduring gift, give a Toastmaster toaster. And give yourself one. You should have the best, too.

BY DEAN MARTIN

EDITON'S NOTE: Dean Martin, born Dino Crocetti in Steubenville, Ohio, 46 years ago, is probably the luckiest entertainer in show business. A former gambling croupler with a small, tremulous voice, no dramatic training and limited comedy talent, Martin today is one of Hollywood's top personalities. Deceptively shrewd, carefully casual, he had his nose straightened, enhanced his career by partnership with Jerry Lewis in the 1950s, then branched out as a single. Martin, who recently finished starring in Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed? has been married twice and is the father of six children. He lives in a large rambling Beverly Hills mansion, earns upwards of $500,000 a year, has made a fine career out of mixing songs and wisecracks. Here are some of his favorite funnies.

An actor who is always bragging about his golf score was playing in a foursome with friends. One day his ball landed in a sand trap. Hidden from view, he backed away at the ball. When he finally drove it out, his friends asked: "How many strokes did you take?"

"Three," he answered.

"But we heard six!" they protested.

"Three of them," he replied, "were echoes."

The man worked hard for his candidate during the election and was very much surprised to find himself brought into court.

"What have I been arrested for?" he inquired.

"You are charged," said the judge, "with voting seven times,"

"Charged!" exclaimed the defendant. "I thought I was getting paid!"

As they entered the hotel lobby together, the young bride was very nervous.

"Darling," she said to her husband, "I feel so conspicuous knowing that everyone will be staring at us because we're newlyweds. Can't we do something to make it look as though we've been married for a long time?"

"Yes," replied the groom. "You carry the

An army camp in Texas, located on a wide open plain,was exposed to howling winds. One day duting maneuvers a young soldier came floating down into camp. He was rather hadly bruised but didn't get much sympathy.

"What do you mean by coming down in a parachute with this 100-mile-an-hour wind blowing?" asked one of his superiors. "It's a wonder you weren't killed."

"I'd like to explain, sir," replied the private weakly when he had pulled himself together. "You see, I didn't come down in a parachute-I went up in a tent!"

"Oh, no," answered the waitress with a smile. "He's my husband."

"Husband!" said the man. "I don't under-

"It's like this," she explained. "We've got it down to a science. He makes all the other customers feel sorry for me. Then they give extra

The teacher wrote on the blackboard: "I ain't had no fun all summer."

Then she asked a youngster in the front row: "Harry, what should I do to correct that?"

"Maybe," he suggested helpfully, "you should get a boy friend."

A young bride went to the supermarket and bought a can of tuna fish. Next day she was there again and bought another can of tuna fish. The third day, she repeated the same procedure.

"You bought tuna fish yesterday," said the clerk, "and the day before, too. Don't you get tired of it?"

"It's like this," replied the bride. "I've been giving my husband tuna fish every night for a week now-and he still wants to go fishing!"

"How much are the eigars?" asked a customer at the tobacco shop.

"Two for a quarter," said the girl behind the

"All right," said the man. "I'll take one."

"That'll be fifteen cents," replied the clerk.

The customer paid for the eigar and left. A man who overheard the transaction came up to the counter.

"Here's a dime," he said. "I'll take the other one."

CITY_____ZONE___STATE____

dad takes over the PTA

Can a male viewpoint help PTA? This town's men say yes

hat the average PTA in this country needs is a solid dose of business efficiency, administered by the fathers.

That's the contention of the men of this California city, near San Francisco, and they've set out to prove their point by taking over the Oak Avenue Elementary School PTA from their wives, who always ran things in the past. This fall the fathers are launching their second season in the driver's seat after a spectacular beginning last year that saw sparks fly and timeworn customs tumble.

Basically, what the fathers say is this: A PTA, like any business, should stick to its main job, which is to get the parents—all the parents—to sit down and talk horse sense about their kids' education and how to improve it, instead of wasting time on minor projects good or bad.

In the old, pre-father days, say the fathers, Oak Avenue' was pretty much like PTAs everywhere: strictly a mothers' show, with the men seldom bothering even to show up. Meetings were talky and dull, taken up with an endless stream of trivial projects that sometimes seemed to have been invented merely to fill time. In one classic instance, the PTA spent 45 minutes discussing the menu for a potluck supper. Normal turnout was a bare 30 mothers, maybe a half-dozen fathers.

THE PRESS WATCHES

Yet today the fathers can proudly point to Oak Avenue meetings so lively and provocative that San Francisco papers cover them regularly. Parents—hundreds of them now, of both sease—not only attend PTA but, once there, argue excitedly over the kind of school they want. The result is better informed parents, better-motivated teachers and, in the long run, a better school.

The story of Oak Avenue's transformation is largely the story of one man, Wally Cunneen, vice president of a firm of San Francisco architects. In 1961, the first of Cunneen's three children enrolled at Oak Avenue. Cunneen gave in to the urgings of his wile, a former teacher, and accepted a committee chairmanship in the PTA.

To Cunneen, an executive jealous of time and impatient with cloudy detail, the methods of the mothers he found himself working with seemed topsy-turvy. They began by scheduling two-hour meetings monthly and only afterwards dreamed up reports and projects to fill the time. Why not, reasoned Cunneen, do the opposite—decide first what you wanted to accomplish, then allot only the meetings needed? And why waste the time of the assembled PTA with minor topics—like that potluck supper—that could be handled faster and better in small committees?

Such refreshing ideas only served to get Cunneen elected president of PTA for the 1962-63 year, Right from the start, he applied business methods. He moved to attract absentee fathers to meetings by appointing a "sales manager"—Bob Morton, in real life a pharmaceutical sales manager—and a "sales force" of 20 mothers, who went to work phoning the stay at homes. An answering father who protested he had no time for PTA was only inviting a stiff reminder that his child's education was a basic obligation. If he said he had to baby-sit, he was told: "Bring the kids. We'll take care of them."

Spirited session at Oak Avenue PTA has teachers, school officers on panel answering sharp questions from parents.

The calls paid off when a record crowd of some 300 curious parents turned out for the new regime's first meeting.

They got a jolt. For the first time in Oak Avenue history, the meeting began promptly at 8 p.m. and stopped on the dot of 9:15. Chairs were grouped comfortably around cafeteria tables, not in rows as before, and coffee and cookies were served as you entered. As promised, a mother and three teenagers provided a haby-sitting service. Best of all, instead of the usual balfling clutter of projects the agenda featured a dynamic naturalized American who had some enlightening things to say about the virtues of public education in America. He hadn't been able to get much in Armenia.

Next meeting, Cunneen pulled another surprise. He collared a panel of experts—a school board trustee, school administrators and teachers—sat them on the slais and gave the parents free rein to hit them with any question they wanted, no holds barred. So lively was the response that almost 50 parent queries had to go unanswered for lack of time. With typical ingenuity, Cunneen published these questions, along with the answers, in a newsletter. Headlined the influential California Teachers Association bulletin: "SNAFFY PTA MYETINGS REAP BIG DIMPERDS."

RECORD TURNOUT

Now the word was out, and Cunneen's third and last meeting this spring pulled the largest PTA crowd ever in populous Santa Clara county. More than 800 parents and visitors jammed a high school gym commandeered for the occasion to hear Maxwell Bafferty.

by FRANK CAMERON

the state's Superintendent of Public Education, deliver a plea against progressive schooling. The big turnout was final proof that parents were willing to make the effort to learn something about their kids' education.

Cunneen sums up his goals simply. "In a family it's usually the man who decides how the couple will vote on school issues, but often he's even less well informed than his wife," he says. "Yet these are matters that can make the difference between good schools and bad. We're trying to get both parents more involved in the school's needs and problems."

TIME-SAVERS

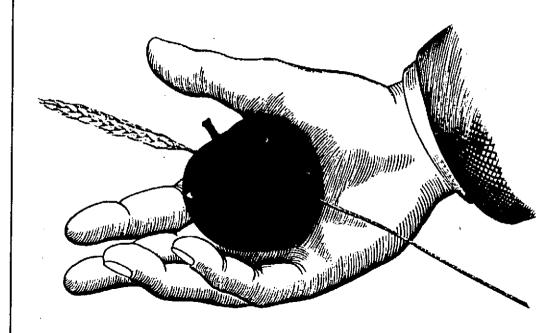

Once out of his cocoon, Cunneen observes, the male PTA member proves ingenious at time-cutting ideas. Meetings have been limited to 3 or 4 a year, starting and ending on time, with the hands of a dummy clock pointing to 9:15 as a constant reminder. Minutes of the previous meeting are not read but mimeographed and handed to parents as they enter, and officers are now elected simply by flashing nominees' names on a screen. Special, one-shot assignments use a father's talents without his having to become "married" to PTA. For instance, a father may supervise an occasional baseball game or moderate a panel.

As for the 50-odd regular, essential PTA activities—buying encyclopedias, staffing the library, raising morey, running the blood bank, planning lunches—they're handled by the mothers just as before. But it's done in committee now, without taking the time of the whole PTA.

This year's new, male-dominated slate of officers — seven fathers and one mother, headed by Sperry-Rand executive Fred Waldron—has some new twists in store for Oak Avenue. Describing his goal as "an end to indifference," Waldron intends to make still better use of fathers business talents by such devices as getting a lawyer to advise him on parliamentary rules, a public relations expert, and an advertising man to help sell the "defeat of indifference" idea.

How do the mothers feel about all this? Occasional griping is reported, but the vast majority of the ladies seem to nod assent to the remark of Mrs. Lloyd Humphreys, president of the Los Altos School District Council, Says Mrs. Humphreys:

"The women don't mind. After all, most of the men are only taking part at their wives' urging."

TWO NATURALS JOIN FORCES

Bran and prune join forces in a natural new cereal combination. Get the rewards of both. Give this coupon to your grocer and get a 10¢ reward besides.

This is one question which particularly "bugs" the parents of girls who supposedly have "everything."

Take the case of Alexandra Zuck, a beautiful, brown-eyed brunette from Bayonne, N. J., whose hair Hollywood bleached baby-blonde, whose name it changed to Sandra Dee, whose avocation it altered from junior model to a full-finded movie star pure changed to Sandra Dee, whose avocation it altered from junior model to a full-fledged movie star, purportedly representative of the younger generation, and who today ranks number three in screen popularity, just below Elizabeth Taylor and Doris Day.

Three years ago when she had just turned 18, Sandra was earning $1,500 a week. She owned a hill-side mansion in Beverly Hills, a $12,000 mink coat, a red Thunderbird, all the material possessions popularly equated with success.

Young actors who were paired with her on arranged premiere dates found her a warm, down-to-earth, remarkably unspoiled star. Her career potential seemed limitless, and she appeared blessed with an inordinate amount of common sense.

"The last man I'm going to marry," she used to say, "is a man in show business. They're selfish, unreliable and make lousy husbands. The Hollywood type of marriage is not for me. I want all my children to have the same father. I'm going to take a good long look before I get married. I'm not going to jump into it. Certainly, not with a show-biz character."

A few months later, after she had filmed Come September in Rome with Walden Cassotto, a talented, diminutive pop singer who calls himself Bobby Darin, this very same level-headed girl eloped with him in the middle of the night in a red Rolls Royce ta Elizabeth, N.J. Their courtship had lasted one month.

People who knew both parties gave odds that the marriage wouldn't endure, and the unanimity of that prediction cleared the market of takers.

TWO YEARS LATER

A few months ago—after one child, a handsome boy named Dodd Mitchell, and two and a half years of a happy-scrappy, tumultuous-tempestuous marriage—Sandra turned up on a music recording stage at 20th Century-Fox to sing a tune for Take Her, She's Mine. She removed her dark glasses revealing a blacked right eye, swollen and discolored. Then she admitted that she was no longer sharing her husband's bed and board, that, in fact, Bobby Darin had moved out. They had separated; a divorce seemed imminent.

Today after four months of separation, the Darins are back together. "I found out," Sandra says, "that marriage isn't the story-book romance I thought it was. It's putting up with a man's snoring and his putting up with you when you look like a drip without make-up. It's realizing that no one is perfect, but if you love someone and he loves you and you have a lovely son, then it's worth all the pain and aggravation to work it out and come to some understanding.

"Bobby is the first boy I ever dated, other than for studio-arranged dates, and I guess if I had been a little older or more mature when we got married, if I'd had some preparation for marriage, maybe I would've handled our problems better. But when I married him, I just didn't take on a husband. I took on a boy friend and lover and husband and father, and I didn't know how to cope with all these different personalities and especially with a husband on the road night after night. You'd have to be insent to like sitting in a night-club dressing room through two shows every night and traveling with a baby.

Sandra Dee

WHEN YOUTH RUSHES INTO MARRIAGE

BY LLOYD SHEARER

Sandra Dee is shown with singer Bobby Darin soon after the couple's recent reconciliation. Sandra vowed she would never marry anyone in show business, wed the singer after whirlwind courtship. They have a son.

"It's a rough life, and it doesn't square with a young girl's dream idea of marriage. If I had my life to live over again, I think I'd go to high school and college before I got married. But still, I wouldn't want to give up for a minute what I now have.

"You know," Sandra goes on, "when Bobby and I were quarreling, I wouldn't go to a marriage counsellor because I don't believe you and your husband can do this together. At least I couldn't, so I went to an analyst, and I told him we had problems, and he heard me out and said the problems existed because I was childish. I had never dated any other men; I didn't know how to adjust to Bobby. But the key line in his advice was this: 'If you can realize your problem—not knowing how to handle your husband—then you don't need me, because I can't solve the problem. But you don't need analysis if you can face up to the problem and try to cope with it. You just go home and try."

IS THIS THE PATTERN?

Why did Sandra Dee get married so quickly in the first place? Is impetuous, reckless, instant marriage typical of most contemporary teenage brides? What can other teenagers learn from Sandra's marital and pre-marital behavior and the heartache it brought?

In Hollywood, the know-it-alls blame the actress' elopement on the overpossessiveness of Mary Douvan, 40, her attractive mother.

Says a family friend: "The trouble with Mary is that she was the most intensive stage mother Hollywood has ever known. She never let Sandra out of her sight. She never let the child develop any self-reliance or self-sufficiency. She did everything for the kid. She was Sandra's constant, 24-hour-a-day companion.

"Naturally, the girl rebelled. She used Bobby Darin and marriage as an escape mechanism. Bobby was the first guy she had ever gone with out of personal choice, and when he suggested marriage, Sandra was overripe.

"The biggest mistake Mary Douvan made was to object to the marriage. When she and Sandra argued about it in the Hotel Drake in New York, Mary should never have walked out. But she did. She got angry and left Sandra and went home to her own mother in Bayonne, N. J."

Sandra had never before been alone in her life. "I was frightened to death," she admits. "I didn't even have my poodle with me. Naturally I phoned Bobby. He was in another hotel around the corner someplace. I think he was singing at the Copa at the time. He came running, and four days later we cloped.

Mrs. Mary Douvan, Sandra's mother, says: "Don't let your daughter start dating boys when she's 11 or 12."

"My mother said to wait, that I was too young for marriage, not to do it. That was her mistake. She should have said, 'Go ahead. Get married.' Then I would've backed off. That's how all kids are. You can't really tell them.

"I remember as a kid if my mother said, 'Don't do this,' I immediately wanted to do it. The great, important word that bugs ternagers is No. The best eigerette I ever smoked was hidden behind the screen in the bathroom. Ever since Mom said. 'Go ahcad and smoke,' I've never had a eigerette that tasted quite as good. I guess I would have avoided a lot of problems if I'd been more mature."

Sandra Dee's mother, an intelligent, perceptive woman who married a New Jersey bus driver when she was 18—and divorced him when Sandy was 4—says, "I've been made the heavy in Sandra's marriage to Bobby, and I don't think I deserve it. I did only what any mother would do under the circumstances.

"After all, I had no husband to turn to for advice. My second husband, Eugene Douvan, who helped me raise Sandra—he died of a heart attack just before we came to Hollywood, so I was both father and mother to the child in her most formative years.

"There we were, the two of us, alone in Hollywood. Naturally I was solicitous of her welfare. I didn't make her an actress. I never projected through my child. She was ambitious, and she wanted to make it on her own.

DATES WITH ACTORS

"I guess I should have had her go out with boys who weren't actors, who weren't in show business, but the studio kept putting her in one film after another—she's made 21 in 5 years—and they wanted to publicize and promote her, so they always had her going out with one of their young players, John Saxon or someone like that, and who could blame them? But Sandy never cared for actors or singers or men in show business. She said she'd never marry any of them. If ever she married, she'd choose a professional fellow or someone out of the business so there'd be no career conflict. And she was sincere, so I never worried on that score.

"I bought us a nice house with a swimming pool and I thought it was just a question of time before a flock of young college boys would come courting. But it never happened.

"In 1960," Mrs. Douvan recalls, "we went to Rome on location, and Bobby Darin was in the picture, and you know how things are on location. The whole crew gets thrown together, and soon everyone is buddy-buddy. But at the start, Sandy wouldn't even give Bobby the time of day. She was nice and polite, but she wasn't interested. But the last month something happened. I don't know what. Maybe it was the lure of first love or the magic of Rome or something. It sure wasn't Sandy trying to run away from me.

"I was so happy when they got engaged. After all, Bobby was of age. He was then 24 or 25. He seemed to know what he wanted from life and he seemed capable of getting it.

"When we returned to New York, it was November, around Thanksgiving, and Sandra said she and Bobby planned to get matried in February. I thought maybe they should keep company more than 90 days—after all, a girl who has never dated anyone before, how does she truly know she's in love? What standard of comparison does she have? But three or four months was okay by me. But then the next day I saw Sandra with an adhesive patch on her arm, and I asked her what it was from. She said she and Bobby had taken a blood test, and I was sure they planned an almost immediate marriage.

'THINK IT OVER'

"I asked Sandy to wait, to have a regular courtship. It wasn't that I didn't want her to marry Bobby. I just didn't want her to do it so quickly without her getting to know and understand this young man and his problems. I wanted both of them to have a sustained dating period. I just said to her: Think it over. Think it over. All I have in mind is your own personal happiness."

"When later they split up—it was Hobby who left, not Sandra—and she came to me, I didn't say, 'I told you so,' or anything like that. I merely said, 'If you love him, if you feel happier with him than without him, go back.' So now they're back together, leading their own lives, certainly without any interference from me. So you can see I'm not the terrible, demanding, overpossessive mother I've been made out to be."

Sandra Dee succumbed too quickly to the lure of first love and impetuous marriage. Fortunately, she and her husband have now given their marriage a second chance, largely because they are convinced of their mutual love, and they prize highly the future welfare of their infant son.

In many other young marriages, however, there is no such second chance, only disillusionment and divorce.

Sociologists and authorities on marriage point out that the girl who is prepared for and doesn't rush into marriage—a girl in her early twenties—has a much better chance of forming an enduring marital partnership than an eager, unprepared, emotionally unsettled teenager.

How does a parent prepare a girl for marriage in her early twenties?

Sandra Dee's mother, who's learned the hard way, says: "Don't let your daughter start dating boys when she's 11 or 12 or 13, because when she's been through it all, the thrill and experience of dating, marriage is all that's left for her. That's the trouble with so many girls today. Nothing's left for them, they imagine, but marriage, and that's why they want it so desperately and are so anxious to enter into it so quickly.

"I think the best way is to let a girl start dating hoys, going out on triple dates to parties with a number of friends, when she's 16. By the time she's 20 or 21, she's finished her formal education, she's had a full social life, she's had enough experience to develop the capacity to judge a man.

"Nowadays so many girls are more interested in marriage than the man they're marrying."

GOOD SAMARITAN LAW.

To date 21 states have passed Good Samaritan laws to protect doctors who stop at accidents to help victims. In the past. many doctors who have saved the lives of these injured, have later been sued on the grounds of malpractice by these same ingrates. As a result, doctors have been advised by lawyers and insurance companies to keep traveling when they encounter a wreck. New Jersey is the latest state to pass a Good Samaritan law.

VANISHING SPONSORS.

The major trouble with television in this country is its economic structure. Primarily an advertising medium, TV draws sponsors who want to be identified with "a happy, non-partisan, non-controversial, entertaining program. Thus when news or documentary shows built around controversial issues in government, finance, politics or sociology are offered. there are no takers. The networks are "stuck" with such

shows, usually at great financial loss. The result: They cancel such videofare as Eyewitness, and Chet Huntley Reporting and relegate their news and documentary programs largely to non-prime time. In 1960 President Eisenhower's Committee on National Goals said: *Thus far, television has failed to use its facilities adequately for educational and cultural purposes, and reform in its performance is urgent. To expect the TV networks to absorb the financial loss of public service programs is unrealistic. Great Britain has beaten the problem by offering its people both publicly owned and privately owned TV channels.

On October 3. for example, the Holland-America Line is permitting use of the Nieuw Amsterdam for a charity dinner to benefit the Boys Towns of Italy. Benny Goodman's band will entertain in the main ballroom, and tickets will cost $100 apiece. Hotel-owners in New York have already registered their protests with the shipping line. But as one Holland-America executive points out: "We pay $1,200,000 a year for pier rent and we've got to do something to pay the rent."

CRACKDOWN ON DRUGS.

Reason why the Food and Drug Administration is against the excessive and casual use of antibiotics in over-the-counter and prescription drugs: Many reputable physicians are convinced that through such drugs the public is unnecessarily being given potent antibiotics. When a man really needs such antibiotics. his body chemistry has developed a near-immunity to them because of prior use. The FDA also maintains that antihiotics will not cure common colds. What this means to the pharmaceutical manufacturers is that they are now going to have to revise their advertising and promotion programs.

CHINA TRADE, The U.S. maintains an absolute embargo, on trade with Red China. But how long can this go on in the face of international competition? Last year Canada sold China $137,000,000 worth of wheat. Great Britain sold $24,000,000 worth of manufactured goods and contracted to supply China with a fleet of Vickers Prop-jet transport planes containing American-made navigational equipment. The first planes have been delivered with our navigational equipment removed. Japan recently signed a deal to erect a $20,000,000 plastics factory in China. Practically all of the Western countries, except the U.S., want some share of the expanding Chinese market. These countries maintain that by increasing the Chinese standard of living, they will wean China's leaders away from their war-mongering proclivity. In a recent interview, Edwin P. Neilan,

BRINGING UP BABY,*
HINTS COLLECTED
BY MRS. DAN GERBER,
MOTHER OF FIVE

Someone's going steady with daddy

And why not? A daddy is all fun and fanfare... all chortles and chin-chucking. A daddy can turn into a horse at the drop of a dimpled smile.
He's a whiz at games and a master builder with blocks.
He's the hero who comes home with a surprise in his pocket...a toss in the air in his arms. Who wouldn't want to go steady with a gay blade like that?

Memo from a popular dad in his own right,
Dan Gerber. "It may interest you to know that here at Gerber your baby's foods are 'custom-cooked' to insure digestibility and better nourishment.
For example, some foods require longer cooking than others...some higher temperatures. Fruits are flash-cooked... sweet-potatoes are slow-cooked (to break down starches into easily digested sugars).
Egg yolks are treated differently from meats.
Whatever the method, cooking time and temperatures are scientifically controlled to preserve the utmost in precious food values."

A bit about blocks. There's something about blocks that absolutely captivates toddlers. With or without dad's inspirational help, they're great fun to stack up and topple down. Interestingly enough, they have educational value, too. Every time your toddler succeeds in getting one block to stay on top of another, his hands and eyes advance in skill. Every time he hits upon a new arrangement, he develops his creative imagination.

Toddler tactics. From time to time toddlers go on a milk strike. You can often encourage a reluctant one to drink his milk if you let him sip it through a brightly colored plastic straw. Other ways you can get milk into a toddler: ofter extra servings of cereal. Or Gerber Custard Puddings. Or treat him to a nog, using Gerber Egg Yolks as a base and Gerber Orange Juice and sugar for flavoring.

For your baby's well-being: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say:

New opportunity for people to take out low-cost

FUND/65 PLAN OPEN AGAIN

No medical examinations. No health questions.

For a limited time, the famous Fund/65 Plan has been reopened for people 65 or older. This is the low-cost insurance plan that helps pay your hospital and surgical bills and which you can join now regardless of your present state of health. It's open to residents of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. No other plan of this kind now available in these states offers both surgical and hospital protection at lower cost.

Who is eligible? Any resident of the above states, regardless of past or present condition of health, provided he or she is age 65 or older on the effective date of coverage,

Are medical examinations required? Absolutely not. And you need not answer any health questions whatsoever.

Exactly what protection so I get? The Fund/65 Plan covers you for all kinds of injuries or illnesses except those caused by war or covered by any Workmen's Compensation or Occupational Disease law, provided hospitalization or surgery is required. Your Fund/65 Plan policy details the exact benefits summarized below. No guesswork — you know in advance how much you receive.

When am I protected? Your protection begins on October 1 if you live in California, and on October 12 if you live elsewhere. It continues for as long as you pay your premium.

Am I covered for surgical expenses? Yes. A schedule right in your policy spells out exactly the maximum amount you are paid for expenses incurred for every type of operation in or out of the hospital. Payments range from $5 to $200 (Examples: $5 for removal of a toenail; $100 for removal of cataract by lens extraction; $200 for perineal prostate removal.)

Am I covered for hospital room and board? You are—up to $10 a day for expenses incurred for as long as 31 days for each hospital confinement as a bed patient anywhere in the world. Not covered is confinement in Veterans Administration or other federal government hospitals, or in clinics and institutions operated primarily as nursing, rest or convalescent homes, or those established for treatment of alcoholics or narcotic addicts.

Who pays for X-rays, tests, medicines, drugs? Your Policy pays you up to $100 for those expenses you incur each time you are confined as a bed patient in the hospital as a result of a new accident or illness. This allowance covers X-ray examinations, operating room fee, anesthetics (including cost of administration), laboratory tests, prosthetic devices, dressings, drugs, medicines, and ambulance service to and from the hospital.

How often can I receive benefits? You receive benefits every time you are in the hospital as a bed patient for a different cause even if confinements are just a few days apart. You can even collect benefits for the same cause over and over provided six months elapse between each confinement.

Am I covered if I am Ill right now? Yes, if you have not been medically treated or advised for that particular illness.

What if I have been treated? You will still receive benefits when hospital confinement begins or surgery is performed after the coverage has been in effect six months.

Can the Company cancel my policy? The Company cannot cancel your policy, change the benefits, or raise premium rates unless it does so on all Fund/65 Plan policies in your state. You may terminate on any monthly premium date,

Can I collect on other policies, too? Certainly. You receive benefits from your Fund/65 Plan policy in addition to any other policies you might have. For example, benefits from your Fund/65 Plan will be paid in addition to Blue Cross, C. P. S., and even in the case of pre-paid medical plans when you incur hospital or suagical expenses. The only restriction is one Fund/65 Plan policy per person.

Are there any tax benefits? Yes, Your Fund/65 Plan premiums are treated as medical expenses for purposes of taking federal income tax deductions.

$10,000 additional hospital coverage only $9.25 a month more

Thousands of Fund/65 Plan members now enjoy protection against costly hospital and surgical expenses. But what happens when hospital expenses exceed the Fund/65 Plan benefits? Who would pay for long-term hospital confinements that could cost thousands of dollars? To guard against such catastrophic bills, Fireman's Fund introduced the Plus/$10,000 Plan. Available only to present Fund/65 Plan policyholders and those now joining, it provides $10,000 added hospital expense protection for an additional $9.25 a month.

More protection at lower cost than any plan of its kind. This protection package—Fund/65 Plan and Plus/$10,000 Plan—is offered at a combined monthly cost of only $15.75. Your Plus/$10,000 Plan coverage will be effective on October 1, if you live in California, and on October 12 if you live elsewhere. Like the Fund/65 Plan, coverage continues as long as you pay your premium. Addition of Plus/$10,000 Plan coverage does not affect your present Fund/65 Plan coverage in any way.

Who is eligible? Any person, age 65 or older, who is enrolled or who now enrolls in the Fund/65 Plan may take out this additional protection. If you choose, you may enroll only in the Fund/65 Plan, but the Plus/$10,000 Plan cannot be purchased separately. It is added protection, available only to members of the Fund/65 Plan.

How does it work? The Plus/$10,000 Plan takes over as soon as charges made for hospital room and board and miscellaneous hospital services exceed by $200 the charges for the same items covered by the Fund/65 Plan. The Plus/$10,000 Plan pays 80% of all additional hospital room and board and most other expenses for which the hospital makes a charge until you have collected up to $10,000.

You are fully protected for each new ailment, even if you have used all your Plus/$10,000 Plan benefits for another accident or illness—provided six months elapse between each hospital confinement.

The Plus/$10,000 Plan does not pay for surgical expenses; however, this in no way affects the surgical coverage under your Fund/65 Plan.

What are the other benefits? Coverage for existing illnesses, types of hospitals included, exclusions, provisions for renewal or change of policy, increase of premiums, and tax benefits for the Plus/$10,000 Plan are the same as in the Fund/65 Plan.

"Just a note of appreciation in your prompt settlement of insurance on my recent illness. I feel embarrassed about it —having the policy such a short time, but this illness struck without any warning, and I am very thankful for the help you gave me. Thank you."

Sara Belfry, 1803 - 27th Ave., Oakland

"Your check in the amount of $945 came today. This policy was made out to my husband, age 72. He just returned home after five weeks in the hospital and you will never realize the release from financial worry your check gave us. I am sure it will contribute to his recovery."

Priscilla Mott, 2034 Grahn Drive, Santa Rosa

"My mother, my husband and I wish to thank you for your prompt and very welcome check toward her hospital expenses. As San Franciscans, we have known the excellent reputation of Fireman's Fund, dating as far back as the fire and earthquake of 1906 and even longer. It has been a great privilege to know personally that this grand reputation is well-founded and continuous."

SARAKA SOLVES THE PROBLEM

Doctor-approved bulk stimulant helps keep you comfortably on schedule as no ordinary laxative can!

As we grow older, our systems may often need outside aid to help maintain a normal regularity pattern. Continued use of strong drug laxatives can be irritating, even dangerous. That's why many doctors recommend SARAKA, the pure, all-vegetable bulk stimulant laxative for middle age and over. SARAKA supplies the moist, bland bulk that is so essential to healthy bowel function. And only SARAKA has a gentle stimulant action to help ease this hulk through your system plus Vitamin B ...

Special note to weight watchers: Lack of sufficient bulk in 900 calorie liquids can lead to constipation. If this occurs, supplement your daily diet with all-vegetable SARAKA.

WHERE DOES ALL THE MONEY GO?

AVE YOU hidden any money lately? It seems as if everyone else has, In Troy, O., a few weeks ago, a dying feed-mill owner revealed on his death-bed that he had buried a fortune beneath the mill: excavation disclosed $500,000 stashed away in three milk cans. The next day, in Madison, N.Y., thieves cracked a safe and took $250,000. The owner, widow of an auto dealer, then disclosed she had another $350,000, tucked away in a secret compartment.

Such secret eaches are just one way money vanishes. Currency and coins are constantly disappearing from common circulation. Where does it go? Count a random handful of pennies. You may not find one dated before 1935, and probably no Indian-head pennies. Yet before 1919, when Indian-head pennies were last made, they were issued by the billions. Where are they?-Buffalo nickels, made until 1938, also by the billions, have already been replaced mostly by Jefferson nickels.

How long has it been since you received in change a Booker T. Washington half-dollar? Did you ever receive one? Yet from 1946 to 1951, no less than 2,967,205 were made.

There are mysteries. U.S. paper money was reduced to its present size July 1, 1929. Many people now living never saw or handled the old big bills, which were retired as promptly as possible. Yet today the Treasury Department reckons that about $140 million have never been turned in. Where are they?

Some coin disappearances are temporary and local. A bank messenger in Boston recently went to the Federal Reserve Bank for 10 bags of nickels and returned with 1: nickels were in short supply that day. Some more permanently disappearing money goes into private hoards. An Iowa housewife ripped the back off an old mirror she had bought at an auction for 75 cents, and bills began cascading out on the table. They were all large-size bills, apparently from about the time of the Wall St. crash. The lady's investment made her $1,208 richer.

Money can be lost in the ocean deeps: it's anybody's guess how much went down with the Thresher. Some money is burned up. A plane crash can destroy all the money aboard. Thousands of pennies disappeared regularly at one time because car owners used them to operate balky coils on Model-Ts.

Some coins wear out, or become bent and twisted; the Mint calls them "uncurrent." A good deal of money quits circulating by going into coin collections; there are estimated to be 3 million or more coin collectors in the U.S.

MEMORIAL-DAY FIND

Burying money was the common ancient way of hiding it. The Bible mentions the practice. Sometimes amazing burying sites are chosen. A man stood at the bedside of his dying father, who, paralyzed and unable to speak or write, desperately tried to tell him something. He didn't succeed. But next Memorial Day, the son was decorating his parents' graves and from his mother's dislodged a tin containing what looked like currency. Search turned up several more, The contents were sent to Washington, and Treasury examiners identified and redcemed $23,000.

Badly damaged paper cannot be circulated but if identifiable in big-enough pieces, its value can be recovered from the government. A Midwest farmer, for example, lost his wallet while feeding cows. He suspected a certain cow of eating it. He killed her and found the mangled mass in her stomach. He sent it to Washington and experts identified and refunded $473.

Hiding large sums is unquestionably less common than it used to be, thanks to banks, credit cards and charge accounts. Yet today a good many people make a practice of having quite a bit of real stuff where they can get it. Many hide it on their persons. A Texas policeman saw an old man who looked as if he could use a square meal and offered him one. The man thanked him and said he could buy his own: he flashed a wad of bills adding up to $4,500.

Some coins disappear almost as soon

as they're minted, because, although they're genuine money, like the Booker T. Washington half-dollar, they aren't really meant for circulation. This is true of "proof sets," which contain one each of the five U.S. coins from 1 to 50 cents. Worth 91 cents, the Mint charges $2.10 for a set enclosed in clear plastic. Some sets command fabulous sums. If you want a proof set for 1895, you might have to pay $1,100 for it.

And some people keep money out of circulation as investment or speculation -like the people who tried to cash in on the closing of the San Francisco mint. They bought rolls of uncirculated coins, hoping prices would soar. They said it was better than playing the stock market: the coins were always worth at least face value, and in time, if they became scarce, they might be worth a fortune!

LET'S GO ON A DINOSAUR HUNT

by JACK ANDERSON

Dinosaur expert Untermann poses with thigh bone he bagged on hunt with author Anderson.

"Would you like to go dinosaur hunting?" asked Glade Sowards, quite casually. It was a reasonable suggestion. He is the Chamber of Commerce president here and wants visitors to enjoy them-is the Chamber of Commerce president here and wants visitors to enjoy themselves. He admitted that trout fishing is popular with tourists; but I had to agree with him that a dinosaur trophy over my mantel would make a more provocative' conversation piece than a stuffed fish.

I inquired about the best weapons to use. Sowards said this was a matter for the experts. He referred me to G. E. Untermann, a hulking, flame-faced fellow with great hunched shoulders and wispy white hair, who runs the Utah Field House of Natural History.

The first prerequisite for stalking dinosaurs, said Mr. Untermann, is a which knoom. Mind you, his advice is not to be taken lightly; he happens to be one of the world's foremost dinosaur hunters. He has been pursuing these hygone blockbusters since 1919.

But don't get the idea that dinosaurs can be bagged with a whisk broom alone. We also brought along a formidable arsenal of chisels, picks and shovels.

In Untermann's red pick-up truck, we headed into dinosaur country. He wore a uniform and badge, giving our safari an official air. Untermann is the state dinosaur game warden, so to speak, having powers to deal with dinosaur-bone poachers. He cautioned me with wry humor that I was entitled to pursue, shoot and kill only one Tyrannosaurus Rex, adult male, or one Diplodocus Giganticus, either sex.

Untermann explained that 12 species of these prehistoric reptiles had once tromped and sloshed in the great, misty swamplands of northern Utah—a fact which may startle visitors who remember this state as one of the world's least swampy places. But Untermann assured me the high and dry Uintah mountains had been steaming swamps 150 million years ago, give or take an eon.

bones in the sand

Monsters though they were, most dinosaurs lived on a sixy diet of water plants. They tended to die along streams, being carried by the current until their considerable carcasses would run aground on a sandhar. These sandhar cemeteries eventually evolved into the dinosaur quarries of today.

The carcasses became buried, says Untermann, under 9-to-10,000 feet of sediment. But during one millenium, the earth gave a terrible wrench and threw up the rugged multi-colored Uintah mountains. This cataclysmic event thrust the long-dead dinosaurs up from their deep graves to the surface.

Though now within pick-and-shovel range, the ancient fossils always arrange to be found in the most inaccessible spots. We drove up Steinaker Draw, north of here, into rainbow-hued mountains where Untermann had spotted a likely quarry. Then we climbed on foot toward a colorful gash in the mountainside—a blending of pinks and purples, yellows and whites—where crosion had exposed geologic secrets of millions of years ago.

Untermann told me to look for "bone scrap," a tell-tale sign that a dinosaur had been there. Although I saw nothing resembling bones, he soon pointed triumphantly at what looked like a scattering of rocks. These bits, he said, were dinosaur bone fragments. He called this geologic arrangement a "floot."

My question, "Where do we dig?" drew a look of mild scorn from Untermann. "Nature never throws bone scraps uphill," he said.

Thus I learned my first lesson in dinosaur hunting. Once you find bone scraps—having brought along an expert to assure that they are bone scraps—you start following the fragments uphill to their source. Then, with what energy is left after the hot and rugged climb, you start to dig.

buried in ash

Excavating the small quarry, fortunately, wasn't too difficult. For our dinosaur, to quote the jocial Mr. Untermann, "had made an ash of himself." He had managed to be buried in volcanic ash which was fairly easy to remove.

Surveying the quarry with an expert eye, Untermann commented that it might also contain uranium. He complained that uranium hunters often stomped off with radioactive dinosaur bones that belonged more properly to posterity than to the Atomic Energy Commission.

Digging away, we found larger rocks, which he also identified as dinosaur bones. Then he picked up a smooth stone that looked as if it had been polished by a jeweler. Untermann explained it had come from a dinosaur's stomach. The great reptiles used to swallow stones to aid their digestion, he said, just as chickens swallow grit today. Grinding against the food in the cavernous stomach, the stones would achieve a high polish. Hundreds have been found.

From the flush on his face, I could tell my dinosaur expert had discovered something significant. It was a rock clearly shaped like a huge bone. With picks and chisels, we fell to it. Then Untermann stopped all activity and dramatically held aloft the whisk broom. With expert flourishes, he brushed away the dirt from the bone. "I learned how to do this," he said, "from a Pullman porter."

Eventually, we retrieved a tremendous bone which Untermann identified as the thighbone of the Diplodocus Giganticus (see photo). We lugged it back to town, and the great dinosaur hunt ended.

But there are many more bones still to be tracked down. All you need are strong legs, thick shoe soles, an expert to identify the fossils—and a whisk broom.

You would expect this to be exciting news. Yet, quite likely, it is within a few steps of where you are at this moment. The drug?

An ice cube.

Ice is such a powerful anesthetic that surgeons have used it to perform certain types of major surgery with patients wide awake. In most cases the patients were almost immediately afterward able to sit up in bed, ask for something to eat and then chat with friends on the phone. As they had no anesthetic by inhalation or by injection, there were no after-effects or drowsiness.

Aside from such extremes, dozens of everyday conditions could benefit from ice as pain reliever.

A little sliver in the tip of your finger is easily removed with the point of a needle sterilized in a match flame. If you cannot stand the pain in the sensitive fingertip, place the tip of the finger on an ice cube until it becomes numb. Then the sliver can be lifted out without discomfort.

A nurse in a certain doctor's office is a great favorite with children. She gives them their immunization shots. Before each shot, she places an ice cube over the area for about 15 seconds, quickly dries it with tissues, swabs the skin with alcohol and puts the needle in while the spot is still numb from the ice.

ice the 'trigger' area

Sometimes ice can relieve backache when it is due to simple muscular strain. A man went to a doctor's office complaining that the pain in his back was so severe that he could not bend forward an inch. After examination, the doctor decided to spray the back with ethyl chloride, a chemical which can freeze the skin. However, the bottle was empty. So the doctor put an ice cube over the "trigger" area, the spot which, when pressed, triggered extreme pain in the back. In a few minutes the area was numb.

To the patient's surprise he was able to get off the examining table without help. He bent forward and tied his shoelaces.

When a person gets a heart attack the doctor might here to use morphine to precent shock due to the massive pain. But until the doctor comes, an ice cube rubhed gently on the chest over the painful area can give relief. After such treatment, morphine may not even be necessary when the doctor arrives.

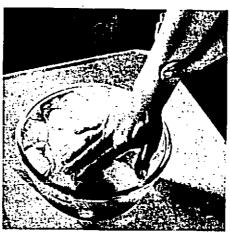

Persons who cannot tolerate narcotics or who demand an unreasonable amount after surgery, or for some painful ailment, are often given the ice treatment. Not only is the pain relieved but the disagreeable effects of the narcotics such as naucea, constipation and drowsiness are avoided, to say nothing of the possibility of addiction. Unfortunately, ice cannot be used for too long a period after surgery because cold inhibits the healing of incisions.

When you burn a finger by accidentally touching something hot, you instinctively want to cool it immediately. Most people are conditioned to look for butter or an oily substance. But, ideally, the finger should be put in a glass or bowl of cold water in which an ice cube or two has been placed. Or the ice cube can be rubbed directly over the burn until the sting is no longer felt when the cube is removed.

The relief from pain is prompt. More important there will be very little swelling, and blisters won't form. Consequently, the burn will heal more rapidly.

IHE AMAZING 'DRUG' IN YOUR KITCHEN

by Herbert L. Herschensohn, M.D.

Burned fingers should be held in bowl of water containing ice cubes. Pain will lessen, blisters won't form.

You can apply your favorite burn preparation after the pain has subsided.

There is another type of heat injury in which an ice cube works dramatically. A husband and wife were driving across the Mojave desert during the summer in intense heat. The wife was becoming flushed; her eyes became glassy. As she was about to pass out, her husband opened a thermos bottle in which there was cold water containing ice cubes, and rubbed some across her arms, forehead and back of the neck. The treatment revived her in sevends.

Ice has another medical virtue. It helps to stop bleeding, not only that which is visible but bleeding which occurs under the skin—as when a shin is kicked or an eye bruised. The black-and-blue discoloration is due to leakage of blood from torn blood ressels. An ice cube occur the injured place constricts the blood vessels so there is less leakage until clotting takes place. This means not only less discoloration but less swelling, less damage to the surrounding tissues, and less pain.

Wherever there is a sports contest, a supply of ice cubes should be readily available. No matter what part of the body is injured ice cubes can be applied with utmost safety. It is to be understood that regardless of how much relief is obtained by the ice the injured person must not return to the game until seen by a doctor. What may appear to be nothing more than a sprain could be a fractured bone.

Another virtue of ice cube treatment is that it helps to prevent infection. Any part of the body that is refrigerated is not likely to become infected, even if contaminated with dirt. The ice-cold temperature keeps germs dormant and unable to multiply and spread. If an ice cube can be held against the wound until a doctor arrives, the danger of infection is practically eliminated.

In emotional disorders ice has been used with success, especially in schizophrenia cases. A sheet wrung out in ice-cold water and placed around the nape of the neck is usually enough of a shock treatment to calm the patient.

When a shoplifter was apprehended by a department store detective she became hysterical. She was taken to the store's first-aid room. The nurse and others could not restrain her, until the nurse took an ice cube and held it forcibly against the woman's neck. The effect was as instantaneous as if a hypodermic sedative had been given. The screaming subsided into soft sobs as she calmed down.

Many akin conditions can be relieved by an ice cube. Itching is an outstanding example. When the skin itches, it is natural for a person to rub or scratch, but relief is only momentary. The itching not only comes back, but more intensely. More scratching and damage to the skin follow. The application of an ice cube stops the itching.

When the area is wide, then the ice cubes can be finely cracked, placed in a Turkish towel which is folded over so that the pack can be adjusted to the contours of the affected part. The pack can be left in place until all the ice melts and reapplied as often as necessary.

This ice-pack method is particularly applicable to such places as the shoulder, in case of bursitis, or to the ankle in case of sprain.

The application of ice directly to the bare skin has been used in the treatment of acne, insect bites, corns and other dermatological conditions.

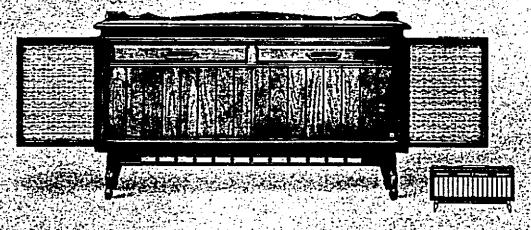

Does this direct application to the bare skin ever cause frostbite—which can be dangerous?

No, it never does. Ice is not dangerous, because it refrigerates the tissues, it does not freeze them. Freezing does cause frostbite with severe damage to the skin and underlying tissues. Water freezes at zero degrees Centigrade. Blood and tissues freeze at a slightly lower temperature. This means that if the skin is simply refrigerated the temperature of the tissues is lowered to somewhere between a half and five degrees above freezing. The difference is not much, but it is great enough to be a good margin of safety.

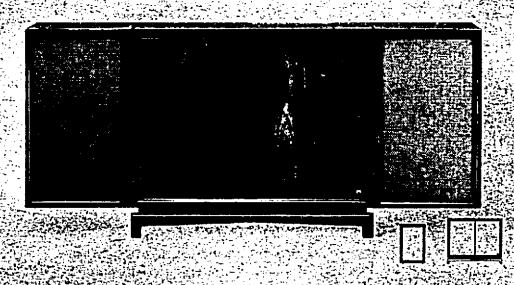

Some persons in their desire to increase the benefit of ice have made ice bags adding salt to them. Salted ice does hasten and intensify chilling, but it can cause frostbite.

Leave well enough alone. The ice cube will work efficiently and safely just by itself and needs no further "help."

COVER

Weekend wranglers rope jackpots in Long Beach and at other Southland locations in a sport that dredges up a passel of excitement for participants as well as spectators. Wherever there's a corral it's almost a sure bet there'll be cowpokes—private citizens in peaceful pursuits all week, but hellfor-leather riders when the chutes are opened and the chips are down.

Hobbivists all, these horsey folk, like golfers, bowlers, fishermen and such. Their sport is rough and there is danger, too-but, if you can't take it, you don't do it. That's how it is. Roger Coar's camera captures a bit of the action for today's cover, and there is more about these weekend cowboys, from roping to rail-sitting, on Page 7.

Lost treasure and the search for it have intrigued the minds of men down through the centuries, especially of lost mines, and Southland next week tells about one of these and the desert rat who was slain for his secret-but who took the secret with him to his unceremonious grave. Perhaps some rockhound will stumble across this old digging some day, but in the meantime there remains "The Lost Silver Mine of the Mojave."

White House Birthdays

By Olive Breed

YEARS in which each of the American presidents were born made a great dif-ference in the problems and conditions each faced, but whether the birth months mattered probably is unan-swerable. However, some interesting groupings occurred, and if past history continues, perhaps small boys with White House ambitions might remember that 27 of the 34 who made the grade were born between October and April, inclusive From May through September, only through seven claim birthdays.

Of these born in October, two came in with the country's slimmest majorities; John Adams (2nd) became "president by 3 votes," and Rutherford B. Hayes (19th) was the president by a vote of 185 to 184. Chester A. Arthur (21st), elected vice president, served all but six months and 15 days of one presidential term, and was not re-elected. Theodore Roosevelt was the first vice president to be elected for a full term after succeeding to the higher office. Dwight D. Eisenhower (34th), on the other hand, served two full terms with decisive majori-

Of the five born in November, three died in office. the other two were elected for only one term each; James K. Polk (11th), one term, was the first "dark horse" candidate; Zachary candidate; Zachary Taylor (12th), died after 16 months in office: Franklin Pierce (14th) served four years; James A. Garfield (20th) lived six months and 15 days of his term; Warren G. Harding (29th), our "ora-tor president," was president two years before his fatal

DECEMBER, January and February have three each,

Of three born in December, Martin Van Buren (8th), served one term; Andrew Johnson (17th), was not re-elected after finishing all but one month of Lincoln's sec-ond term; Woodrow Wilson (28th). Nobel Peace prize winner, was elected two full terms.

Born in January: Millard Fillmore (13th) completed almost three years of the Taylor-Fillmore elected term: William McKinley (25th) lived six months after his second election; Franklin D. Roosevelt (32nd only president elected more than twice, lived but one month of his fourth term.

Washington's February birthday is the only presiin our legal, national eight holidays. Another of his exclusive honors was being unanimously elected; William H. Harrison (9th) was the son of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the grandfather of another president. He served the shortest of any (31 days), having conpneumonia during the inaugural ceremonies. Lincoln (16th) lived slightly longer than a month of his second term. His birthday is commemorated as a public holiday in 34 states. Among the best known and most frequent quotations of our language are many from his speeches. The last sentence of his second inaugural address has become classic:

"With malice toward none. with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive to finish the work we are in . . .

IN MARCH, James Madison (4th) was first of three term presidents, the war of 1812 occurring during his administration; Andrew Jackson (7th) initiated the national nominating convention to supersede the congressional caucus, and for his second term was the first president to be nominated by this national convention; John Tyler (10th) became president 31 days after his election as vice president—not re-nominated; Grover Cleveland (22nd and 24th) won a partial victory between his two terms by receiving a majority of the popular votes, then lost in the electors' ballot.

April-born Thomas Jefferson (3rd) was the first president to be elected by the House of Representatives because the electoral vote was a tie. He was re-elected.

James Monroe (5th) received a unanimous vote for a second term, then one vote was diverted so that Washington might be the only president so elected. Monroe also in-herited the War of 1812 debt of $120,000,000 and retired more than half of it during his first term. His eight years in office have been designated as among the most peace-ful in our history; James Buchanan (15th), only bachelor president, announced in his inaugural address that he was not a candidate for reelection and his acts were not politically motivated. He also stated that the Treasury surplus was embarrassingly large. Ulysses S. Grant (18th) was given all the electoral votes in his second election, his opponent having died before the electors met.

MAY, JULY and August supplied two presidents each: May birthdays go to the 33rd and 35th presidents; during Harry Tuman's in-cumbency the 22nd Amendment, limiting one man to two terms, became law. The current White House resident claims May as a birth month.

July's John Quincy Adams (6th) was the second and last chief executive to be chosen by the House of Representa-tives, no candidate receiving a majority. His was also the first election for which the popular vote was recorded; Calvin Coolidge (30th) was the second man to be elected vice president, succeed to the presidency, then be reelected,

When Paris Plays

"IRMA LA DOUCE," a Billy Wilder production about the girls and their men who populate the less respectable streets of Paris at night, comes to Long Beach movie houses this week with Shirley MacLaine and Jack Lemmon as the stars.

Lemmon, a member of the Paris police force, is assigned to the rough Les Halles marketplace where he meets Miss MacLaine, one of the girls operating in the district. He falls in love with her.

The plot moves rapidly—but lightly—through a raid on the streetwalkers, Lemmon's invention of another identity—Lord X—to hold Miss MacLaine's love, and Lemmon's "murder" of Lord X, his conviction, and his escape from jail.

A bright new music score by Andre Previn is introduced in "Irma La Douce," in which Bruce Yarnell, Lou Jacobi and Hope Holiday also have important roles, It is filmed in Technicolor and Panavision.

Life among streetwalkers: Miss MacLaine gives her rival a well-placed kick in a fit of jealousy.

keeps the street "rolling" on acts of compassion, so no one was surprised to learn that she and Billie had adopted an orphan in Korea, Neither were the Hicks surprised when the street insisted on joining their Project Orphan, 1963.

THEIR KOREAN child, Hwang Kyung Ae (which means To Be A True Servant), was born of unidentified parents in Kyung Sang Nam Do, and was brought to the Holy Land Christian Orphanage in October 1961, through the Pusen City Hall.

Adoption papers are sent to sponsors who pay $10 a month for the support of an orphan, When parcels are received at the home, a picture of the child with the packages is sent to the American parents. If he is old enough, the child writes to his mother and father, otherwise a staff member will do so.

Winters in Korea are cold, so the group is now making warm quilts filled with discarded sheet blankets, pieces of blanket and other offerings. The Hick's home is the gathering place for knit mittans, felt slippers, quilt patches and children's outgrown coats and sweaters.

Every other Thursday evening the women meet to sew and make plans for the orphans, Everyone is welcome. "Many of the women donate 50 cents for the privilege of sewing for this project. That is for postage to mail the articles, so no one minds," Helen said.

RICKY GILLS, aged 10, is president of the neighborhood children's club. By doing yard work and running errands, the club has earned $10 this sumer. Ricky proudly offered the combined earnings of the children to be sent to Korea. "It will take care of an orphan for a whole month," he said.

Doris Wilde's talent show, starring the neighborhood children, was the hit of the July 4 block party and added $14 to the orphan fund. She is now making plans for a toy collection drive.

Weekend Cowboys Rope the Jackpot!

By Helen Graham

Wardlow Road arches over the Long Beach Mounted Guard arena by the Los Angeles River. Those who want a longer glimpse are welcome to circle back and join the relaxed spectators around the fence.

Jackpot roping is a holdout of the man's world of old-time rural America, corralled within the Long Beach city limits at 3400 Golden Ave. Today's cowboys ride the freeways, and their horses follow on wheels. The men who enjoy this rugged sport are not wealthy playboys, but avid hobbyists with a highly developed skill which combines the delicate precision of a Sunday golfer with the mansized muscle of the Old West.

The weekend cow pokes bring their own fine horses from all over the countryside . . . Montebello, Bellflower, Chino, El Monte, Ventura . . . in about a 50-mile radius. Often there is a tagalong contingent of blue-jeaned offspring and wives, some of whom are champion riders in their own right. From 20 to 30 is an average turnout of weekend ropers, and spectators sit on car fenders or spare mounts as box seats around the corral. No fancy dudes or show-off silver mountings here; just an informal coterie of competent riders on skilled roping horses matching mind and muscle for an occasional cash win.

AMATEUR HORSEMEN and a few ex-roded performers, now tethered on weekdays to such mundane grub stakes as carpentry, masonry, egg-crating, real estate, contracting and highway construction, may, in jackpot roping contests, loose the reins in a fast-paced dust-up with the Herefords Wednesday nights and Saturday and Sunday after-

One jackpot can run up to $100 with 20 or more riders contributing, and a team of two steer ropers can win it, but entry fees for the afternoon's sport may have been $15 to $30, so that a contestant feels on top of the game if he just breaks even. He can go home with a sizeable purse. The losers, however, only consider that they have bought a good afternoon's fun, practice and experience in the sport they love.

A dozen or so similar arenas hold jackpot roping contests—Rolling Hills, Canoga Park, Topanga, Thousand Oaks and Ventura—but Long Beach with its clubhouse, snack bar and corral area for the roper's children offers some added inducements to make the sport a family outing as well. Behind the "penthouse" or timing booth tiny youngsters are busy looping their own little ropes over each other's heads or fence posts, content to spend all afternoon absorbing the redolent aura of horsemania and a pride in Daddy's rugged skill.

OILING THE MACHINERY of the Long Beach roping contests are Bill and Lenell Benoist, 2972 Cedar Ave. Their famed Appaloosa horse-breeding hobby mounts Bill handsomely for roping competition. Lenell, assisted by lovely ropers' brides Ann Jones and Judy Pellam, handles the timing and bookkeeping. Bill owns the stock (10 calves, 16 calves, 16

Team roping takes two men into action, one to rope the steer's horns and the other to snag his heels.

they snake a loop at, with the rest of the entry fee going up for grabs in the jackpot.

There are two kinds of contests. Most popular is partners' steer roping. One man, the "header," ropes the steer's horns to get him positioned for the "heeler" to throw his loop over the hind legs, thus holding the white-face immobile. The automatic starting gate begins the timing and the field judge drops his red flag to signal a "fair catch." Lenell and the girls in the timing booth tally with stronwatches and amounce the time.

Calf roping, on the other hand, is a one-man show where the rider must rope a racing critter, throw him, and tie three legs with a pigging string while the stopwatch measures his skill.

A ROUGH SPORT? Sure, but a sprained wrist, finger fracture or a cracked rib in a man's world like this one, is shrugged off, Often bandaged limbs are hung carelessly in a sling while the sidelined rider sits on his horse to watch the competition. Age is no factor here, and some ropers are over 70, competing equally with teen-agers. It's considered a relaxing sport. As Bill Benoist puts it, "Where else can you get a massage and rubdown built into the entertainment?"

The requirements are a sense of rhythm basic to all athletics, good horsemanship, and a fierce desire to build, twirf and cast that loop on a fast-flying Hereford. It takes as long to learn championship roping as championship golf, bowling or tennis, depending on the individual, his talent and his drive.

Cost of the roping sport is where the horsemen are separated from the rail-sitters. If you are contemplating entry in the competition, it's a case of a kingdom for a horse, unless you can borrow one. A well-trained roping horse can bring from $1 to $10 thousand, but a $150 colt you train yourself can win you a jackpot, too. The mount must be stabled and cared for, unless you own a couple of acres yourself. Then there is another thousand or so for a horse trailer. A rope is pretty special, so you pay from $5 to $8 and put it in a $20 insulated round can to keep it limber and at just the right temperature. Saddle and other equipment will run another $300. Now you're in business, ready to compete in the next jackpot go round for whatever cash it yieids.

However, if you get really good in the local competition, you go on to the Oakville, Calif., roping contests in which the prize money can total $36,000 in the three-day event, which ain't hay even to a roping horse!

BUT NO REAL horseman talks much about the expense, or if he does it's defensive: "Yes, but look what a high-powered boating hobby costs, how crowded the marinas are, and how many more months you get to enjoy the year-round roping sport. And if you like horses, this is where you belong!"

No matter how you slice it, a roper on a good horse with perhaps his family watching from the fence, has made his investment where it pays off most handsomely—putting him right where he most wants to be, with the people, the atmosphere and the competition he loves—jackpot riding.

incarceration in a windowless attic, Otto Sanhuber, known as "The Little Man in the Attic," nervously lingered his hat as he sat quietly facing the bar of justice. One of the strangest crime epics of the 20th century...a fetish love affair that ended in murder... was about to be revealed to the world,

It was June 11, 1930, and an expectant stillness fell over the Los Angeles County superior courtroom as Judge Hardy took the bench. The "Attic Hermit" was on trial for his life!

Blinking as though the lights were burting his weakened eyes, he took the stand and replied brokenly to District Attorney Costello's questioning. In a thin, thready voice he began recounting the uncanny events that led up to the killing of Fred Oesterreich, a wealthy Los Angeles manufacturer.

COSTELLO began the questioning in the usual manner.

"Where and when were you born?"

"I don't know, sir," came the hesitating reply. . . . I was abandoned as a baby . . . and left on a doorstep . . . I'm not quite sure where, sir . . . maybe in Milwaukee . . . about 1890, sir."

Ashen and undernourished, he huddled in the witness stand as further questioning began to unfold more of the weird story. It had begun about 1908 back in Milwaukee. He had struck up a friendship with young Raymond Oesterreich (pronounced "O-strike"), Fred Oesterreich's teenage son. Deprived of a family life, Otto was happy to be welcomed into the home as a visitor by the pleasingly attractive (then in her 30s) Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich.

As a friend of her son she treated him warmly, giving him the freedom of the home. Soon he began to think of her as "the most wonderful woman in the world." Fate was already setting the stage for murder when Raymond, the Oesterreichs' only son, died suddenly, leaving Walburga childless

OTTO MOVED into the vacuum, consoling her in her grief and helping in whatever way possible. She treated him so kindly that an overpowering loyalty and devotion began a steady build-up within his small stature.

In contrast to his weak and puny appearance as he sat uncomfortably in the witness chair, to Mrs. Oesterrich, he must have presented some hidden charms in his younger years, for soon their warm friendship turned to love,

Oesterreich did not share his wife's attraction for the undersized Apollo, so it became necessary for them to arrange secret meetings when Fred was away at work. One afternoon he returned home unexpectedly and Sanhüber made for the attic where he remained in hiding for the night. The arrangement worked out very well because, from then on, Otto lived in the attic.

With rough boards he fashioned himself a windowless cubicle with one small electric light. His snug little nest was just big enough for him to stretch out in and house his few precious belongings...a stack of paperback murder mysteries and two small revolvers!

EVENTUALLY his status in the household became a combination hermit-chore boy-lover. Acting as a houseboy during the day, dusting, cleaning and waiting on his lovely lady; then in the evening before Oesterreich was due to arrive home, he would beat a hasty retreat to his attic. There, in his neat little hide-away, he would lapse into an imaginary world of mystery stories and makebelieve gunplay.

Questioned as to why he kept the guns, Sanhuber related that occasionally, when it was safe, he would go out for a short walk at night and that the guns would "make me feel big."

The Oesterreichs moved five times during the 20-year romance and each time Mrs. Oesterreich went house-

hunting with a purpose. She must find a suitable attic for her little lover. She was always successful, but when they moved to California and began looking for a home in Los Angeles, it wasn't easy to find one with a garret. Southern California did not lend itself to attics. But eventually one was found and they all moved in . . . Mrs. Oesterreich, her husband and the phantom attic-dweller!

INCUBATING in his neat little nest during the long evenings, with his guns and mystery stories, he began to vision himself as his lady's protector. He could see himself as a hero... maybe rescuing her from a prowler or a burglar... maybe even saving her from the violence of her own husband.

Then, one night, events combined in true Agatha Christie style which provided him with his opportunity to become a hero. Fred and Walburga had been out for the evening and returned about midnight, From his listening post at the top of the stairs he heard a scream! His blood curdled with the thought that his beloved might be suffering at the hands of her husband and he brandished his guns and dashed down to the rescue.

The scuffle that followed left Fred Oesterreich stretched out on the floor dead, with three bullets in his body. One had penetrated the heart. Mrs. Oesterreich, who had not been attacked by her husband but had cried out in pain when she had slipped on a throw-rug, spraining her ankle, sat motionless on the floor where she had fallen. She was stunned and hopelessly confused. But the Little Fellow again came to the rescue.

HIS KNOWLEDGE of mystery stories came in handy and he ordered his idol to go to a closet at the rear of the house. Locking her in, he instructed her to tap on the door with her shoe and call out for help. When help arrived she was to say that a burglar had shot her husband and locked her in the closet.

This worked out just as planned and although there was a thorough investigation following the tragedy, Mrs. Oesterreich was cleared of suspicion and the attic-dweller was undiscovered.

After the investigation, the strange pair settled back into their regular routine... a routine that both of them had begun to accept as normal. Otto had grown accustomed to his tiny quarters, feeling safe and sheltered from the world and content to continue his services as a little helper around the house. It might have been said that they lived happily ever after but for further complications...

MRS. OESTERREICH became fearful that the guns might some day be discovered in the household and she persuaded the Little Man to break them up into small pieces, file off the serial numbers and she would have them disposed of.

Never at a loss for "friends," Walburga, on two different occasions, asked men friends to do away with the fragments. A lover's quarrel with one of these friends some years later caused him to go to the police and another investigation followed that linked Mrs. Oesterreich with the killing and smoked out the Little Man in the Attic.

After her arrest, the always resourceful Mrs. Desterreich engaged the famous Hollywood attorney Jerry Giesler as her lawyer and was eventually released because of lack of evidence.

BUT SANHUBER gave what amounted to a confession to the grand jury and was held over for trial in superior court. On the witness stand, however, he repudiated his former statements and claimed innocence of the killing. The gun fragments had been dug up but were unidentifiable and could not directly link him with the crime. He consistently claimed that he had never left his cubicle on the night of the murder and that burglars must have done the shooting.

He presented such a pitiable and tragic picture that the jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter rather than murder. It was eight years after the actual shooting had occurred and the three-year statute of limitation on the manslaughter charge prevented his imprisonment. The judge dismissed the case and he was set free.

The Many Lives of

. . . the developer who first opened offices in Long Beach, later had an L.A. boulevard named after him . . .

H. Gaylord Wilshire

By Roberta Murray

H. Gaylord Wilshire was a figure prominent in the early history of Long Beach.

THE YOUTHFUL manager of the Long Beach Development Co. had just opened offices in the $50,000 Long Beach Hotel in 1887 and was the subject of much speculation among mothers of marriageable daughters.

"He's Henry Gaylord Wilshire. Gay, they call him. Isn't that Vandyke beard distinguished? They say he's single—and wealthy. Harvard man such a gentleman . . . divine dancer."

But the fathers of those daughters probably said, 'The Wilshires, father and sons, have invested a fortune in Southern California real estate. They're real go-getters, especially Gay. Wants to put a ladies' billiard room in the hotel. Imagine. Next

we'll have a saloon in this dry town."

One thing puzzled them though. "Sometimes he talks like a Socialist. But with that money he couldn't be.

HE COULD BE and was, Ideas radiated from him as from a Fourth of July sparkler. If he wasn't advocating government ownership of the trusts, he was promoting the sale of Long Beach property all the way to Rattlesnake (Terminal) Island at a neat profit. Ocean-front lots in "Peerless Long Beach" sold for $25 down and $25 six months later. Future improvements would include piped in water, side-walks, electric illumination and a 100-foot-wide "Grand Pacific Boulevard."

The wide boulevard was probably Gay's idea, because wherever he had a hand in city planning, his first thought was of adequate thoroughfares. Spacious Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles and Commonwealth Avenue in Fullerton are other testimonials to his foresight.

Already Gay and his brother William, vice president of the development company, had a commitment from the Southern Pacific Railroad magnate, Col. Crocker, to build a line replacing the ridiculous "teakettle" service. (Crocker was the father of a young woman whom Gay had escorted about during a stay in San Francisco. While no serious romance had blossomed, a profitable business association with papa did.) According to Los Angeles County Supervisors' records, "H. G. Wilshire was granted a right of way along 2nd Street from Maine to the Alamitos line" in 1887. This was probably the forerunner of the Southern Pacific line to Long Beach

Wilshire's offices in this city were in the Long Beach Hotel, a hostelry which won wide renown and which was slated for an even greater role before it burned in 1888. Wilshire foresaw a fine cultural future for this area.

IN THE DOLDRUMS since the collapse of Willmore's American Colony in 1881, the little beach town needed Gay's spirited promotion if Crocker's prophecy were to become a fact—that "Long Beach would become the resort of the south as Monterey is of the north." It also needed the plush Long Beach Hotel to attract the monied people, socialities, and occasionally even royalty. The long Beach lowered did like hit by publiciting guest. Long Beach Journal did its bit by publicizing guest lists and faithfully describing the gowns of the ladies who attended the gala balls.

The town was on the brink of a big boom. The hotel was to be enlarged. The Wilshires built a cottage on Pine Avenue and the Journal reported that the elder Wilshire would soon erect a fine brick business building nearby.

Then in 1888 the hotel burned. Lawsuits and a series of disheartening legal difficulties beset the development company. It began to look as if the hotel would not be rebuilt. And without it, Gay reasoned, Long Beach could not expect to become the cosmopolitan cultural center that he had en-

HIS FRIENDS, Count Charles Bozenta Chiapowski and Madame Modjeska, who came from their Trabuco Canyon home in summer to enjoy the beach at Anaheim Landing, gave glowing accounts of a new tract which was opening up in what is now Orange County. It looked like a good business venture and it would bring Gay inlies closer to the Modjeska home which attracted many artists and intellectuals of the day.

So Gay Wilshire invested in and helped lay out a town with streets wide enough to serve a burgeoning population for years to come. The town was Fullerton, and he is considered one of its founding fathers.

For about a year he lived nearby, operating ranches and experimenting with various crops, among them the grapefruit, which he is said to have introduced to this area.

Old-timers who still remembered the laboring Butterfield stagecoach with its hardbitten drivers, eventually grew used to a new sight, that of Wilshire's tallyho which he used to transport his friends to the Modjeska home.

ROADS WERE winding, rutted and narrow, but the liveried driver of the coach sat tall and dignified, as if he were taking his ford through a pleasant English countryside. As the house came into sight, the guard stood up in the careening vehicle and gave a horn blast piercing enough to flush the mountain lions from their lairs.

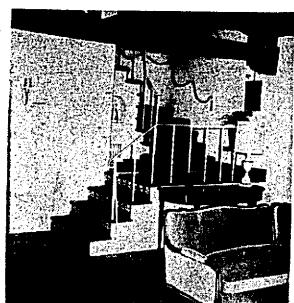

Strangely this cultural and intellectual atmosphere did nothing to dim Gay's ardor for socialism. It was not so much that he wanted to be poor with his fellow man, but that he wanted every man to have as much as he. But share he did, through "The Challenge," a Socialist newspaper which he launched, pouring a small fortune into it rather than make it self-supporting through realistic subscription rates. In 1890, he unsuccessfully ran for Congress on the Socialist ticket, and the same year went to England where he lived for several years.

Witshire helped bring a railroad to Long Beach but didn't stay to see it in operation. He moved on to Fullerton where he assisted in laying out that community. Above, rail terminal at Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Ave., 1882.

HOUSE OF THE WEEK

With the Virtue of Simplicity

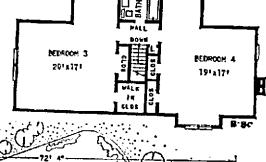

RDER is a lovely thing, a poet once said, and in today's rush to find something new, something differ-ent in home design, it is refreshing to discover a house where genuine elegance is the result of plain simplicity.

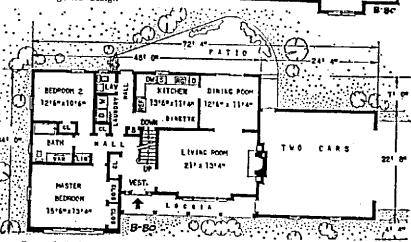

"There is nothing tricky about this house," said architect Fenick A. Vogel, who designed it. "Just a straightforward plan that should appeal to home buyers who are thinking about tomorrow as well as today."

THEN PLACE one hanger crosswise within, the other and tape together tightly below the hooks and also where the hangers cross at the base.

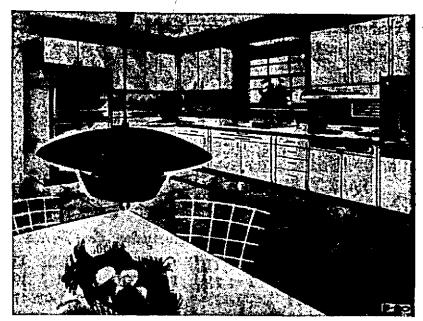

Place the can inside the frame of wire. Wind a strip of tape across the wires and around the can, both at the top and base of the can to hold the wire frame rigid.

Add a cup of wild bird seed to the can and hang it high out of the way of cats. Put it where you can see it from a window. Before very long you will see your first curious and hungry visitors: Some-how they tell their friends and many more birds will come.

With its upstairs unfinished, B-80 is a two-bedroom, 11/2 bath home with 1,380 square feet of living area in dimensions of 48x34 feet, not counting the double garage which adds 21 feet 4 inches to the width.

Finishing the upstairs, which could be done a portion at a time as the extra space is needed, would add 1,034 square feet to the total,

THE FORMAL living room, a comfortable 21 feet by 13 feet 4 inches, is highlighted not only by a large fireplace but also by a bay window which provides indoor enjoyment of the delightful front porch, or loggia, which plainly is one of the most attractive exterior features of the

Salad Pie a Meal in Itself!

By Mildred K. Flanary Seemland Magazine Herry Economics Editor

There are pies—and there are pies! But the big food news today is an easy as pie salad pie, a delectable main course.

Into the baked shell goes a variety of fillings, all of which contain diced cooked meat and vegetables or other gastronomic companions. The advantages are obvious: a complete mealina-pie dish that looks handsome, tastes superb, and can be made in advance of the company or family meal.

Equally tasty and fetching is the Fruited Chiffon Pie illustrated today. The happy secret of both pies is the presence of reliable unfalvored pelatine. Once dissolved, the gelatine combines with the other ingredients and simply chills until done.

Following are the recipes for both:

Easy-As-Pie Chicken Salad

- 2 envelopes unflavoted relatine
- vored gelatine 1]4 cups cold water
- I can condensed beef broth
- 1 cup salad dressing 2 tblsp, chopped onion
- I tsp. salt.
- 2 tblsp. lemon juice
- 2 tblsp, chopped pimiento
- 1 cup diced celery 2 cups diced cooked
- chicken
 1 9-inch baked pastry shell

Sprinkle gelatine on the water in a 2½ quart saucepan to soften. Place over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until gelatine is dissolved, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in beef broth, salad dressing, onion, salt, lemon juice and pimiento; beat with rotary beater until smooth. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Add celery and chicken. Turn into prepared shell. Chill until firm. To serve, garnish with a wreath of diced green pepper and pimiento. Yield: 6 servings.

Note: If desired, recipe may be doubled. Two cups finely cut corned beef, turkey, cooked sea food or 2 cans (61/2 or 7 ounces each) tuna in vegetable oil may be substituted for chicken.

Fruited Chiffon Pie

- 1 cup corn flake
- 14 cup butter 2 tblsp, sugar

Measure corn flake crumbs, butter and sugar into a 9-inch pie pan. Place in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 5 minutes. Remove from oven and mix thoroughly. Press against bottom and sides of pan. Chill.

Thanks to the presence of reliable unflavored gelatine, cool refrigerator pies come to the table to perk up dull appetites. They can be complete meal-in-a-pie dishes and/or dessert favorites like Fruited Chiffon Pie.

Chilfon Filling

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatine 12 cup sugar
- | i sp. salt | i sp. salt | i cups water | i can (6 ounces) | pink or plain | frozen lemonade

concentrate

1 tsp. almond extract
*1 cup icy-cold
evaporated milk
Sliced, well drained, fresh, frozen or canned fruit (strawberries, peaches, raspberries,
blueberries, etc.)

Mix together gelatine, sugar and salt in a 2½-quart saucepan. Stir in water. Place over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until gelatine and sugar are dissolved, about 3 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in undiluted frozen concentrate and almond extract. Chill until mixture is the consistency of unbeaten egg white. Whip chilled evaporated milk in small bowl of electric mixer on high speed until soft peaks form, about 2 minutes. Fold into gelatine mixture. Turn into crumb crust; chill until firm. Chill at least I hour. Garnish with sliced fruit.

⁴To chill evaporated milk, pour into ice cube tray and freeze until soft ice crystals form around edge

Note: If desired, I can (6 ounces) frozen strawberry-lemon, raspherry lemon, or lemon-lime concentrate may be substituted for lemonade concentrate.

Recipe of the Week

COOKIES that hit the spot also hit the $5 recipe jackpot this week for Miss Katherine Carlson, 258 Roswell Ave., Long Beach 3. Miss Carlson's recipe:

Fruit Nut Refrigerator Cookies

- 1 cup butter 2 cups brown sugar
- 2 cups brown sugar 2 eggs
- 4 cups sifted flour
- 14 tsp. salt
- 14 1sp. cinnamon
- '' 14 cup nut meats, chopped
 - 2 cup pitted dates. chopped
 - 32 cup maraschino cherries, chopped

I tsp. soda
Cream butter and sugar together, add eggs, mix well. Sift flour, salt, cinnamon and soda together. Add 4/2 cup of flour mixture to the fruit and nuts. Add dry ingredients to the creamed mixture, mix well and add the remaining floured ingredients. Form into rolls 1 inch in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper. Store in refrigerator overnight or longer. Slice 1/4 inch thick and bake on greased cookie sheet at 400 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Swimming in Coffee By Betty Hardesty

Wally Gallenburger tests the free coffee that he brows daily at a Long Beach market, some 10,000 cups weekly.

7E'll DRINK 140 swimming pools full of cofin Los Angeles County this year-from vending machines alone. This is the measured estimate of industry spokesmen, figuring an average-sized pool holds 21,000 gallons and 21½ vending-sized, 6-ounce cups of coffee make a gallon. This is one of the ways in which Americans consume more coffee than all the rest of the entire world population,

Office and factory workers have become addicted to the coffee break since World War II, some union contracts even requiring free coffee, Such is the case at Mattel, Inc., toy manufacturers, who pay out $10,000 a year for coffee. Time losses, once a serious problem, however, have been ameliorated by the vending machines which make the coffee in quantities or by the cup even to automatically adding sugar or cream.

The Pan American Coffee Bureau reports that Americans 10 years of age or older, use 20.4 pounds of coffee per year, Last year U.S. imported 24,573,887 bags weighing 132 pounds each at a cost of $1.7 billion. Of this, the Davidson Bros. division of Automatic Retails of America, Inc. anti-cipate $4.2 million of vended coffee sales in L.A. areas.

Free cups of coffee are being offered by some grocery markets with interesting results. For instance, one Long Beach market makes 10 to 12,000 cups a week, 50 cups at a time in alternating percolators. Sugar and fresh half-and-half cream, one gal-lon a day, is available for the paper cups furnished by the coffee company whose brand is brewed.

"There is a line-up at 9 every morning," the manager says, "and everybody takes a cup. Many take two but not everybody buys groceries."

Those in the industry say there is an increased tendency LA REINA RULE

M. S., J.W.: SHARPE was given to the family progenitor over seven centuries ago to drink coffee black-60 percent in this area. They note also a growing popularity of saccharine. The Biltmore Hotel says that coffee drinking there has more than doubled in the last six years. The coffee bureau states that per capita consumption is not greater than last year, it has merely kept up with population growth.

Import quotas of coffee are carefully regulated to stabilize supply and prices, but the convenient placement of vending machines everywhere, plus more and more happy drinkers of free coffee, suggests we are almost swimming in coffee,

The ancestor's sharpness earned him a reputation that he handed down philologically to his descendants, Old York-shire records list Adam Scharpe in the Poll Tax of 1379. Bed Smokers: Foam Is Safer

By Ben Zinser

F YOU INSIST on smoking in bed, pick a bed with a foam rubber mattress. It's the safest, new research shows.

Researchers at the University of Saskatchewan tested the burning properties of three types of mattresses:

cotton-filled, innerspring, foam rubber.
Foam rubber proved to be the safest because on contact with glowing cigarette heat, it merely melts. Furthermore, a burning rubber odor serves as a warning,

Although foam rubber does not burn on contact with a cigarette ash, it is flammable if exposed to an open flame, the researchers note in the journal Hospitals.

However, virtually all mattress fires are caused by a burning cigarette—not an open flame. From this standpoint, foam rubber still is the safest type of mattress.

SINCE BROMIDES (drugs with a sedating effect) are no longer in general use in the practice of medicine, they should no longer be made available to the general public without a prescrip-tion, two British Columbia researchers believe.

Bromides, they remind, may produce a state in which habituation and impaired judgment will lead to excessive intake and severe poisoning.

The researchers report two recent cases of poisoning due to common bromidic agents available at any drug store.

Their report is in Canadian Medical Association Journal,

A NEW ANTIBIOTIC called chelocardin has, in animal experiments, proved effective against certain hardto-control bacteria frequently involved in urinary tract infections. The new agent was derived from a soil sample obtained from a flower bed in Springfield, Mass., reports the New Physician, a medical journal.

ANOTHER NEW antibiotic, pristinamycin, has been up to 93 per cent ef-fective in countering staphylococcal bacteria in trials on human patients in France. The drug, taken by mouth, is not yet available in the United States. Pristinamycin has been effective in some patients whose condition did not respond to other antibiotics.

IDERSONS WHO consume large amounts of vegetable oil daily in an attempt to reduce blood cholesterol experience a mild diarrhea occasionally.

A consultant to the Journal of the American Medical Association suggests that vegetable oil be taken with meals, incorporating the oil, whenever practical, into a food product. This af-fords a better chance for the oil to be dispersed and may eliminate the diar-

A TEAM of Philadelphia researchers has dashed the long-held belief that peptic ulcers are likely to flare up in the spring or fall.

Doctors at Gastrointestinal Research Laboratory at Pennsylvania Hospital checked the hospital records of 411 patients who suffered ulcer perforation or bleeding.

The differences in monthly incidence were slight, the researchers say. Their conclusion: the spring and fall flareup concept has been exaggerated.

The report is in Annals of Internal Medicine.

Landscaping Important to Home Buyer

Buying a new home? Then check the land and the landscaping, advises the American Association of Nurserymen. Modern advances in landscaping and planting may make the difference between, enjoyment of your land for living, and not.

Check the design, the posi-tion of the house on the lot and the quality of the landscaping. It usually will pay a prospective home buyer to hire a good landscape nur-seryman to go over the prop-erty with him and offer advice. He will check the grades before any planting is done, sometimes be able to save good trees. Some builders install the cheapest of plants in a skimpy row along the front of the house just to take away the bareness. Others do a capable landscape job. The nurscryman can help you decide whether or not you are receiving sound value in the planting. If the builder allows a rebate for landscaping, the nurseryman can tell you what you may purchase for this

Some builders do a basic planting job and then provide a landscape plan for the home owner to have completed by a recommended nurseryman. This is sound procedure, too, resulting in good landscaping values that increase the resale value of the home,

If little or no landscaping is offered with the house, it can be achieved by experi-enced landscape nurserymen, by means of an F.H.A. home improvement loan up to $3,500 or more, being available for this purpose.

QUESTION: "I keep telling my son Joe how much it means to me for him to do good work in school and take more of an interest in learning things. but I don't seem to make much of a dent. He doesn't really seem to have much of a sense of obligation. How can we instill that in him?"

ANSWER: Why not try telling him that success in school is essentially to his own advantage?

What he learns now is going to determine his hap-piness, his career, his in-come in later years.

He's not going to school to please others but to help himself. If he loafs, he will be the one to suffer,

QUESTION: "Why do so many children have such a hard time learning rules and definitions?"
ANSWER: The rules often don't seem to have any connection with anything concrete, real, or useful.

It is important to provide the child with a simple example which clearly illustrates the rule and its application.

If you tell him that a comma is a punctuation mark indicating separation in ideas or construction within a sentence, you had better show him a sentence with commas performing these functions.

Prove to him that a comma is not merely a rule but a mark with a practical mission in the art of expression. He'll then see the value of learning the rules governing its use.

QUESTION: "While I've read a lot of practical suggestions in the "how-to-study" books and articles, I notice that my daughter, who makes excellent grades, has her own peculiar study habits, which usually don't conform to these suggestions. Aren't study liabits pretty much an individual matter?"

ANSWER: There is no single established way to study, of course, Research reveals that good students arrive at their goals by many different roads.

If a student's study method produces good results, he should stick with it. In this case, the end justifies the means.

The how-to-study advice is for those who have no satisfactory method and who want to do better.

Bicycle rack shown from front; two bikes of different sizes fit easily. Right, back view showing tool chest.

By Bill Meyerriecks

"IDLEASE get that bike out of the driveway!"
"Helen, that's the second time this week I've tripped over the children's bike!" Sound familiar? These quotes could very well have reverberated from the walls of your happy home. That seemingly ever-present bike can be no nuisance at all if there is a handy place to park it.

Sketchbook's bike stand plan eliminates this nuisance from your life very simply. Using one sheet of half inch exterior plywood provides you with two racks that hold any size two-wheel bicycle, plus a top tool chest and back cabinet for storage of bike accessories and parts.

THE STAND and storage, as shown, is one compact unit foot square. It can be placed strategically in the garage or in any other convenient spot. The space between the two racks is wide enough for a small tot's tricycle to be parked there if need be.

The Sketchbook plan offers an added optional detail showing how the bikes may be locked to the stand, if you wish to add this precautionary measure. The plan contains step-by-step building instruction, parts and lumber list, plus a diagram of how to cut out all parts from the

Neatness is an equal reward of this easy-to-build project. The youngsters will have no excuse. The place for their bikes will be in the stand. And any father that's fixed a broken chain or hunted for a

W. S. (Dusty) Rhoads demonstrates a step in finishing violin parts. His skill has been acclaimed by experts.

He's a Modern Stradivari

By Tamara Andreeva

S. (Dusty) Rhoads lived to be 75 before he found himself and his true vocation. With it came happiness, recognition, fortune.

A native of Missouri. Rhoads knew only what he calls "hoedown" music. He listened to it most of his life, and he could pick a pretty mean tune on a homemade fiddle. Never did he dream that he and violins would become closely associated.

In 1906, like most ambitious young men of his time, he started westward, working as mechanic, machinist and carpenter. In the early 1930s, he had a band in Las Vegas, Nev., known as "Dusty Rhoads and His Oldtimers." "We played hoedown and broadcast it," he recalls.

In 1942 he moved to Berkeley, Calif. "I was supposed to have retired," he says, "but I was just tired."

It was there he started toying with the idea of making a violin.

"I reworked a three dollar fiddle and sold it for a hun-dred," he says, "I knew I could do better than that if I built my own." And this he proceeded to do.

RHOADS went to the San RHOADS went to the San Francisco library one day in 1957 and perused Joseph Reid's book on making a violin, "It described some Stradivari violins in such exstratuvari volons in such ex-cellent detail," he relates, "that I got a hankering to make me one." His repro-duction of the famed 1716 "Messiah" model Stradivarius was faithful in the smallest detail: the back, ribs, and neck were made of hard sugar maple; the belly of spruce pine. Every part of what he still insisted on calling "a fiddle" was made by hand,

"I had to follow the woods," he explains, "because to violins woods are the same as vocal cords. The woods to the violin are the same as voices. No two pieces of wood sound alike. The thickness of wood is responsible for the pitch. By shaving the wood down or leaving it thick you can have your fiddle sound higher or lower."

Tongue-in-check, Rhoads called his first two Stradi-varius copies "Kate and Dupli-

HIS VIOLINS completed, Rhoads took them to Dr. Sidney Griller in the music department of the University of partment of the University of California at Berkeley. Dr. Griller tuned "Kate" and played a few bars, Then he stopped to mutter: "Amazing . . . incredible . . ." He was talking about the trueness of tone in Rhoads' violins. It was not only as good as the original Stradivarius, but better, he said.

Rhoads admits that he, too, was surprised. "I was not even sure that I took all the 'wolves' out of these first two models," he confesses. (The "wolves" are scratchy tones that have to be "taken out" of a violin by various and sundry means, from using different woods and strings to mechanical adjustments

like gluing and tuning.)
One of Rhoads' secret refinements is the use of a fine mesh silk stocking to check the finish of a violin. If, after rubbing the inside of the newly — built instrument the stocking comes out without a run, the workmanship is perfect. If the stocking snags, Dusty continues to polish with pumice,

ACCORDING to Rhoads, very small things account for the excellence or total failure of a violin, "For instance, varnish," he elucidates. "In my first two violins I did not get the true tone until I got rid of the cheap commercial varnish; resanded, and re-finished the instrument with pumice, rottenstone, and raw linseed oil."

Rhoads can tell why good violins are so expensive; one can pay anywhere from $500 to $12,000 for them. "It takes me 300 hours to finish one," he says, "And the old masters took longer. In those days all they had was time . . ."

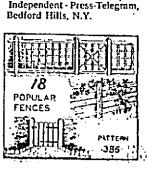

Just as horse lovers are constantly horse-swapping, world's best violin makers are continually exchanging good woods. Dusty got many of his best pieces from friends in the Swiss Alps. And if you see him in the West's high country, searching for something, he is looking for chunks of good wood. Like gold, he says, good wood is where you find it.

THE STORY of Howard Blackburn, Yankee seaman from Gloucester, is almost a legend among seafaring men. It is told again in "LONE VOYAGE" by Joseph E. Garlan (Little, Brown, $5.) Wilshire Is Subject of Two Books

most of the material from which writers have woven entertaining half-true stories.

A CONTEST with the city fathers of Los Angeles over his right to an audience in Central Park (now Pershing Square) provides an hilarious true tale. Fashionably dressed, Gay was a regular orator there, a launcher of witty volleys against capitalism. So troublesome did he and fel-low orators become that an off-the-cuff ordinance was passed prohibiting "debates"

without a permit.

Prohibition of free speech was a cause worthy of Wilshires attention and he decided to make a test case of it. His attempt to be arrested was reported by amused newsmen who quoted him as saying, "Where is that offi-cer? I am tired of speaking. Why this delay?" Reluctantly officer stepped into the comic opera situation and obliged,

Later, Gay wrote in "The Challenge" that the judge decided "the Constitution of the United States trumps any old city ordinance."

Gay sank his own and other people's money in gold mining ventures. In the last few years of his life he invented the Ionaco, a widely advertised ejectronic gadget which his public relations man guaranteed to cure the ills of mankind and darken milady's grey hair. The American Medical Association and assorted Better Business Bureaus were investi-gating when he died in 1927.

Two books about the effervescent personality are to be published soon. Emily Harvin, a life-long friend and a writer now living in Corona del Mar, has custody of the Wilshire papers and is beginning the personal story of Gay and his wife Mary and the procession of people who entered their orbit: Jack London, Lawrence Tibbett, Re-becca West, Upton Sinclair, George Bernard Shaw and many others.

For some years Dr. Howard Quint of the history department at the University of Massachusetts has been working on a book about the sociological and political Wilshire. By agreement with Emily Harvin, he has had ac-cess to the Wilshire collection.

No doubt the forthcoming books will illuminate all of the angles of the complex man who lived as a capitalist, but preached socialism (his views seem conservative enough today), was branded an egomaniae and impractical dreamer. The interest of Long Beach readers of course, will be in the part that he played in the early beginning of the city.

Pearl Buck Writes of Korea Life

By.Vera Williams

NOBEL PRIZE winning author Pearl S. Buck has written a new novel, "THE LIVING REED" (Day, $6.95) which promises to take its place with her "Good Earth" and "Imperial Woman" in popularity with the reading public.

Pearl Buck is at her best when she writes about the Asiatic people whom she knows so well, having lived all of her early life in China with her missionary parents. For this new novel she spent much time living in Korea among the natives of that country. It is the longest and certainly one of the widest in scope of her books.

The 478-page book tells the story of a high ranking Korean family or clan beginning in 1881 with Kim Il-han, adviser to Queen Min who ruled Korea during that period with grace and splendor, Korea is picturesquely de-scribed as "a tiny peninsula hanging like a golden fruit before the longing eyes of surrounding nations."

Strongly grounded in actual history, the novel touches on many aspects of Korea's past,

The story revolves about Kim Il-han and his lovely wife, Sunia, and their two sons, Yul-chun, the elder, and Yul han, the younger.

One day in a fit of childish anger Yul-chun tore up the bamboo shoots in the family garden, "You have destroyed garden, "You have uestroyed food. You have destroyed him. food. You have destroyed life," his father chided him. "Though it is only a hollow reed, it is a living reed. Now the roots must send up other shoots to take the place of those you have destroyed," This bit of Oriental wisdom followed the headstrong Yulchun all his life. Eventually he joined the exiled revolutionaries and became the legendary figure known as the "Living Reed."

The second son, Yul-han, married a Christian girl named Induk and he became a Christian also. Eventually, because they were Christians he, his wife and daughter died martyrs' deaths. They left a son, Llang to carry on the family name,

Pearl Buck carries her story of the life of the Kim clan through the third generation recounting the complicated love affairs of Sasha, the late Yul-chun's son by a Russian girl, and the love affairs of the late Yul-han's son, Liang.

AST things first: Ship-hoard liquor is cheap and duty-free once you get to sea. In port, it's padlocked, Sometimes, some ships, the bar is open, Better plan on a room party. More fun anyway.

Call the shipping line company. They arrange these things all the time. Usually they don't accept orders for hard liquor—you could bring your own. But you can order champagne at about $5.50 a bottle; sparkling burgundy for $3; Bristol Cream sherry at $4.20; Pommard (red wine) at $3, Rhine wines (white) at $3.

'For $10 you can almost float your friend over.

The company will give you a price list on hors d'oeuvre, Not expensive. You can also get a waiter/bartender for tips alone: $1 per person is about right, But you can cut that as the list gets higher—like $10 would be OK for 15 to 20 people.

If You Can't Lick 'Em, Fool 'En

By Robert L. Thompson

THE DATE was Aug. 6, 1846, and Commodore Robert F. Stockton was at-tempting to slip into the harbor at San Pedro. Streaks of morning light pierced the darkness to fall on a sluggish sea, and then from the grassgrown hills the sun popped up to pry into the activities of this adventurer and his band of hardy men. His ultimate goal was the pueblo of Los Angeles. There he hoped to come to grips with Gen. Jose Castro and seize from him control of all California.

A few half-naked Indians were fishing from their dugout canoes as Stockton sailed in dropped anchor, Stolcally the Indians watched Stockton and his 300 men disembark. As he came ashore Capt. Fremont was landing with a smaller group in San Diego. The strategy was for both forces to converge on Los Angeles and destroy what they thought to be an inferior Mexican force, All of this was being done even though the American officers had no official word that we were at war with Mexico.

TWENTY-FOUR hours later scouts reported that Gen. Castro seemed to have a garrison of 1,000 wellequipped men, On receipt of this news, Stockton foresaw a stiff struggle, called his officers together and issued orders that his ragged troops be drilled constantly in the short time they had left before battie.

On Aug. 9, a breathless sentry dashed into camp with word that two Mexican officers were approaching under a flag of truce.

"Truce, indeed!" Stockton . snorted. "Here we are hundreds of miles from assistance, once our true strength is known those Mexicans will pounce upon us and destroy

He sent some men out to intercept the Mexicans and keep them out of sight of his camp until called for Quickly he had his small force marched to the other side of one of the nearby hills. Then forming his men four abreast, with a good interval between each rank, he had them marched in a circle so that from his camp only a few of the ranks could be seen as they crossed the brow of the hill. He had only six cannon. Five of them were six-pounders and one was a thirty-two, a large gun for that day. He camouflaged his six-pounders so that they looked like 32s. After that he allowed the Mexicans to enter.

THEY WENT through the formalities, both sides deplor-ing the spilling of blood, then the Mexicans asked for a truce. Stockton declined. While all of this was going on the Mexicans could observe what appeared to be an endless column of marching over the brow of the next hill. They were also given the opportunity to gaze down the barrel of his 32-pound cannon. After the truce team left Stockton fervently hoped that they had been sufficiently impressed with what they had seen that it would sink deeply into their minds.

Two days passed and nothing happened. Then the truce team was again observed approaching. This time they in-formed Stockton that if he tried to take El Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles de Poriuncula he would be making a grave for his men. Undaunted, Stockton told them to have the bells ready to toll at 8 o'clock the next morning for he would then be coming in.

BACK IN CAMP he prepared for the assault. termined to proceed even though Fremont had not made an appearance.

He was not pounding at the city gates the next morning as he had promised, but on Aug. 13 he did move out to start the attack. Over the grasslands he marched, hindered only by a few herds of wild cattle. Sometime during the day Fremont joined up. Late in the afternoon they approached the outskirts of the city. Stockton was deter-mined to have his day. The advance was ordered. Into the town they came—taut, rifles ready, and alert to repulse the expected charge. They marched through to the plaza, and it was a town silent, hostile, and afraid.

The city was taken without a shot being fired. Castro had disbanded his men and fled toward Sonora, evidently firmly convinced that he was greatly outnumbered.

Los Angeles in 1857, much as it appeared when Commodore Stockton tricked defending Mexican forces into quitting the city although he actually was badly outnumbered.

Acanthus Has a Classic Pattern

ACANTHUS bears striking spikes of white or lilac flowers with green or purplish spiny bracts that rise several feet above the showy, tropical foliage.

The spikes of flowers are attractive even when dry, and last for some time. Some gardeners use them in dry

The ancient Greeks copied the acanthus foliage design and used it in their Corinthian columns.

Acanthus grows almost as easily as do weeds. The plants need some shade in dry, hot areas, stand sun along the coast. Many gar-deners like them for tropical effect foliage, in among taller growing shade plants, and in planter boxes where roots may be more easily confined.

Some gardeners consider them weed-like because the roots invade other garden plant areas, where later new plants pop up. Where roots are bothersome plants should be dug up, separated, long roots cut back and replanted.

GARDEN trick that works, preventing chlorine treated swimming pool water from damaging nearby ground covers, flowers or shrubs, is to dig an 18 to 24inch deep trench about 15 inches wide between pool and plantings. Fill it with walnut size stones to within three inches of the top of soil level. Fill the last section with pea size gravel, colored gravel, if

A favorite method of mine for irrigating sweet peas is to dig a furrow, fairly close and parallel to the row of sweet peas. Then put the hose at one end and let the water run slowly until the furrow is full. Thus the water seeps through to the roots of the plants.

You can also feed your sweet peas in this way. Put the sweet pea food into the furrow and let the water carry it through the soil to the roots. For some reason, giving food and water by this method has been most satis-

When you have to start spraying your sweet peas, I recommend a two-purpose spray that is both a fungicide and an insecticide, since sweet peas in our area are inclined to suffer from fungus as well as insects. And if they are attacked by soil insects, remember that you can treat the soil with a copperether soil disinfectant without injury to the little plants.

THE DOBERMAN is a manmade dog. About 1879, in the city of Apolda in central Germany, Luis Doberman had the unthankful task of being the town's dog catcher. However, he loved dogs and long wished to create what he considered an ideal dog-a giant terrier. Striving to make his dream come true, he blended the Rottweiler, the German pinscher, the black-and-tan terrior, and added a dash of old short-haired shepherd stock. The results were the regal, sleek, working Dober-man pinscher whose intelligence is almost human,

A well-bred Doberman, correctly handled and given affection, is a great dog. He is the official dog, along with the buildog, of the United States Marines.

GERMAN SHEPHERD Dog Club of Long Beach has its sanctioned match today at Recreation Park, Tenth Street and Federation Avenue; entries close at noon next Saturday at Del Webb's Kern City; Bakersfield Obedience Club will have a match from 2 to 5 p.m.; entries to close at 3 p.m.

HENRY REUSS Bird of Paradise

CONTINENTAL chefs are often very imaginative. They conjure up endless varieties of exotic names for their specialties.

Usually their descriptions are more romantic than accurate, meaning that the en-tree does not always bear a close physical resemblance to its title. There is one outstanding thef in Long Beach, however, who believes in creating dishes that look like they sound. He is Henry Reuss, new maitre chef de cuisine in the Breakwaters International Hotel's glamorous Skyroom, An excellent example of Henry's theory is an entree called Bird of Paradise, It consists of a tender squab-chicken stuffed with wild rice and served on half a pineapple with a delectable cognac sauce. By artfully adding a head made from a pineapple slice, Henry makes the dish resemble an attractive

A native of Wuerzburg, Bavaria, Henry has been in the United States nine years. He is a culinary wizard possessing two bachelor degrees in cooking from the International Trade School at Frankfurt, Germany, where he was also an instructor, At the Sky-room, now serving dinner daily and Sunday from 5 p.m. on, Henry offers such superb international favorites as lobster stuffed with crabmeat, tournadoes of beef a la Royale, coundre filet de boeuf (roast sirloin surrounded by young vegetables) and a variety of fine charcoal-broiled steaks. His continental din-ners, priced from $4.75, in-clude soup du jour and green salad, potato, fresh rolls and beverage. Other entrees start at $2.75. A new menu, featuring the above items and many more, will be in effect at the Skyroom starting this week. The Skyroom, with enchanting views of the harbor and city, is also open for break-last and function....

Mars Man--No Monster He--Arrives on

By VERNON SCOTT

OLLYWOOD (UPI)-Now they're going to put a Martian on television.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. today (Sunday) televiewers will have the opportunity to watch a citizen of Mars bounce around the screen. But they will be disappointed if they expect to see a monster with eight legs, one eye and tenta-

The title role of "My Favorite Martian" is played by a human being; an actor, in fact.

His name is Ray Walston. While he is normal in most other respects he has been en-dowed with the ability to disappear, read minds and talk to dogs.

No special makeup will be applied to Ray's friendly kisser except for a pair of antennae which sprout from his head just before he does one of his disappearing acts.

EARTHLING WALSTON, a product of the Actor's Studio in New York, likes the idea of playing a Martian.

"Our Martian is a nice guy with a marvelous Philosophy of life," the actor said during a break in filming the CBS-TV newcomer. "He has a sense of humor and a kindly attitude toward this planet,

"He is stranded on earth when his flying saucer crashes, and is befriended by a friendly newspaper man. The show gives us a chance to say something about contemporary American life that hasn't been attempted on TV before.

"As a visitor from another planet he can make some objective observations about the pace of living and values we put on things." . . .

THE SHOW WILL NOT venture into such controversies as United States-USSR foreign relations, the atom bomb or the racial situation. But Walston hopes it will have some worthwhile comments to make along with the situation comedy gags.

Perhaps because he is a method actor, Walston half-helieves in Martians and feels compelled to play Uncle Martian, as he is called in the series, as if he were for real.

"It's necessary for me to believe in this Martian in order to play him convincingly," Walston said. "If viewers don't accept him as a real being from Mars, then the whole basis of the show is ruined.

"As for myself, I lean toward the belief that there is life on other planets. It's essential that I do for this characterization."

A dedicated actor, Walston has starred on Broadway in "Summer and Smoke," "Richard the Third" and "The Rat Race," He's appeared in a handful of movies and many television shows. But this is his first series.

"One reason I accepted the show was to prove to my daughter Kate (10 years old) that outer space might be populated by something other than monsters which scare her witless, Walston concluded.

Rooney Son Meets 'Aunt Millie'

Sara Haden in 1934 began her appearances as Aunt Millie in the "Andy Hardy" movies starring Mickey Rooney.

On Wednesday she appears on 'Day in Court" at 2:30 p.m. on channel 7. Involved in the TV court case is 13-year-old Teddy Rooney, Mickey's son. Teddy is the same age Mickey was when he started the 'Andy Hardy" series.

APOLLO: A Journey to the Moon — Merrill Mueller is anchorman for an hour-long color report on the U.S. manned moon mission planned by 1970, at 10 p.m., ch. 4. The program defines the reasons behind the project, identify the people and agencies involved and describe Project Apollo. Roy Neal interviews all 16 U.S. astronauts about their roles in the mission, with Alan B. Shepard Jr. explaining a sequence of still-pictures-inmotion of artists' concepts of what will happen from blastoff to moon landing. Gordon Cooper tells of Project Gemini and how it relates to the later lunar mission. The 9 APOLLO: A Journey to the the later lunar mission. The 9 new astronauts, featured on Life's cover, are introduced,

Bert's Eye View

Imogene Coca is not one to duck an issue.

I knew I'd have to face it sooner or later," she said.

She spoke softly but with dramatic emphasis. Seated on a couch in her "Grindl" set dressing room, she leaned forward with restrained excitement.

"You see," she said, "I had the duck for eight weeks—it was a duckling when I got it for an Easter present.

"I love animals but I'm scared to death when they fight.

"I was petrified at the thought of the duck meeting my cat but I knew they would so I finally brought them together."

AT THE RECOLLECTION, Imogene's eyes widened like Eddie Cantor singing "Susie." Then she smiled.
"Well," she said, "the duck spread her wings and my cat

practically fainted.

"For the longest time my cat was really a nervous wreck.

"But he's better now. He's compensated for his fear of the duck by finding he can climb trees."

She paused, obviously very happy that the meeting of the cat and duck had not proved a catastrophe.

"OF COURSE," she said, "my grandmother had a way with animals, too.

"She used to raise cats and canaries.

"And do you know my grandmother's cats never chased

Grandmother, it seemed, had a secret. She called it her "magic-needle" approach.
"You see," said Imogene, "my grandmother always kept needles hidden around the house.

"Well, if she'd see one of her cats trying to get into a canary cage, she'd go 'plink' with her needle.
"The cats would never chase birds after that."

1 CHASED IMOGENE to a different subject, "Grindl," the NBC-TV series in which she Sunday night plays a jill-of-alltrades who encounters more perils than Pauline.
"To tell the truth," admitted Imogene, "I baven't yet watched myself on television in the new series.

But a friend of mine saw the opener,

"She called me afterwards and told me my hair looked nice." Imogene smiled with the delight of a child being presented an after-dinner lollipop.

"As a matter of fact," said Imogene, "she told me my hair never looked better."

She reached up a little self-consciously and patted her hair, then shifted her position on the couch.
"You know," she said, "when we first started shooting the series on stage 7 there were two cats there who were practically

DICK POWELL THEATRE

Reprise premiere. KCOP's
$150,000 purchase of 30 hourlong episodes of the distinguished series, honored by 7 Emmy nominations, debuts at 8 p.m., ch. 13, with "Somebody's Waiting," starring Mickey Rooney with Susan Oliver. A lonely seaman, who only irritates people by his eagerness to make friends, earns the enmity of two young punks on election day.
PERFORMING ARTS—
Britishers Michael Flanders and Donald Swann offer their witty revue, "At the Drop of a Hat," a Broadway success following its 759-performance
London run, at 9 p.m., ch. 13.
Flanders, resembling a wheelchair-confined Sebastian Cabot, delivers the patter, while the Wally Cox-like Swann performs at the piano.
FERRY COMO—Premiere.
